

'DON JUAN IN HELL'

"Don Juan in Hell," the masterful dialogue written by George Bernard Shaw, will be presented May 15, 16, and 17th. by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, Reader's Theatre.

The dramatic production will be staged at 8:15 p.m. each evening in the Grant Hall Little Theatre. Tickets, priced at $1.00 for students and $1.50 for all others, may be reserved by telephoning the College of Fine Arts, 736-6111, Ext. 207. Dr. Paul Harris, Dean of the College of Fine Arts and Director of the presentation, urged that tickets be purchased early, since the theater seats only 100 persons.

"Don Juan" is a dream sequence from the third act of Shaw's play "Man and Superman", consisting of a discussion on the many aspects of life and human progress.

The four principal characters are Don Juan, The Devil, Dona Ana, and The Commander. They are portrayed, respectively, by Dr. Jerry Crawford, Chairman of the Department of Speech and Theatre Arts; Dr. Paul C. Harris, Dean of the College of Fine Arts; JoAnne Meswarb, Technical Director of the Reader's Theatre production; and Las Vegas resident James Wilson.

The rhetorical dialogue, which stands alone in English dramatic literature, concentrates on religion, war, politics, Heaven, and Hell.

The recitations include a serio-comic debate between Don Juan and the Devil on the topics of love, life, and the eternal question of which of the two sexes is superior.

The dialogue's actors bring a total of 90 years combined experience to the stage.

Harris has been acting since 1941 in such plays as "See How They Run," "Three Men on a Horse," "The Time of Your Life," and in Shakespeare's "Henry IV," "The Tempest," and "Much Ado About Nothing".

Crawford has played some two dozen major roles, including the lead in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman", and such classics as "Twelfth Night", and "The Taming of the Shrew". He has also appeared on ABC-TV's "Day in Court" series.

A choreographer and actress, Mrs. Meswarb is pursuing doctoral work at the University of California at Los Angeles in addition to her work at U.N.L.V. She has performed in many plays, including "AS You Like It", "The Skin of our Teeth", and "Ah, Wilderness".

Wilson has been active in the theatre since 1927 and has acted in about 50 productions with colleges and little theatre groups in the West.

Phi Kappa Phi Initiates 19 New Members

National honor society Phi Kappa Phi formally initiated 19 students and one faculty member from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas in ceremonies yesterday at the Desert Inn Country Club.

Featured speaker at the 12:15 p.m. luncheon was Dr. J. Kenneth Munford, national president of the honor group and professor of higher education at Oregon State University.

Munford, who also serves as director of publications and the university press at O.S.U., spoke about "New Dimensions in Phi Kappa Phi."

The educator, who earned his B.A. degree from Oregon State College and Ed. D. from Stanford, has served as national president of Phi Kappa Phi since its convention last September in Baton Rouge, La.

The society's members represent scholars who are academically among the highest 10 per cent of their classes. Among other requirements, graduates must earn a minimum 3.7 grade average for membership; seniors need a four-year average of 3.2 or better; and juniors require a 3.5 average. A 4.0 average represents straight "A's."

BIBLE AND CANNON SPEAK ON FEDERAL FUNDS

Some 275 students will benefit from $130,000 in college work-study funds earmarked for both campuses of the University of Nevada in the final six months of 1969, Senators Alan Bible and Howard Cannon recently announced.

The program, administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, provides on-campus employment for university students.

Bible and Cannon said the University's Reno campus will receive $72,474 to provide salaries for 149 working students. The Las Vegas campus will receive $57,526 for 126 students, which means that the Reno campus will receive approximately $30.00 more per student.

The federal award represents 80% of the students payrolls, and the remaining 20% is paid by the University.

Dr. Munford- Phi Kappa Phi President

The faculty member inducted into the society was Dr. Bert B. Babero, professor of zoology at U.N.L.V. Graduate students were Ramona Gustin and Freda Klein.

Seniors were Barbara J. Burgwardt, Diane D. Cayce, Patricia V. Darnold, Merlynn A. Esplin, Judith C. Hanlen, Peggy S. Hutton, Margaret J. Johnson, Phillip Lioliadis, Patrick J. Moreo, Lawrence S. Payne, David G. Stibor and Linda L. Wright.

