

MILLION DOLLAR DORM STILL UNFINISHED

Students Await Housing

Nevada Southern's new million dollar dormitory and dining hall, scheduled for completion on September 5, will not be available for use until at least the 19th of this month.

Exact reasons for the delay remain clouded. One dormitory official termed the setback "most regrettable", but added that "official blame" could be placed on no one person or circumstance in particular.

Meanwhile, approximately 80 students who had previously signed contracts entitling them to dormitory housing on Sept. 9th are being housed in neighboring apartment complexes.

Construction workers interviewed at the dorm site expressed doubts that the buildings would be fully completed by Oct. 1st. Many thought that the completion date would run as late as Nov. 15.

Regardless, Dr. Ben Owen, Director of Student Personnel Services, remains optimistic.

"We have been getting almost complete cooperation from students, fraternities and sororities, faculty members, and interested parties of private homes. At least three of the floors in the dormitory will be suitable for living within the coming week; after that, our problems will be greatly reduced."

Dr. Owen went on to say that students who had not registered for on-campus housing before the previous Aug. 15 deadline may do so after construction is finished.

Students who had signed contracts late last spring and early this summer have varied reactions to their plight. Said one young coed from Illinois, "It's (the dorm) a big disappointment. I hope this mess is straightened out soon."

A California transfer student, however, seemed to like the situation. "... the temporary housing is excellent and I enjoy the variety of attention which is being afforded us. They (the dorm staff) treat us royally."

Almost as important as the housing units, the food center remains incomplete. At present, students are receiving their meals from nearby restaurants.

Mr. William Bates, head of Saga Food, which is the company that has been commissioned to provide the cafeteria meals in the dining hall, states: "Whenever the federal building inspector approves the hall, Saga Food is ready to begin serving meals."

An official report concerning dormitory progress is expected to be issued soon by the Student Personnel Office.

VOL. XII, NO. 1

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1966

"This could be a long wait" -- Ed Terwillinger, California transfer student, watches patiently as construction workers near completion of dormitory project.

As I See It
by Terry Lindberg

It's a great dormitory. Of course, there are a few minor miscellaneous items which could sort of add to the general appearance of the place. Like students, for instance. Or chairs and desks and beds and tables. Where have you been Mr. Ed Pine, chief engineer for the University of Nevada? Many people here at the "Southern Regional Division" would of liked to have seen you around this summer. Maybe you forgot that the "Southern Regional Division" had a building scheduled for completion by the beginning of the fall semester?

It's still not finished, Mr. Pine. And that's an understatement! As a matter of fact, that building isn't going to be completed within a year from now unless somebody does something about their featherbedding.

Our "dormitory students" are presently living in make-shift apartment rooms, and, thanks to Dr. Ben Owen's efficient Student Personnel staff, are managing reasonably well.

So don't worry about this whole mess down at the "other campus." And tell all the guys up at the Northern Board of Regents not to worry either, because everything is just fine!

Periodically, reports come in which heighten the prevailing optimistic atmosphere on this campus. Only today a messenger arrived with a sack full of glad tidings and news, telling of the latest estimated date of dormitory completion (EDDC); October 15 ... for the first three floors ... 1968

Now it's well understood down here that it takes a lot of time to throw up a six story dormitory building. We realize that Rome wasn't built in a day; or even Butte, Montana for that matter.

And we also realize that you, Mr. Pine, and your sidekick (Clay Carpenter) are very busy men. It's tough for you guys to keep up with all of that construction on the Reno campus, not to mention our foolish dorm. After all, we've

Play Tryouts September 20-21

Dr. Paul Harris, director of the School of Humanities and Fine Arts has announced that tryouts for the Fall drama production Glass Menagerie, by Tennessee Williams, will be held next week.

Persons interested in trying out for the production are urged to familiarize themselves with the play, which is on reserve in the University library.

Tryouts begin September 20th at 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. and will also be held on September 21 at the same times.

