

KENT STATE MAY 4 1970

Tin soldiers and Nixon's coming
We're finally on our own
This Summer I hear the drummin'
Four dead in Ohio

Gotta get down to it
Soldiers are cutting us down
Shoulda been done long ago
What if you knew her,
And found her dead on the ground?
How could you run when you know?

IN MEMORIAM

EDITORIAL

Last May 4 at Kent State University four students participating in a peaceful, legal rally against the invasion of Cambodia and for an immediate end to the war in Indochina were killed, and nine others were wounded, as Ohio National Guardsmen, called onto the Kent State campus by Governor Rhodes, shot into the crowd. Many people have called this a tragedy. It is a tragedy but it is also an attack on the student movement and on all those who are organizing to end the war. The response of the state to the killings of the four students was to indict 25 Kent State students and faculty members. The Grand Jury report and indictments white-washed the National Guard and state officials of all responsibility for the murders of the four Kent State students and attempted to shift the blame for the killing to student anti-war protesters. To try to make the victims the criminals.

Since the bringing of the indictments against the Kent 25, the Federal District Court in Cleveland has ruled that the Grand Jury report was prejudicial to the right of the defendants to a fair trial and was, in fact, a political manifesto aimed at the removal of constitutionally guaranteed rights of freedom of speech and assembly. While the District Court decision to expunge the Grand Jury report from official record is a step in the right direction, it is simply not enough. The student movement must demand that the indictment of the Kent 25 be dropped. We must continue to demand an immediate end to the war. I call on all students to participate in the National Moratorium on May 5 to commemorate the Kent State and Jackson State students who were shot down last spring, and to call for the immediate end to the war in Southeast Asia.

We're asking you to commemorate Kent State not because intimidation and harassment of the student anti-war movement is unusual but because May 4, 1970 proved that it is not. If four can be killed, nine wounded, and 25 indicted at an average, unknown, midwestern university, then it can happen anywhere. This is the lesson to be learned from Kent State University: you don't have to go to Chicago, Watts, Berkeley or Columbia to protest injustice. It can be found and should be fought at every school in America.

by Craig Morgan, Student Body President, Kent State University, Kent 25.

The war in Vietnam is an unjust immoral act being perpetrated by the same type of people. The question has been asked, how do you take care of someone else's homework when you can't take care of your own? The murders that took place at Orangeburg, Kent State, Jackson State and countless other murders of human beings reflects the type of government that has become indigent to the needs of its people.

The bureaucracy that now exists in this city has finally beared out the fact that the Malthus doctrine is not a lie that the government is purposely trying to confuse and divide Black people and white people and that the present U.S. government has made the Preamble to the Constitution ripe for plucking destructively. I am not speaking for myself, but on behalf of every Black brother and sister exiled within this country.

The murders committed in Vietnam against Third World people, yes my yellow brothers and sisters have revealed the true nature of America, in that this country is cruel, bloodthirsty and indecent. Anytime the President can talk with twelve Black Congressmen about the needs of 30 million Black people and can keep spending millions of dollars trying to protect a few people's vested interests by murdering millions of people they consider sub-human, that government should be destroyed and replaced by another one that will and shall adhere to the people's needs.

And my brothers at Jackson State College asked me to deliver this message to the President and the Nation; when you have racist people like Governor John Bell Williams and the Mississippi Highway Patrol shooting innocent Black students on a college campus, and you front with us and the nation to act like you're concerned but don't do anything about it, to hell with Vietnam because I've got a war on my hands right here at home against you and all other inhuman people like you.

No one has been convicted of murdering two Black students at Jackson State or anywhere else for that matter with Calley's trial over, and the projection that the President has made concerning his pardon, this act only reflects the injustice given the Vietnamese people, then Black people know that there definitely is no justice for them. If Lt. Calley can have the President on his side, then the question still hangs in front of Black students and people why are you still persecuting a sister, Angela Davis?

Therefore, as a Black student, I urge all Black students to join in a call for a National Moratorium on April 24, and May 5, to protest through non-violent action, the war in Vietnam and the demand for the immediate withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Southeast Asia and to demonstrate to the world that the policies of the Nixon administration are distasteful and offensive to the people of this country.

YELL ENDORSES CANDIDATES

Election time is here again. Yes, that time when you students get to push your little levers and through that push you choose(?) who will run your student government. Yippee!!

In an effort to help you decide who to vote for we of the YELL have decided to endorse the following candidates:

- | | |

After much soul searching, we have decided these candidates will do us the least amount of harm next year and have decided to endorse them.

We would like the students of this University to make the same effort in deciding. We hope their minds will not be clouded by the issues and rhetoric and that in the end the best candidates will win.

Happy button pushing. ZAP!!

COLLEGE STUDENTS CONTINUALLY RANT AND RAVE ABOUT their parents biases and prejudices, well let me tell you that this campus has its share of idiot bigots. Inferences made in jest about group backgrounds and culture are outward signs of deep seated impregnated hate. Beware the idiot that slaps you on the back and says "but you're not like them."

Some people have described me as cold, indifferent, unmoved, that is not totally true, I am moved by prunes.

Since we're talking about food, gree vegetables should be included in your daily diet.

Everytime I drive on the highways I see more and more campers. Seems as though everyone wants a home away from home. Whatever happened to "There's no place like home?"

Did you know that Humpty Dumpty was the first victim of the Shell game?

Recent trip to "Pam's Place" proved to be a real eye opener. First computerized operation of it's kind in the world. Can you imagine being a number and not a name.