The juniors were John W. Bell, Janice M. Fallman, Daniel R. Heinrich, Janice R. Reid and

The Epilogue will be coming out in the middle of the summer. Any student who has taken at least 12 credit hours both semesters and will not be here during the summer may leave his name and address at the Epilogue office, room 116 in the dorm, and it will be sent free of charge.

Editors' note: In last week's issue, two errors were made in the list of winners of C.S.U.N. elections. Dan Pitts was also elected to the Union Board, and Crest number 1 won, not crest number 4.

What the Regents have to say . . . . .

On Wednesday, May 7th., a meeting was held in U.N.L.V. President Zorn's office between the Board of Regents Sub-Committee on Student Affairs and interested students and faculty of U.N.L.V.

The main purpose of the meeting was to discuss the controversial dormitory issue.

The meeting was directed by C.S.U.N. President Bill Terry and Sub-Committee Chairman Dick Ronzone, in a joint effort to restrict the subject matter to the dorm issue. They did quite a job, too.

Among the issues discussed, three items stood out as being the heart of the matter.

The first of these issues is the rule that requires all students who are under 21, and not living with a parent or guardian, to live in Tonopah Hall. The main purpose of this rule, as defined by the Regents, is to make sure that the dorm is full, or at least 90% full.

In keeping with the sense of humor that prevailed throughout the meeting, the Regents were asked if this rule also applies to married couples who are under 21. Amidst the laughter and chuckles, an answer did arise. This answer, which was taken as a joke by all those present, was "Yes, but they can have visitation rights".

The formal, or should I say informal conclusion of the body was that as long as the dorm can be filled without this rule, the rule won't be enforced. However, due to the red tape required to legally remove the rule, it will stay on the books.

The second main issue revolved around the legality of the rule that was set up by the dorm students as to hours. Currently, hours for dorm residents are 12 o'clock on weekdays, and 2:30 a.m. on weekends. The hours are also subject to bend when special events, such as the recent Cotillion, occur.

Extension privileges are also available, but they require written parental approval, and are good for only 1 year. Extension rights allow the students to stay out till 5 a.m.

The third issue was that of visitation rights. As it now stands, girls are allowed on the male floors from 8 o'clock to 1 o'clock on Fridays and Saturdays. Apparently, this rule was set up by the dormitory students also. Therefore, it was concluded that they have the right to change it.

As it turned out, the only rules that were actually set down by the Regents are the 21 rule, the rule that prohibits gambling, and the rule that prohibits drinking.

Therefore, it doesn't seem like there is any real controversy, except for the 21 rule.

However, the Regents have invited any interested students to go through the proper channels in order to set up a meeting to discuss any issues that would warrant such a meeting.

So, for those of you who are interested, that is what the Regents have to say. As to what changes do occur, that is up to the students...

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

At this time I would like to express my gratitude to all my supporters who devoted their energies into my campaign for Second Vice-President of C.S.U.N. Without their help my election could not have been possible.

I also congratulate Bob Jasper who conducted his campaign in an utmost manner. This, to me, displays Bob's high character to the entire student body. I hope that Bob's commitment to political awareness in student government will not cease because Bob's abilities and ideas should not go wasted.

Lastly, as the Second Vice-President elect, I believe that channels of communication between elected representatives and their constituents must remain open at all times. Placing your trust in me to represent the entire student body assures you that there will always be one door open to each individual student. My door shall remain open regardless of pressure from outside factions who would seek to discriminate against certain groups on campus.

My pledge to each student is that each and every individual who seeks communication with me shall be given the opportunity to express his thoughts with respect and impartiality.

Sincerely,
 RENE ARCENEUX

Dear Terry,

Bill Russell: The Man and the Image

By Dominic Clark
R-Y Sports Editor

My main man is here! The brawn and brain of the World Champion Boston Celtics, player-coach Bill Russell will enchant U.N.L.V. faculty, students, and the local community when he visits our humble campus tonight to do his other thing.