Ninth Annual Rebel Roast Slated

It'll be off to Lake Mead for an expected 500 N.S.U. collegians tomorrow when CSNS sponsors the 9th Annual Rebel Roast, the traditional fall pre-class beach extravaganza. The event has always been a strongly-supported post-summer event, and will be held at Vegas Wash from 12 noon to 7 p.m. or later.

The 1966 Rebel Roast has been billed as a picnic-barbeque affair. There will be no food or refreshments served by CSNS this year. However, barbeque pits will be going for student use, and near sundown discoteque music will be provided for dancing at the central picnic area at the Wash.

Enrollment Soars;

Students Prepare for Registration

Officials of the Registrar's office are preparing to gear down for today's opening of student registration. Enrollment is expected to exceed a record 3,000 students, including 800 freshmen.

Registration procedure will be somewhat changed from previous years. Students, instead of receiving authorization to attend class in the central gymnasium area, will have to journey across campus to the various schools sub-heading the subject which the student desires, e.g. Psychology 101 under the School of Social Sciences, located in the Social Science Building.

Mr. Herbert Wells, chairman of the committee which initiated the change in registration procedure, listed more efficiency and less confusion as the prime factors involved in influencing the committee to adopt the new method of registering classes:

"We (the committee) feel that the change will eliminate, to a great extent, the registration day turmoil which has previously been faced by both faculty and students. The new procedure is comparable to the one used by nearly every major college campus in the nation. If the students will read the instructions--there should be no major problem."

The Registrar's office is emphasizing to students the importance of official University sanction in all phases of Registration.

"Any student who does not comply with proper registration procedure will face the probability of failing the subject or subjects in question," according to Miss Muriel Parks, Registrar. "If a student is unsure of any phase in his registration, please contact the proper official immediately."

REBELLION by Chuck Crawford

INSIDE THE OUTSIDE

Many Southern Nevadans are anxious to see the consequences of the re-apportioned Nevada Assembly. Several local newsmen speculate that the added representation of Clark County may not bring immediate benefits to Nevada Southern.

KORK radio news director Daryl Dryer says that the confusing ballot put before voters on September 6th may have resulted in the selection of run-off candidates on the basis of impulse and popularity rather than on merits.

Nonetheless, District 4's nine representatives will probably be headed by two well-known local crusaders who romped to Democratic Primary victories. Flora Dungan and Gerry Tyson. Both women have a good record of service to the University, especially Flora Dungan.

REGRETS: Juanita White coming out on top once again in the primary for the University Board of Regents. Maybe, though, she will be whistling a different tune after the stiff competition she received this summer and won't be quite so passive any longer.

SPECIAL REGRETS: That Nevada voters aren't too intelligent. Evidence for this remark is that Walter Baring was re-nominated. Baring, who is fondly regarded by names such as "good ol' Walt", "Mr. Anti-Everything" and "Absentee King" of the House of Representatives, wrapped himself in an American flag and campaigned incognito again before Northern Nevada voters. The result: Nevada voters will get two more years of what they deserve. Maybe after fourteen years of boycotting education, Mr. Baring will visit this campus to see what modern education is doing without his help.

STUDIES IN STUDENTS

Student Government under the new face of the "Abell Era" has changed the style of student activities considerably. In fact, there is a chance that this change is a little hasty and somewhat pre-mature.

The creation of the Inter-Fraternal Council, for instance, is a good example of the new "big school look". It's a great idea that has been tried before without what might be called, smashing success. The reason for this failure in the past has been the small number of groups with common interests.

The assumption that led to its re-creation this year is that Greek organizations will remain cohesive. This is fine and dandy except for intermittent power struggles for control of the Council.

HOWEVER, Abell and his proteges have added one innovation to this old idea that may create a purpose for the IFC. This being the central coordination of events sponsored by the various fraternal organizations through the IFC.