Courtesy is contagious . . .

Hotel class making training film in Sagas' kitchen found all kinds of foreign objects in the food disposal, Swedish meatballs, Hungarian goulash, Danish pastry . . .

New fad has hit Tonopah Hall. It's that old reliable 'Scrabble.' It's refreshing to see idle time being used so constructively.

All Psychology students learn about Pavlov's experiments with dogs. Once again we see a twisting of the facts as they really happened, those dogs could have been overheard, they really were saying to another, "I've got this guy Pavlov so conditioned that every time rings a bell, I salivate and he gives me food to eat."

Love blooms into engagement at Tonopah Hall. Lots of luck to Mary and Rory.

If student interest in school elections are any indications of future voting patterns, does it really matter how old you have to be to vote? They are probably taking after their parents who voge once every four years in "The Big One."

Someone asked me if I was still receiving advice from my Mother. Yes, and the last message was, look for someone you will love the rest of your life.

I walked into dining commons kitchen early yesterday morn. Overheard an egg say to boiling pot of water, "You've got to be very very hot to get me hard, cause I was just laid last nite."

Softball games in full swing every Sunday at Campus Stadium, Seating capacity 75, Sinatra Ten were hosts this week to namesake. After hearing that team was named after him he made a special trip to Vegas to see "his" team win second game in a row by lopsided score of 18-3.

Why all the fuss about television violence influencing children. Children are taught that killing, stealing, lying, and cheating are all noble things to do. They were taught this before television even invaded the home. Take the story of Jack and the Beanstalk as an example. Jack lied to his mother, cheated the Giant, stole from him and then finally killed him. To top this off he destroyed his home. All this in the name of what?

My contact in the Kremlin recently told me about an underground joke making the rounds in U.S.S. R. --- The reason that they will not allow Soviet Jews to go to Israel is that they fear mass circumcision.

Someone sent in his entry for Tonopah Hall renaming contest without return address, his choice was Peyton Place.

Contest coming to a close in one more week, get your entries in. Donna told me that to a cow it doesn't make an udder of a difference if you have soft hands.

If a hot dog were served to you cold, what would you call it?

Be back next week . . . I hope . . .

LATIN AMERICAN STUDENTS ORGANIZE

Latin American students of UNLV have been meeting since March to discuss and formulate the Latin American student organization known as Las Razas Unidas. The purpose of this organization is to give the students an opportunity to help each other at ALL levels of the Educational System, and to rid of the apathy that has engulfed all Spanish-speaking people in the past.

LRU will work in conjunction with the Office of Student Affairs and the Anthropology department at UNLV to further enlarge the ethnic study courses to include, along with the Black Studies Program - Chicano, Cuban, American Indian, and American Oriental Programs.

The Nevada Association of Latin Americans and the Circulo Cubano, two community social-service organizations composed of professional and business people interested in furthering a better education, have offered their support to LRU. Through the NALA office, information on community and governmental resources, educational opportunities, medical and dental services, training programs job placements, and legal aid services will be made available to LRU.

Las Razas Unidas will meet every Tuesday at one o'clock in room 202 of the Student Union Building at UNLV, and welcomes all those who are interested to attend.

WANT TO TRAVEL TO EUROPE?

LOS ANGELES-The University of Nevada, Las Vegas will be sending many of its students on exciting travel/study programs in Europe this June.

Courses in Drama, German, French or Spanish offered by UNLV are designed to give students the opportunity to earn college credit for overseas learning and experience. In the foreign language courses, basic skills will be developed, and emphasis put upon conversation and understanding of the spoken native tongue.

Mr. Hubert W. Johnson, Director of Continuing Education, states that students from UNLV and other schools across the nation are now enrolling in the college-accredited courses. The three courses are part of the American International Academy (AIA) travel/study programs which depart from New York on various dates in June.

The Drama course, called "Studies in Literary Genres: Drama" (Engl. 360), is an intensive study of the genre with attention to its history and development, and will include both classical and contemporary European Theatre. Its students will see Rome, Florence, Venice, Paris, London and other cities.

GRADUATE SEMINAR IN READING HAPPENS

A three-day graduate seminar in reading has been slated for the summer sessions at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Dr. M. Jerry Weiss, professor of communications at Jersey City College, N.J., and Eva C. Bortman, assistant professor of education and reading consultant at UNLV, will teach the "Challenges of Reading in the 70's," June 9-11 at the University.

The one-credit course is designed to help teachers of all grades to fulfill the charge that all might read.

Focus will be on providing for individual differences, formal and informal diagnostic techniques, special consideration of culturally disadvantaged minority children and youth, skill development, and selection of materials within content area.

For further information or pre-registration in the course, contact the Summer Session Office, UNLV, or Prof. Bortman, at the College of Education.

DR. AIZLEY ATTENDS MATH SEMINAR

An associate professor of mathematics at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas has been selected to attend an advanced seminar in mathematics this summer.

Dr. Paul Aizley is one of the more than 100 mathematicians and mathematics students who will participate in the National Science Foundation - sponsored Advanced Science Seminar in Combinatorial Theory June 22 to Aug. 12 at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine.

The UNLV professor was granted a stipend by the foundation to cover some of his expenses during the eight week course.

As a postdoctoral member of the seminar, Dr. Aizley will serve a dual role. As a participant, he will be able to take full advantage of lectures, seminar sessions and research opportunities, and as a staff member, he will assist in the instructional program for predoctoral participants.