Everyone knows his main bag is basketball, but this evening he will entertain guests to the tune of metaphors, similes, plain old yarns, and some mighty strong personal convictions.

Speaking to what should be a S.R.O. crowd in the Student Union Ballroom, the pillar of strength of the National Basketball Association will discuss many topics relevant to his audience. Russell is very active in world affairs, dealing largely with youth and methods of bridging the racial gap.

Now, what about the man? To many people he is nothing more than a highly-skilled performing animal. But beneath that 6-9-, 220 lb. facade there is a deeply concerned and thinking man, involved both on and off the court.

One good way to find out about a person is to visit his home. The trophies are downstairs. The room is dark and dusty and, unlike most athletes' trophy rooms, apparently little used. Russell says that he would one day like to turn the floor space into a complete electric train system for his children, and himself. He'd clear out everything for that, including the trophies. And what trophies he has! They commemorate one of the most remarkable records in sports: 15 years of play at the pinnacle of basketball—two years leading the University of San Francisco to the National Championship and then 13 years with the Celtics, leading them to two second-place finishes and 11 World Championships.

Upstairs the house is always lively. His wife, Rose, and the children are there: Jacob, Kenyatta, and Buddha, named after Russell's heroes in history. A dog is underfoot: Patches, a boxer, nervous perhaps because Russell dislikes him, (he tracks in asthma, Russell says), and whose long legs Bill threatens to break. The living room is tasteful—a grand piano, a mobile hanging from the ceiling, African artifacts, (spears and masks on the wall), peacock plumes in a vase, and a ceiling-high bookcase crowded with volumes, many by Negro leaders and athletes.

Russell is the most unique player in the N.B.A. today. He not only has the tremendous obligation of performing superiorly, but he must also guide the Celtics as their coach, confidant, and advisor.

Bill says the reason he can still control a basketball game for long periods of time at 35 is because of his ability to concentrate.

"Nobody, except me, knows my capacity for concentration," Russell said. "That's why it's silly when people say I can't possibly coach and play at the same time and do a good job at both things. Look, I'm human. I'm not going to stand here and tell you I can do two things at the same time.

"But I can shift my concentration from one thing to another very quickly," Bill continued. "When the game is on, I'm actually thinking mostly about myself and what I'm supposed to be doing. I'm just a player then.

"But pretty soon there is a time-out, or somebody is going to the foul line for two free throws, and then I'm a coach. I think about who I have on the floor and who I have on the bench, and I plan what I'm going to do next. It's no big deal. Well, maybe it is if you can't concentrate. But that's one of the things I do best."

When it comes to playoffs, and Russell is quite an authority on the subject, he plays for pride, not money.

"If you ever hear anybody say I'm in the playoffs for money, they're wrong," Russell said. "Believe me, money has nothing to do with it. During the regular season, I have one of the biggest salaries, (about $150,000), in sports. I would not play one exhibition game for all the money I get in the playoffs, because it isn't that much.

"What's another seven or eight thousand dollars a year to a guy like me? I'll tell you what it is—it's nothing, something you give to Uncle Sam. I get up for the playoffs because I like being part of a World Championship team. I always want to win one more time. I like the taste."

One big insight into the type of person he is deals with his trophies. Bill speaks nary a word to his children or freinds about his mountainous heap of awards. But there is one of which he truly feels thankful for receiving. That is of course the Sportsman of the Year Award that he earned in 1968. The way he puts it, "This honor recognizes me as a man, not merely a circus animal."

In closing, the words of Celtic team mate John Havlicek describe the type of athlete he is. "He's a fantastic athlete. He could have been the decathlon champion. He could broad-jump 24 feet. He did the hurdles in 13.4. I've seen him in plays on a basketball court when he not only blocks a shot but controls the ball and feeds it to his forwards, and then he's up at the other end of the court trailing the fast break and if there's a rebound there he is, ready for it. He just might be the fastest man on the Celtics. Two years ago in the playoffs Archie Clark of the Lakers stole the ball three times and he must have had five steps on Russell and a free lane to the basket. Each time Russell caught him and blocked the shot. Think of that. Think of being on the other team. There's got to be a funny feeling, going for a basket when Russell's around."