The other obvious feature of the change to the "big school" look is the publishing of the REBEL YELL each week. As last year's editor (who published only every other week) I offer my condolences to the new editor Terry Lindberg.

Boob on the Brink

by Larry Clark

"Look up in the sky!"

"It's Chaucer!"

"It's Poe!"

"No, it's Super Columnist!"

Disguised as a mild-mannered degenerate stands Larry Clark, who in actuality is the super-hero demigod writer for the REBEL YELL, which is noted for the active part it plays in the lining of garbage cans, bird cages, and the house breaking of puppies.

Without Larry, the school's scandal sheet would be nothing. Of course, with him it's less than nothing.

He has rased the "YELL" to a new low. He has changed it from the depths of mediocrity, to the heights of depravity. "His Worship", I mean Larry, has given this tabloid something few college papers have -- enemies.

In the true American spirit he has shown no prejudice in whom he slanders. He has displayed a non-biased hatred for all.

Though there have been five attempts made upon his life (three by the Editor), attacks by a gang of rowdy Dominican Nuns, and threats from the committee for non-violence, he has stayed by his post not only because he wished to expose injustice, but mainly, because he has been chained to his desk.

And because of his literary efforts, the paper has achieved a reputation as being a good substitute for toilet paper.

So here comes another year of the "Boob on the Brink" (and more law suits). With his trusty staff of mental defectives, he will bring you the worst in newspaper writing.

As I See It (from page 1)

gotten along without them this long. What difference is a couple of more days or weeks or months going to make?

So as soon as things slack off in Reno, why not drop around the Las Vegas campus? Don't worry about accommodations--we'll put you up in our new dorm!

Ed. Note: Each week a copy of the REBEL YELL is sent personally to the following: Board of Regents, Reno; Gov. Grant Sawyer; THE SAGEBRUSH, Univ. of Nevada Student Newspaper; and the Univ. of Nevada Engineer, Mr. Ed Pine.

Central Calendar Initiated

Because of the immense increase in University events, CSNS and the Office of Student Personnel Services have instituted a centralized system for events coordination.

The Office of Student Personnel Services, through its new counsellor, Miss Smith, will be the central events co-ordinated point, the UNIVERSITY CALENDAR located in Frazier Hall.

Any student group or University function must be screened through the activities office at Student Personnel Services. All groups seeking permission to sponsor individual events must apply there. Room requisitions are also available at Student Personnel Services.

The main calendar in Frazier Hall will also feature all CSNS Events. However, direct information on student government-sponsored activities must be obtained from the office of the CSNS Special Events Co-Ordinator in Grant Hall, Room 218.

A similar system of activities management will be initiated in the N.S.U. Student Union next year.

Business Manager Position Filled

A CSNS spokesman has officially announced the creation of a Business Manager position for CSNS. The new position will combine advisory and auditory duties, and has been filled by Mr. Reuben Neumann, C.P.A., of the School of Business at N.S.U.

The new position was necessitated by the growth in the student government financial structure at N.S.U. According to CSNS, the new Business Manager will receive an annual salary of $2,251.

The Business Manager will act as a director of all CSNS financial arrangements, CSNS Auditor, student government business advisor, and will work in concert with the CSNS President and Treasurer on the management of CSNS Financial Affairs.

Financial Advisory Board Formed

Student Body President, Jack Abell, recently announced the establishment of a CSNS-University Administration Financial Advisory Board. According to Abell, the new board will act only as an advisory agent to the CSNS President and Senate, meeting in the case of student-initiated debate over a desired or planned expenditure by the Senate or President of CSNS.

"The Financial Advisory Board," said Abell, "was formed this summer in order to bring the Chancellor and University Administration into contact with the financial aspects of the student government. It carries no veto over action of the CSNS President or Senate, but because of its familiarity with the University, the board will be able to 'recommend with authority.'"