Dr. Aizley has attended two of the Bowdoin College seminars previously. He earned his bachelor's degree from Harvard College his master's from the University of Arizona and his Ph.D. from Arizona State University prior to joining the UNLV staff in 1968.

He recently had technical paper accepted for publication by the "Proceedings of the American Mathematical Society."

An assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas was recently notified that a scholarly work he has written will be published soon.

Dr. Maurice A. Finocchiaro has sold publication rights for "The Problems of Explanation in Historiography of Science," to the Wayne State University Press in Detroit.

The book deals with the history and philosophy of science and their interconnections. More specifically, it is a critical examination of the aims, methods, structure and presuppositions of the study of the history of science.

In part, the book has the practical aim of improving and reforming the practice of historians of science and contains outlines of such select reforms.

Dr. Finocchiaro said the book also challenges the claims of historically oriented philosophers of science concerning the history of science and its historical evolution.

Finally, the book has the independent goal of ordering and understanding the mind as necessary for a study of the history of science.

Dr. Finocchiaro, a member of the UNLV faculty for one year, holds his bachelors degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley.

CONSTRUCTIVE COLLOQUY

The Upland Pasture by Eliot Porter

(Eliot Porter is recognized as the finest color photographer alive today. Since 1939, when he gave up the teaching of medicine and science for photography, Mr. Porter's particular interest has been nature photography with special emphasis on color. He has had exhibitions in many of America's foremost museums, and he is affiliated with the Sierra Club, an organization founded in 1892 for the study and protection of national scenic resources. His work has appeared in such Sierra Club books as "Down the Colorado", and "In Wilderness Is the Preservation of the World"; the latter book is frequently described as one of the most beautiful ever published.

The following article is, in Mr. Porter's words, "an observation of nature," and reflects the kind of sensitivity and perception that are unique to this eminent artists work.)

On barren upland pastures of Main's coastal islands worn thin like thread - bare carpets, an assortment of specially adapted plants covers the ground. The sterile fields have been long abandoned for the pasturing of cows and sheep. Prostrate junipers edge the rocky slopes, waiting to move in. Prickly to bare ankles, the junipers thrive in these sun-flooded fields; they will eventually fill the fields, crowding out all smaller plants, until the invading forest overshadows them and they too die from lack of light.

Observed casually, an upland pasture seems sparsely inhabited, with a mat of growth and no tall plants or grasses. Enter on a dewy morning though, and your feet will be wet in three steps. Hardly noticed until their burden of shining droplets chills and wets your feet, the old stalks and spears of grass grow close together. They grow like the first stubble of beard of an adolescent boy, but they come from old age. As they dry in the morning sun, the stalks vanish into the confused background of matted vegetation.

The vegetative cover is dominated by one primitive and two flowering plants. Their patchwork of colors and shapes solidly occupies the ground, but the species intermingle at their borders. The primitive plant is a bluish, gray-green, branching moss-like lichen commonly known as reindeer moss. A lichen is a working or symbiotic arrangement between a single-celled alga and a fungus for which the concept of discrete individuals (as with trees or flowering plants) is meaningless. Reindeer moss often covers a large area with a continuous gray growth, brittle and crackly in dry weather and spongy after a rain.

The flowering plants that do best in barren Maine fields are blueberries and hawkweed. The blueberry bushes grow in low tangled shrubs with densely arrayed, small lanceolate leaves. In late May or early June the pink, paniced, bell-shaped flowers start to show. When the bells drop off, they leave behind tiny hard green berries which swell as they change to pink, and in July, to a powdery blue, turgid fruit. Each berry is crowned with a ring of sepals marking where the flower was originally attached. When you rub off the powdery bloom, the underlying skin is a dark navy blue, containing all the dye of the berry whose pulp is almost colorless.

Hawkweed crowds out grass by different tactics, spreading its runners over the ground. At intervals along the runners, narrow leaves grow into a mat of overlapping rosettes bristly with white hairs. From the center of each whorl of leaves in June appears a hairy stalk which grows half a foot; its single terminal bud soon opens into a flat yellow disc of square-ended petals like a little windmill. This is the mouse-ear hawkweed. In full flower these hawkweed beds speckle the field. The blossoms seem arranged with purposeful geometric precision, and they mature and go to seed with marvelous unanimity. Then instead of yellow wheels, white puffy spheres dot the pasture and seem to float in a disconnected dancing layer above the ground of dark green leaves.

As summer advances, more showy plants catch your eye. Snapdragons bloom in rocky places; the yellow and orange Butter and Eggs, and a frailer plant of delicate branching structure bearing pale pink, lavender, and yellowish blossoms, so fragile that it is known as smoke flower. Thin redtop grass envelops downward rose bushes in a veil of parallel stems and the roses loom liquidly like carelessly discarded submerged objects. Daisies and a taller, brighter kind of hawkweed invade the less run-down meadows. In late July goldenrod blooms, and August brings out two wild spires of the rose family, steplebush and meadowsweet.

Often on an early June morning meadow grass is flecked with little globules of foam, made by froghoppers - my brothers and I called them spit bugs - who hide and keep moist under the bubbles of their secreted mucus while they suck the sap of juicy young plants. Meadow voles build their interlacing grass-lined tunnels deep from sight on the earth floor of the meadow. The song sparrow and the white-throat hide their nests under low spreading juniper, in the depths of a blueberry bush, or above the ground in the thicker junipers, but sometimes you can find their nests if you watch the birds to see where they go or chance to flush one from her eggs, but even then they are hard to find, so well are they hidden.