Now that you know a little about the person as a performer and a man, you can't miss sharing thoughts with him tonight at 8 p.m.

DESERT RESEARCH INSTITUTE

How many students know that U.N.L.V. has its own museum? Across the street from the University at 4624 Maryland Parkway is the University Museum. It has taken much work, and the realization of personal dreams to bring it into existence. The chance to grow and expand, to broaden the range of exhibits, and the possible curtailment of the museum program is threatened.

The museum houses archaeological, historical, geological, and natural history materials from the Southern Nevada area. The museum is supported in part by the Desert Research Institute and U.N.L.V. Not only is this type of existence precarious, but it does not allow for much expansion under the current financial programs. To insure the permanence of the museum, and to allow for expansion and increased personnel, a museum budget for the 1969-70 biennium was included as part of the University budget. Unfortunately, the museum allocation was not approved.

This might have been a chance for Southern Nevada to have a permanent museum to house the rich material from the pre-historic and historic cultures that existed in this area. With the rapid growth of U.N.L.V. and the cultural wealth of the nearby desert, a project of this nature should definitely have full consideration.

The Director of the University Museum is Richard H. Brooks, Assistant Research professor of Anthropology at U.N.L.V., and in charge of the Nevada Archaeological Survey of the Desert Research Institute. Professor Brooks received his B.A. in Anthropology from San Francisco State College in 1952, and his M.A. at the University of California at Berkley in 1962. He is currently defending his Doctoral Thesis at the University of Colorado.

At present, the museum staff consists of Professor Brooks and a part time student cataloguer, who try to keep the museum open from 9:00 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday. All students, faculty, and oth interested people are invited to stop in. Other hours can be arranged by special appointment.

New exhibits are continuously being prepared. Those now on display include several tanks of indigenous fish, geological specimens, diagrams of the mines at Tonopah showin the tunnels and workings of the mine, and minerals natural to this area. Also on exhibit are collections of Archaeological materials from local sites that have been donated by many public spirited Southern Nevada residents. Ethnological materials from Southern Nevada, Mexico, Alaska, Austrailia, Africa, and Asia have been donated or loaned to the museum by members of the U.N.L.V. faculty and student body. The Nevada Archaeological Survey staff of the D.R.I. and the Archeo-Nevada Society, as well as the students and faculty of U.N.L.V., have catalogued and prepared the collections.

Some of the projects sponsored by the museum include tours of the museum with lectures for school children and other interested groups, filed trip courses for the Archeo-Nevada Society, the providing of speakers for local groups, co-operating with and assisting the Bureau of Land Management and the Park Service in the locating of and preservation of local archaeological sites.

The museum has obtained 38 old display cases from the Historical Society of Nevada in Reno. With these cases they have set up exhibits around the University, in the public schools, and in various public areas to acquaint the community with the materials found in our community.

Beginning July 1, 1969, the museum will have a full time cataloguer, and a part time preparator, supported by a Title I grant. This grant may be extended through June 30, 1971, by which time either the D.R.I. or U.N.L.V. will be expected to assume the responsibilities for these positions and salaries.

The preparator will be Mrs. Elizabeth Warren, wife of Dr. Claude Warren who is joining the Anthropology faculty of U.N.L.V. next fall as an Associate Professor of Anthropology. Mrs. Warren is also an anthropologist, and through her position of preparator she will be able to expand the museum's services to the University and the community.

The position of cataloguer will be shared among several U.N.L.V. students, most of whom are Anthropology majors.

U.N.L.V. Hotelman's Association

The University Hotelmen's Association met with three strip hotel accounting executives on Friday, May 2. Mr. Frank Watts, comptroller, and Mr. Jim DeMarais, chief accountant, both of the Riviera, and Mr. Leo Lewis, comptroller of the Horseshoe Club, held a very frank and open round-table discussion with the students. Subjects ranging from the opportunities for Hotel Administration graduates in accounting to the age of the computer were vibrantly discussed.