The Financial Advisory Board, which must be incorporated into the CSNS Constitution, will consist of the CSNS President, the Chancellor, the Dean of Faculty, the Dean of Student Services, the University Business Manager, the CSNS Business Manager, and the CSNS Treasurer.

NSU Joins Southwest Regional Laboratory For Educational Research and Development

Nevada Southern University has joined in a massive three-state attack on Southwestern educational problems, it was announced today.

The University is one of seven signatories to a joint powers agreement establishing the Southwest Regional Laboratory for Educational Research and Development, which, according to a University spokesman, is designed to deal with regional educational problems caused by rapidly increasing population, high mobility, and disadvantaged ethnic groups.

The Laboratory, according to its Director, Dr. Richard E. Schutz, will attempt to help educators overcome such problems by developing research-based materials and procedures that can be put to use in the region's schools.

He said the Southwest region--which includes 13 southern California counties, the entire state of Arizona and Clark County, Nevada--has unique resources at its disposal to aid the fight for better education.

"Many of the same minds and procedures that have helped the United States in its conquest of space can be applied to achieve down-to-earth improvements in education," Dr. Schutz said.

Dr. Schutz, a former professor of educational psychology at Arizona State University, says he is confident that educators and scientists together can come up with practical solutions to educational problems.

"We at the Southwest Laboratory

(SWRL) believe that many students' educational difficulties stem from their failure to master fundamental skills at the earliest grade levels," he said.

Students who have problems mastering such basic skills as reading and writing are in for "double trouble" in the Southwestern area, said the Director. Overcrowded classrooms resulting from the area's rapidly increasing population keep teachers from helping "problem-learners" he explained.

The problem takes on a new dimension, Schutz said, if the "problem-learner" comes from a culturally - disadvantaged home, especially one in which English is not spoken.

One of the Laboratory's first projects will be to develop a program which would help a student learn fundamental skills irrespective of his pre-school cultural experiences.

SWRL's "Operation Equal Start" is already in progress this summer. In one phase of the operation, 12 teachers selected from a region-wide competition are attempting to systematize an elementary school "reading-writing" program. In another phase, a team of educational researchers, headed by UCLA education professor Evan Keislar, are attempting to devise a program to help school children learn "Generalized" problem-solving skills.

Work in both phases has just begun, but already project-members are expressing cautious optimism. The tools of their work are a subtle blend of computers and children's toys.

The Laboratory, which is funded by the United States Office of Education under provision of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, expects to develop products that teachers will be able to put to use in the classroom. "But," Dr. Schutz cautioned, "we'll release no product until it has been proven by rigorous research."

Other signatories to the joint powers agreement which established the Laboratory are the Board of Regents of the Universities and State College of Arizona, the Arizona State Board of Education, the Trustees of the California State Colleges, the Board of Regents of the University of California, the California State Board of Education, and the Nevada State Board of Education.

NSU Centennial Tree Succumbs

Last year, CSNS leaders were reportedly in disagreement over what specie of tree to buy and plant between Grant Hall and Frazier Hall as a Centennial Monument. Today, all agree that the tree is dead!

Apparently the shrub died during the summer months. Most students failed to even notice its significance for the campus. Its only use during the past year was as a lighted Christmas display. CSNS planted it with less pomp than the daily opening of its Executive Office. Apparently, it was a target of poor treatment too, bearing the scar of some gardener's carelessness on its trunk.

Will CSNS wait another hundred years to replant it? According to CSNS spokesmen, no. A new tree is to be planted soon. And the significance of the plant? It is to be formally expressed.

YEARBOOK HANDOUT

The office of the EPILOGUE has announced that those CSNS members who failed to receive their 1966 yearbook may pick up a copy of the annual starting on Monday, September 19, and continuing through Monday, October 3. There will be a table open in the Library foyer to serve the students.

Lani Trunkey, EPILOGUE editor, emphasized that there will be only TWO WEEKS to claim last year's annuals.