Nests are landmarks to those who know where they are. If the nest is near a path, they will make a circuit around it so as not to disturb the birds. You may hear a song sparrow sing from a mullein stalk and, being an insider so to speak in respect to the family arrangements, you can say with assurance that the bird is advertising his territory to other song sparrows, warning them to keep away from the nest you found the other day in the blueberry bush where his mate is nestled now, incubating a clutch of speckled eggs. And when the white-throat whistles from a spruce top at dusk, you know he is there because his nest is in a juniper not far out in the pasture...

WESTERN ADAPTATION OF ECKANKAR TAKES HOLD ON CAMPUS

The western adaptation of the ancient teachings of ECKANKAR by Sri Paul Twitchell is presently taking hold on college campuses throughout the country and world. American born and Indian educated Sri Twitchell expounded on this ancient science, is influencing thousands and unlocking the doors for many to the secrets of the spiritual universes and the inner self.

Concerning the survival and existence of the individual throughout eternity, taking one beyond the thought processes and the mind, ECKANKAR is not a yoga, religion philosophy, metaphysical or occult teaching. It encompasses the principle that man is the spiritual self, Soul, and is able to take charge of and be in full control of this inner subtle body, of which many persons are not fully conscious. This gives one the ability to move from the visible planes of existence (or consciousness) to the invisible at will, for the purposeful management of survival on all levels of consciousness and the eventual realization of the God conscious state that all persons are engulfed in but have failed recognition of in previous incarnations.

Many individuals who have taken up the study of the Indian philosophies by themselves, or have studied under various Masters and spiritual organizations, have done so only to learn that instead of progression in consciousness, their efforts had brought about an impasse in their inner lives, which affects the outer circumstances as well. Problems of this nature have resorted many times from the semantic loss of meaning through translations of the teachings, and the lack of a proficient Master to guide them in the physical as well as the inner planes.

Aspects of the above nature have been alleviated in the ECKANKAR teachings due to the fact that Sri Twitchell is a native American who uses the same system of logic and writes in the English language, making them easy to assimilate for those living in this culture. The basic foundation of ECKANKAR is the living Truth or Master who is able to guide chelas in both the inner and outer modes of existence. The recognition of the Master on the inner planes and the teachings given there is one of the most exhilarating experiences the neophyte can ever obtain. Without conscious experience by the individual, the validity of the ECKANKAR teachings will mean nothing to him.

Various academicians, scholars, and researchers, such as Dr. J.B. Rhine (professor of psychology at Duke University), Dr. Eugene E. Benard (professor of psychology at North Carolina State University) Dr. Charles Tart (psychologist and lecturer at the University of California), and the famed Freudian disciple Carl Jung are/have conducting laboratory experiments in an attempt to prove that man does have the substance and ability to acquire this state of experience which is so important in the organizational structure of the individual self.

By obtaining Soul consciousness, one develops a cosmic viewpoint which gives the individual the experience of being above what the metaphysicians have called "the worry belt," transcending the lower planes of consciousness that encompass the elements of time, space, matter, and motion. This keeps one in balance and harmony (on all planes of consciousness including the physical) with the primordial first cause of the universe, which goes beyond the elemental substances (mind, body, matter, etc.) of the physical. The higher aspects of consciousness go beyond the realms of the thought processes and the mind, and can only be mentalized to a certain degree. They must be experienced for total knowledge of them. Only when man loosens and lets go does he find himself guided to this liberation of Soul and its attributes of total freedom, total awareness, and total responsibility. When one attains Soul consciousness, he comes to the realization and knowing that the basis of all creation is unquestionably light and sound, and nothing else.

Having been the subject of raging controversy in the past few years, Sri Twitchell has made deep inroads on the traditionalistic orthodox faiths of the world, and those interested in the spiritual sciences in general. Being the subject of the book "In My Soul I Am Free" by Brad Steiger, which is a biographical sketch of Sri Twitchell and ECKANKAR, it is stated that the essence of the man is an enigma to all those who meet him, or are even close to him.

Because of the many duties he performs, Sri Twitchell keeps himself hidden from the public and out of the spotlight to insure privacy and time for his spiritual work in this world. He presently only receives public audiences with chelas and interested persons (with the exception of his close disciples) at the various ECKANKAR Seminars at which he speaks throughout the country and world. For information on ECKANKAR and the works of Sri Paul Twitchell, one can contact his distribution center at Box 5325, Las Vegas, Nevada 89106.

FILM FESTIVAL EXPLORES OUR WESTERN HERITAGE

Why explore the American West? Why spend a week looking at one type of film? In a survey done in the UNLV course Cinema and Literature the concepts of young and old filmgoers about what the Western is revealed a wide spectrum of opinion. The Westerns recollected by the students were drawn largely from children's shows on television or only very recent Western films. What the most important elements of the Western are also was not easy to determine or to agree upon by the students. They cited The Lone Ranger, Hopalong Cassidy, Butch Cassidy, Roy Rogers, Rin Tin Tin, Roadrunner, Gary Cooper and John Wayne as Western heroes. Some considered THE CALL OF THE WILD and GONE WITH THE WIND to be Westerns.

Is the heritage of the American West understood by Americans? Is the image of America based on the Westerns seen in foreign countries a true one? Does the Western embody the American myth and the American dream? What role does the woman have in the Western films? Are there true Western tragedies? Who are the good guys and the bad guys and the good-bad guys? White hats? Black hats?