This was just one of the many functions such as pre-opening tour of Circus-Circus, Budweiser Beer seminar, first annual Hotel-Airlines seminar at the Sahara, and presentation of interesting speakers, which the Hotelmen's Association has sponsored. A highlight of the year was the reception of our National Hotel Sales Management Association chapter charter, affording students many valuable, professional contacts.

The Nevada Resort Association will sponsor an awards and appreciation banquet today at the Desert Inn with Hotel Administration graduating seniors and strip management invited. This will be the first of what is hoped to be an annual event.

As a wind-up for the semester, Hotelmen's Association members will attend a wine-tasting seminar tonight at 7:30 in the Las Vegas Ice Palace, and will elect officers for next semester at the same time.

Grateful thanks go to Professor Jerry Vallen, Mr. Boyce Phillips and the rest of the hotel faculty for the invaluable assistance given the Association in this, its first year.

Murder Being Investigated

It might have been elementary for Sherlock Holmes. And Mr. Chan never seemed to get very excited about it, either.

But unraveling the elusive details of a murder mystery is strenuous duty for students in the law enforcement program at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Twenty-two students are currently enrolled in a police techniques course at U.N.L.V. designed to teach them the basic principles of criminal investigation.

As part of the classwork, they are assigned the job of solving from scratch a simulated crime from evidence and clues planted at the scene.

Ivan Polk, director of the program, explained that the exercise in detective work gives his students an opportunity to put into practice some of the theories of police science which are taught in the classroom.

As props for his make-believe mystery, Polk uses a life-size dummy complete with bullet wound; a 38-caliber revolver placed strategically near the "body"; a phony suicide note; gin bottles filled with water; plus a sprinkling of other clues to either help his students or throw them off the track completely. The crime scene is Room 105 in Tonopah residence hall.

"This may look like fun and games, and it is," Polk commented, "because here mistakes can be made that won't allow a suspect to go undetected."

"In real life, however, criminal investigation is serious business. A mistake or two won't merely result in a failing grade, but may permit someone to continue his criminal career."

Students who conduct the investigation properly begin by interviewing the person who discovered the body. Next, they take a thorough survey of the actual crime scene, visually locating those items which are pertinent to the investigation.

The students then make a systematic search of the room, dusting for fingerprints, drawing sketches, taking photographs, notes and collecting any evidence of value.

The fingerprints, extracted through dusting or exposing surfaces to iodine fumes, are enlarged in photographs and compared with the fingerprint cards of known "suspects". The students develop and print their own pictures in a dark-room on the campus.

Polk said the students are also expected to take note of any evidence which would need further examination in a laboratory, such as chemical analysis of fluids, X-ray diffraction of fibers, or analysis of blood traces on bullets.

"Memorizing how the television detectives operate would only cause our students to make mistakes," Polk stated. "For example, if a revolver were picked up with a handkerchief, nearly all of the fingerprints would be erased."

After completing the investigation, the students submit a full report with photographs describing who they believe the culprit to be and why they arrived at their conclusions.

Polk said that his students are either planning careers in law enforcement or are already members of the local police force.

"Of course, they are simply getting started in this line of work and are far from being full-trained investigators," Polk said. "This exercise just gives them a sample of the skills they will have to develop later on the job."

LIBERTIES

by Sal Gugino

I found this old editorial in a museum of British-American history which my grandfather used to own. It was old and dusty, so I figured that it was authentic. It was dated 1775.

"The Colonial radicals are at it again. The preceding months were bad enough, with such actions as that dreadful tea party in Boston and various protests against the Stamp Act. But the situation has grown entirely out of hand with the confrontation at Concorde.

These so-called 'Minutemen' who have chosen to threaten the lives of all Colonists by arming themselves and preaching revolution staged a 'bridge-in' to protest what they refer to as the 'establishment'.

Now I have to admit that some of their demands are legitimate. They truly have been wronged, but that is no need to take to guns and open protest. I am sure that if they went to the British government again that they won't be refused their rights like they were the first time.

