WOMEN WE THINK YOU SHOULD MEET

WENDY KRAFT & LAURA SUSSMAN

Wendy Kraft and Laura Sussman, owners of Kraft-Sussman Funeral Services, simply describe themselves as two middle age Moms. I sat down with them one morning and realized they are that and so much more. After filing for a business license over a year ago and going through all the red tape, they finally opened their doors this past March.

Although death is never an easy subject to talk about, sitting with these two women made me feel like I was having coffee with a best friend or a relative. Their warmth and compassion go far beyond anything you see these days. Wendy had worked for another funeral home in town when she realized that this business was more about just a funeral; it was about developing a relationship with the family. At many funeral homes, a family may end up meeting sometimes six or seven different people before it is all said and done. At Kraft-Sussman, they are there from the beginning to the end with you.

Together almost nine years, you could feel that these two were each other's Basherta (destiny). Their love and devotion to each other is contagious. They are raising three daughters together and are truly one happy family. In fact, one of their daughters has already started taking an interest in the family business. If their daughter is anything like these two wonderful ladies, we should all feel better knowing the people we love are in capable, loving hands.