The First UNLV Film Festival will explore these questions and many others on the American Western. The Western will be dealt with in many aspects of film arts, including history, writing, production, acting, and television. The humorous and the literary approaches will be studied in this week-long Western program. The history and origins of the Western and the development of the Western film will be examined through a series of films and discussions May 3 through May 8, afternoons and evenings.

A wide variety of Western films has been selected by the Film Festival Directors, Jack Valero, senior, Gayle Evans, graduate student, and Dr. Hart Wegner, faculty. The films were chosen for entertainment and educational value.

The first story on film and one of the earliest silent films, THE GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY, will be screened. "Oldies but goodies" by D.W. Griffith and William S. Hart also are included as shorts before the major motion pictures such as BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUN-DANCE KID, THE LEFT-HANDED GUN, LONELY ARE THE BRAVE, and THE VIRGINIAN. On each afternoon and evening's program also will be Western cartoons, starring the Roadrunner, Speedy Gonzales and Mr. Magoo. UNLV film experts and community and invited guest speakers will participate in informal discussions of the films to be shown.

GOOD GUYS GO TO THE WESTERN FILM FESTIVAL!

SENATOR THURMOND SPEAKS

U.S. Senator Strom Thurmond, a Democrat from South Carolina, spoke to a group of 150 students and non-students in the ballroom, Thursday evening, April 29.

The Senator opened his speech by saying that everyone has a right to his own opinion and that throughout his speech he would be stating his. He then went on to discuss revenue sharing, welfare, pollution, opposition to the military, electoral reform, and the demonstrations now going on in Washington, D.C. Then there was a question and answer session during which there was a considerable amount of heckling from members of the audience and frequently the Senator did not let someone asking a question finish doing so.

Mr. Thurmond said he agreed with President Nixon's plan of revenue sharing and that it is the governments responsibility to train those on welfare so they can obtain jobs. In regard to pollution he said that with the technological know-how of today a way can be found to rid the country of pollution. He also said that we must have respect for men wearing U.S. military uniforms, that he favors electoral college reform and that the current Washington, D.C. demonstrations were planned by Moscow Communists to coincide with May Day, May 1, the traditional date for celebrating Red victories.

During the question and answer period, Senator Thurmond said he was not in favor of bussing to achieve racial balance in schools and predicts that when the bussing laws are enforced in other parts of the country as they are in the South, the country will demand a change in Congress. He said he favored open housing.

In discussing his views on the May Day demonstrations in the capitol, he was very emphatic and said that this was "mob action".

"Yet the mobs storming Washington, D.C. seem to feel that a few thousand demonstrators should have more say in the decisions of government than the millions of loyal Americans who stay home and engage in Constitutional action."

When one draft age student questioned the Senator's stand on the war and called him a "bigot," the Senator almost lost his cool and replied calling the student a "bigot".

There were many heated verbal exchanges between Mr. Thurmond and members of the audience and between different members of the audience with obviously opposite political views. Perhaps, it would have been better to do as one Southern university did last year as reported by LIFE Magazine: when Strom Thurmond spoke at this particular school, the students threw marshmallows at him. Actions are better than words?

THE FIRST FILM FESTIVAL

UNLV May 3 through May 8 will have its first film festival, which is hoped will become an annual event. The First UNLV Film Festival will focus on the Western, a genre important in America and particularly in Nevada, yet never made the focus of formal study or a film festival of this type. The event has become a reality as a result of the cooperation of UNLV Student Government, Administration, the College of Fine Arts, the College of Humanities, Staff, the Spring Fine Arts Festival and Cinema X. The Benefit Premiere of LITTLE BIG MAN March 31 also helped to make it possible to offer the event free to UNLV students. SPEAKERS TO ENLIVEN PROGRAM

The film festival will serve not only entertainment but also educational purposes. All film programs will be introduced and discussed by campus and community film experts as well as invited guest speakers. Dr. Hart Wegner of the Foreign Language Department and Dr. Arlen Collier are among the UNLV faculty members to participate in discussions on topics such as "The Western Hero and Heroine," "The Outsider Looks at the American West," and "The Roadrunner Cartoons as Drama." It is hoped such discussions will add to the enjoyment and appreciation of the Western films.

The featured guest speaker will be Dr. Arthur Knight who will speak on Friday, May 7 at 7:00 p.m. in S.S. 103. Dr. Knight is film critic for the 'Saturday Review,' author of several books on film, including 'The Liveliest Art,' which is being used in the film course at UNLV and is a professor at USC. He is one of the authors of the "Sex and the Cinema" series in 'Playboy.' Mr. Malcom Attebury actor in a multitude of Western films and TV programs also will be a guest. Other guest celebrities will appear if their schedules permit.

Several of the Film Festival showings will be the Las Vegas premieres. The documentary videotape "Virginia City," made in Nevada will be shown by TV monitor and discussed by the filmmakers. WIND FROM THE EAST is a recent French film by the internationally famous and controversial Jean-Luc Godard which is another Western never seen by a Las Vegas audience. One of the 1971 Academy Award winning films THE RESURRECTION OF BRONCHO BILLY ANDERSON, also will be shown in a special presentation for the UNLV Film Festival; this short subject was made by a student at USC working with the early Western films done by old-timer star cowboy Broncho Billy. BOOKS TO FILM

The Western films which have come from American literature directly will be introduced by American literature specialists in the English Department. THE DEER-SLAYER is the classic pioneer story of Natty Bumppo and his Indian sidekick Chigachgook. A Bret Harte short story transformed into film The Outcasts of Poker Flat, also will be shown Thursday afternoon. Students of literature and film will be interested in the comments of Dr. Dodge and Dr. Unrue who will briefly compare the written versions with the film versions. On Tuesday, May 4 at 7:00 p.m. Dr. McCollough of the English Department will relate the various versions of The Virginian from the nineteenth century novel through two films versions and a television series.