The people should be cautioned against what could happen in the near future. All those who associate with such radical proponents as Washington, Franklin, Adams, and the rest should fully realize that their motives are not entirely beneficial. We have the best government that mankind has ever devised. It would be a tragedy to upset the boat for the promise of a new type of government where "all men are created equal". Such statements as that ring of anarchy. Cries of 'liberty or death!' can only bring trouble.

I trust that the good-thinking Colonists will not get involved in the controversy. If we work with the system, we can solve all our problems. I am sure that the King will listen to every legitimate demand. But we must give him time. Years of time if necessary.

The radicals are way out of line. The liberties they speak of are already here. Do not accept their drive that the British soldiers are here to run your lives. They will only remain in your homes until you are assured of your safety in the streets.

JOHN CASSAVETES'
FACES

“The film was included on the program of a film festival organized under the auspices of the Tennessee Arts Commission. A strangely heterogeneous audience—high school and college kids, housewives, businessmen, secretaries, academic types, and a smattering of beards and love beads—had endured two exhausting days of seminars, panel discussions and screenings by the time FACES was to be shown.

FACES—and I say this calmly as I can—is a beautiful film. It is a unique film. I have never responded, I have never seen an audience respond as we did that night. The faces that we saw were our own.

The film is the acting, and the players in FACES, all of them—John Marley, Gena Rowlands, Lynn Carlin, Seymour Cassel, and the others—simply gave, were allowed to give, the performance of their lives.”

Rebel Tracksters Shatter Records

Turning in by far its "most outstanding" performances of its brief history, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas track and field squad smashed two meet and stadium records during the Riverside Relays Saturday:

The mile relay team of Eugene Kendrick, Bill Spencer, Bill Jones, and Gary Elam clocked 3:20.8 for a record-setting show and captured first place in the seeded bracket, competing against 23 other schools.

Also in the seed class, Jones broke another stadium record by flying over the 440 intermediate hurdles in 53.5 to finish first.

The meet was broken down into 5 categories of "seeded", "rated one", "rated two", "rated three", and "rated four".

The Rebels captured one other first place as Pete Gross leaped 20 feet-ten inches to take the long jump in the "rated three" division, but U.N.L.V. still walked away with three school records of its own.

In addition to the two meet records, which were also U.N.L.V. bests, the Rebels picked up a school record in the 880 as Elam raced to a second place in the "rated one" class in 1:55.2 Elam dueled to the wire with Roy Spece of Long Beach State, who won the event in 1:54.7.

Doug Clarke earned a school record when he came in second in the "rated two" mile with a time of 4:36. The other U.N.L.V. mark was set by Kendricks, who clocked at 14.7 to finish fourth in the "seeded" class of the 120 high hurdles. Tyrone Dutton of Southern California won the event in 14.1 Running with Kendricks were three from U.S.C. and two from U.C.L.A.

Spencer won his heat in the "rated two" class with a 22.8 in the 220, while Nat Hawkins finished fourth in the "rated four" 220 with 24 flat. Hawkins turned around and collected a second place in the 110-yard dash in the "rated four" class with 10.4.

The Rebel 440 relay team of Spencer, Jones, Joe Baccari, and Kendrick finished third in the "rated one" with a 43.5, and John Morgan took a third in the "rated two" shot put with a heave of 40-10.

The mile relay performance was the best time of the day, as the host University of California, Riverside, finished second with 3:22.5.

U.N.L.V. coach Bill Scoble said it was the "most outstanding we have done all year," as the Rebels went away with 18 trophies.

Football Awards Banquet

The U.N.L.V. Rebel football team belatedly held their first annual awards banquet last week at Paradise Spa. The big award of the evening, the Most Valuable Player, went to the Rebels only graduating senior, Bill Casey. From his quarterback position last season Casey led the team in both total yardage and yardage gained passing as he directed the Rebels to an 8-1 seasons log.

Also presented at the banquet were plaques for the outstanding player in each of the previous fall's games. The winners were: Mark Larson, St. Mary's College; Steve Buzick, Azusa-Pacific; Jim Thompson, University of San Francisco; Steve Buzick, Westminster; Bill Casey, Southern Colorado State; Mack Gilchrist, Cal Tech; Larry Hodges, C.S.U.; Ron Nix, University of California, San Diego; David Bittel, Cal Lutheran.