OUTSIDERS WATCHING US

On Thursday, May 6 at 7:00 p.m. the Film Festival program will focus on the American West as seen by foreign filmmakers. SONG OF THE PRAIRIE is a short satire on the cliches of American cowboy films done by the Czechoslovakians. One episode in the Glenn Ford feature CRY FOR HAPPY includes the humorous Japanese effort at making a Western; this portion of the film will be discussed with the other films that night in showing the appeal and influence of certain American Western films. The feature of the evening will be WIND FROM THE EAST, a French mini-Western done by Jean-Luc Godard. Dr. James Evans of the Philosophy Department and Dr. Mark Weinstein of the English Department will discuss Godard and his philosophy before the film.

FIRST FEATURES MONDAY

The UNLV First Western Film Festival will begin promptly at 4 p.m. in the Moyer Student Union Ballroom with the classic comedy of the silent era, GO WEST, starring Buster Keaton. Keaton and his friend the cow go straight-faced through a variety of encounters in the great American West. With the Keaton film will be short early Westerns, including Revenge on the Range. The first evening program will feature Stagecoach, starring John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Andy Devine, and Thomas Mitchell. One of the great epic Westerns directed by John Ford, the film reveals the lives of two women and seven men making a stagecoach journey in 1885.

END OF THE WESTERNS

Saturday, the closing of the First UNLV Western Film Festival will be devoted to the modernization of the West. The afternoon showings will begin at 2:00 with The Iron Horse, a 1924 John Ford epic dealing with the task of building the first intercontinental railroad. The Iron Horse is a silent film which will be accompanied by music. It established the "big Western," raising the routine horse opera to the level of a national epic. UNION PACIFIC is a later version of the westward move of the railroad empire builders done by Cecil B. DeMille, starring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea to be shown at 4:00. The Great Train Robbery, the 1903 railroad film pioneer will be shown in both the afternoon and the evening. The evening program concludes with Lonely Are The Brave, starring Kirk Douglas. In this modern outdoor adventure an individualist in the tough Western hero tradition pits himself against the demands for conformity in the jet-age West, putting his life on the line for a friend.

On the night of April 28, the University Dancers presented a stimulating Spring Concert. "A Dancer's World" captured the attention of the audience and joined every generation together in Dance. The entire presentation was choreographed by the University Dancers, individual students of Dance, and Mrs. Nancy Scoble.

The impressionist and creative dances brought the audience to the Dancers. One captivating performance was "Mobiles and Monoliths" choreographed by Debbie Clarke. This dance was an exploration into illusions, utilizing the ability of the body to create images. Another creation was "The Storm" choreographed by Mrs. Nancy Scoble. It was composed around the words of the poet Rod McKuen and placed the audience into a meditative mood.

One of the most enjoyable numbers was performed by the men in the group; Rocky Harshman, Bill Jones, and Mike Labrum in "Pool Sharks All". The use of pantomime in dance proved most effective as they portrayed the game of billiards.

Many other moods were given to the audience such as "Happiness" by Fafa Mongeot, the mood of love as in "Rain Myth" by Becky Cahill, and mood of life as in "Life of a Rose" by June Wolever.

The Village Folk Dancers performed with complacency and liveliness in their numbers "Zillertaler" a german courtship dance and "Mauris Wedding" a Schottische wedding dance.

As an observer of "A Dancer's World" I would like to congratulate the entire cast and Mrs. Nancy Scoble for successful Spring Concert.

ARMY MARCHES ON WASHINGTON

(Washington D.C. April 24) In the Spring Washington, D.C. is one of the prettiest cities in the world. Spring is cherry blossom time. The banks of the Potomac are lined with these pink and white blossomed trees. Spring brings the cherry blossoms out in full bloom.

Spring also brings the tourists. The annual "Cherry Blossom Festival" held the final week of April marks the beginning of the tourist season. From April through September the most prominent sight in Washington is the tourists. School kids on class trips, Scout troops on field trips. The Washington tourism industry brings in several million dollars a year in revenue for local merchants.

Cherry Blossom Festival and tourism are two yearly events for Washington. But in recent years another tradition has come to the front. The anti-war demonstration.

In the last few years Washington has seen many types of demonstrations. A combination "smoke-in" - "Honor America Day Rally," last July brought over 300,000 people to Washington. Last May after the Cambodian invasion and the Kent State and Jackson State "murders" another 150,000 protesters gathered in the Capital. Over the years there have been many such gatherings. This week-end was no different.

An army invaded Washington D.C. this week. Once before the Capital was invaded. That was by the British army in 1812. The British left the Capital smoldering. This time the army did not destroy the Capital, they merely surrounded it and laid siege to it for over five hours. The demonstration in Washington today immobilized the downtown area for more than eight hours.

The protesters came from within America itself - blacks, whites, yellows, reds, old, young, parents, children, Viet Nam Vets, labor leaders, poor people, college students, everyone imaginable. There was no color barrier. No generation gap. All these people were together for a common cause. Bring our boys home now. End the war in South East Asia Now.

The five hours we listened to speeches. Rhetoric on the war, on the repression in this country of the poor people, blacks and students.

Rhetoric on the war will not end it. We can't bring the troops back with words. Large scale demonstrations do much to solve our consciences, but they don't end the deaths in the jungles of South East Asia. Much rhetoric flowed today, but the important thing is did anyone listen?

Our President didn't. He was in Camp David for the week-end. I watched him take off Friday night. It seems Mr. Nixon is not interested in listening to the people. In November of 1969, 200,000 protesters gathered in the Washington monument grounds and he watched a football game on television. Last May after his Cambodian invasion 150,000 gathered to protest the war, again Mr. Nixon went to Camp David. The gathering this week-end was the largest yet. It was also the most peaceful. It also had the largest amount of endorsements from Congress - 10 senators and 29 congressmen.

The demonstration was the culmination of a week long period of actions by the Viet Nam Veterans Against the War. It was also the beginning of the Spring offensive by the various anti-war groups.

At the beginning of the week the Viet-Nam Vets came to town. They were there for a week long series of activities. During the week the "Vets" camped out on the mall in a military-like camp. They were at first ordered off the mall by Supreme Court Justice Warren Burger.

In spite of the courts action, police did not move to oust the khaki clad "Vets" when they pitched pup tents and climbed into their sleeping bags and bed rolls Wednesday night.

"We have not noticed any violations of the court order," a spokesman for the U.S. Park Police said. "They can stay as long as they don't sleep and camp." When told that the veterans had pitched tents and were sleeping in the park site, the spokesman chuckled and said, "We have not observed that."

When the vets went to the Supreme Court building, to protest the actions of the court, there were 110 of them arrested. The charge was ... obstructing a Federal court to influence a ruling. The charge was reduced to disorderly conduct within the hour.

On Friday everyone started streaming in for Saturday's activities. The Vets moved from the mall to West Potomac Park, where the park department had given permission for a camp-in up through May 9th.

Saturday broke fresh and clear. The bright sun in the morning seemed to be an omen of things to come. The mood was bright and cheerful, it almost seemed like a 4th of July picnic. Lots of people, lots of smoke and plenty of good vibes from everywhere.

The march was moved up an hour, I guess because of the large crowd (the largest ever in D.C.). For over five hours the people streamed up to the Capital. When they got there most of them sat around listening to the speakers. A good list of speakers and music they had too. There were congressmen and senators, Ralph Abernathy, from SCLC, Peter, Paul and Mary, Country Joe McDonald, Corretta King, Dave Dellinger and many more too numerous to list.

The march on the Capital was quite successful. But did it accomplish anything? We don't know the results yet. All we know is that for one day in April close to half a million Americans gathered in Washington to protest the slaughter in S.E. Asia, if our leaders chose to ignore this then where do we go from there?

IF MY CANDIDACY IS NOTHING ELSE

If my candidacy is nothing else, it will be an attempt to make students more aware of what's happening with their student government. It is the attempt to give you facts that have been carefully screened from view, and hopefully it will prod the consciousness of those who are elected to lead CSUN.

My opponent is trying to gain your sympathy by accusing me of running a "smear" campaign. If telling the facts, no matter how gruesome and shocking they may be is "smear," then I'm guilty. The facts are something Mr. Anderson should be rightly worried about.

If you find it hard to believe that the present CSUN President has a $16,000 miscellaneous fund from which he pays Mr. Anderson an illegal, but healthy, salary, then look at the student senate minutes. There have been no motions authorizing funds for an administrative assistant, one of two paying positions Mr. Anderson holds presently in student government.

If you find it hard to believe that the present student body president has spent hundreds of dollars redecorating his office, then take a few minutes to walk to the third floor of the student union (room 309) and look for yourself.

If you find it hard to believe that a president would take unauthorized money for his travel, then check the discrepancy between the CSUN checkbook and the student senate minutes authorizing the release of funds.

The most saddening aspect of all of this is that student government is irrelevant to most students. And why shouldn't it be? Hidden away in his God-like tower Mr. Myers has manipulated our $140,000 student activity fee often without even consulting the student senate, let alone the student body. Since no one knows what student government is doing, know one cares.

I am frustrated and confused, because things don't have to be this way. There should be know room for corruption in any government, no matter how large or small.

I need your support and in return I'll promise the same standards of honesty that I now find so lacking in our present administration.

Sincerely,
Ivan Braiker

MASTERING THE DRAFT

"You are about to be inducted into the Armed Forces of the United States . . . You will take one step forward as your name and service are called and such step will constitute your induction into the Armed Forces indicated." With the step forward, a young man becomes a young soldier.

An increasing number of men are refusing to take the symbolic step forward. Apparently they agree with the poster depicting Father Daniel Berrigan with the words: "Don't just do something, stand there."

These men will have a chance to contest the validity of their induction orders in court. They will be prosecuted for refusing induction. As a defense, they can claim that their induction order was illegal. They cannot be convicted of refusing to obey an illegal order.

Aside from refusing induction, getting into court to contest the validity of a registrant's draft status has not, and still is not, easy. The courts are not immediately available to remedy any injustice. The basis for this limitation is found in the draft law itself. Congress legislated that "(n) o judicial review shall be made of the classification or processing of any registrant by local boards, appeal boards, or the President, except as a defense of a criminal prosecution . . . after the registrant has responded either affirmatively or negatively to an order to report for induction. . ."