Four additional awards were given to recognize the most inspirational ball players during spring practice. The recipients were selected from among the offensive line and Michael Forch from the defensive line. The offensive backs chose Jim Thompson, while the defensive backs picked Rich Logan.

Sports Information Director Steu Betterton also used the occasion to announce that two of the Rebel footballers had been selected to represent U.N.L.V. among the Outstanding College Athletes of America.

The evening ended on an optimistic note as Coach Bill Ireland expressed his satisfaction with the spring practice sessions. He also expressed the feeling that the 1969 Rebels would acquit themselves very well against the stiff competition provided by next season's schedule.

REBEL NINE SPLITS DOUBLE BILL

Westmont College of Santa Barbara, California, and U.N.L.V.'s Rebel baseballers split a double-bill here last Saturday.

The visitors captured the first game 5-1, but the locals came back to win the second one 2-0. In Southern California Athletic Conference competition, the Rebels finished with a 5-7 record, one game better than the 4-8 loop mark posted by the California team.

Five Rebel errors and wildness on the part of starter Jeff Dick put the Rebels in the hole in the opener, and they were never able to recover.

Dick walked six men during one and two-thirds innings on the mound, and was charged with the loss, his fourth of the season.

Taking advantage of the lefty's wildness, the invaders put together three walks and a pair of errors, to chase across two runs in the second inning.

They added another in the third on a double by Paul Cornwall and an outfield error, and plated their final tally in the sixth on a single by John Stankey and two more costly errors.

The lone Rebel run came in the second when Fred Demick singled, raced to second on a wild pitch, to third on a single by Russ Farrell and scored as Rich Gonzales gained life on a fielders choice.

John Lundquist hurled his best game of the year in making up his fourth victory of the season, and completely stifled the Westmont nine in the nightcap. He fanned six stickers and walked one in hurling the two-hit shutout.

Demick started the Rebels towards their first run of the second contest, which would have been sufficient the way Lundquist was throwing, with a single. He raced to second as Rich Gonzales grounded a single to center with two down. George Peraza was nicked by a Todd Rush fast ball loading the bases. Demick then scored as Bobby Medrano bobbled Lundquist's bounder for an error.

The final Rebel run came in the fifth. Chris Zockroll worked Rush for free transportation. He was sacrificed to second by Harry Karn and walked home as Travis Bonneville boomed a long triple to left center.

In marking up the win, Lundquist received 10 batters in a row and didn't allow a man to reach first until one was down in the fourth. Hal Smith gained life on an error, but Lundquist, a 6-1 junior, bore down to fan the next two batters.

Medrano's single in the sixth was the first hit off the Rebel ace. The second and final hit was Smith's poke in the seventh.

The even break gives the Rebels a 22-17-1 record for the season, with a double-header with the University of Nevada, Reno, slated for Thursday, to wind up the season.

GREEK

WEEK

CLIMAXES

Fraternity and sorority members at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas competed in a dozen unique track and field events Friday and Saturday during the annual Greek Week celebrations.

The traditional activities, sponsored jointly by the Interfraternity and Panhellenic councils at U.N.L.V., got under way last Friday at Paradise Park with a girls' tricycle race, a coeducational 50-yard dash and a mens' high jump.

Greek Week Chairman Joe Anderson said parties were scheduled Friday night at the various fraternity houses.

The competition for trophies began again at 11 a.m. Saturday with a 440-yard relay race, a baseball, hammer and broom throw, and such other events as a jacks and marbles contest, a standing broad jump, a three-legged race and a tug-o-war.

On Saturday night, the Greeks dressed in ancient garb for the annual Toga Dance in the U.N.L.V. Dining Commons, Anderson said.

National fraternities at U.N.L.V. include Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Delta Sigma Phi, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Chi and Tau Kappa Epsilon. Two local men's colonies also participated: Alpha Lambda Chi and Kappa Alpha Psi.

Sororities at the University are Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Zeta and Phi Mu.