In other words, if the words of Congress are to be taken literally, the only way to contest your draft status in court is by refusing induction. If you are right, you will be found innocent. If you have judged wrong, you will be found guilty and may spend up to five years in prison. Needless to say, Congress tried to discourage use of the courts by making such use a big gamble.

The courts, however, have not read Congress' language literally. A number of years ago they decided that a young man who had been inducted into the Armed Forces could contest his induction through the use of what is called the writ of habeas corpus. Through the use of this procedure, a young man in the Armed Forces can challenge his commanding officer's right to hold him in military service. If the young man's induction was illegal, his commanding officer has no right to hold him in military service.

Though the writ of habeas corpus allowed men to get into courts without refusing induction, the risk of losing his case and spending two years in the Army.

Though the writ of habeas corpus allowed men to get into court without refusing induction, the risks were still high. Instead of putting five years in prison on the line, the young man who uses the writ runs the risk of losing his case and spending two years in the Army.

For a number of years, refusing induction and the writ of habeas corpus remained as the only two avenues for getting into court. Recently, however, a new avenue has opened. Though only available under exceptional circumstances, this new avenue allows a young man to have a court review his case even before he has received an induction order. This form of court review is called pre-induction judicial review. Its advantage is that a young man can get into court without risking five years in prison or two years in the Army.

Pre-induction judicial review is not available in every case. As a general rule, it is available only if a local or appeal board has acted in a blatantly lawless manner. The case of Oestereich v. Selective Service System brought pre-induction judicial review to full bloom and provides the best explanation of when it is available to a registrant.

Oestereich returned his draft card to his local board. His IV-D ministerial student exemption was revoked. Before his induction, he sought help in the courts. The case finally reached the United States Supreme Court.

The United States Attorney argued that Oestereich must either refuse induction or seek the writ of habeas corpus in order to get into court. The Supreme Court disagreed.

"We deal here with conduct of a local Board that is basically lawless. It is no different in constitutional implications from a case where induction of a n ordained minister or other clearly exempt person is ordered (a) to retaliate against the person because of his political views or (b) to bear down on him for his religious views or his racial attitudes or (c) to get him out of town so that the amorous interests of a Board member might be better served . . . In such instances, as in the present one, there is no exercise of discretion by a Board in evaluating evidence and in determining whether a claimed exemption is deserved. The case we decide today involves a clear departure by the Board from its statutory mandate. To hold that a person deprived of his statutory exemption in such a blatantly lawless manner must either be inducted and raise his protest through (a) habeas corpus (proceeding) or defy induction and defend his refusal in a criminal prosecution is to construe the (Draft Law) with unnecessary harshness."

The language is vague. What is the difference between lawless conduct and blatantly lawless conduct? The only reasonable answer can be provided by an attorney who is familiar with all the cases which have followed in the footsteps of Oestereich.

Though pre-induction judicial review is only available under exceptional circumstances, don't hesitate to seek aid if you think your case may qualify. The alternative forms of getting into court are gambles with extremely high stakes.

We welcome your questions and comments. Please address them to "Mastering the Draft," Suite 1202, 60 East 42nd Street, New York, N. Y. 10017.

BIBLE BACKS IMPROVING LIVES OF OLD PEOPLE

WASHINGTON -- Senator Alan Bible, D.-Nevada, has joined in sponsoring a series of legislative proposals to substantially improve retirement income, health benefits, nutrition, employment and travel opportunities for older Americans.

Bible, a ranking member of the Senate Special Committee on Aging said Congress has a "moral mandate" to upgrade the standard of living among senior citizens.

"Today there are 20 million citizens -- or 10 percent of our total population -- over the age of 65, and that figure will increase sharply in the next few decades," Nevada's senior lawmaker noted. "Through no fault of their own, many are forced to live in ill health and economic misery. They are forgotten Americans, and the fact they are forgotten is a shameful example of neglect and indifference. This nation must do better much better."

Bible called for prompt consideration of a bill to create an Institute on Retirement Income, where government and private industry would examine the adequacy of Social Security and all other retirement and pension plans.

Emphasis, the senator added, would be on a realistic plan to harness retirement benefits to increases in the cost of living.

"The appalling fact is that many older Americans are sinking into poverty because their retirement dollars are being devoured by inflation," he continued. "If we do nothing else, we must adopt a system that guarantees a decent standard of living regardless of economic fluctuations."

Bible also has given strong support to measures which would:

-- Authorize a nutrition program to provide -- at low cost -- at least one hot meal a day for the nation's elderly.

-- Permit elderly persons to travel at free or reduced fares on the nation's air, rail and bus lines.

-- Establish a community senior service program to develop job opportunities or unemployed citizens 55 years or older.

-- Provide greater federal support of programs directly related to improved health care for the aged.

PEOPLES PEACE TREATY CRITICIZED

WASHINGTON, D.C. - (WCNS)-- The Washington-based American Youth for a Just Peace (AYJP) has called the 'People's Peace Treaty' drawn up by the National Student Association (NSA) and three student groups in Vietnam last year "A disguised formula . . . which undercuts the efforts to achieve a just peace."

"The pitiful fact about the (treaty) is that it embodies the double fault of representing a minuscule minority in America bidding for dictatorial power, on behalf of a minuscule minority in North Vietnam which already exercises dictatorial control," the AYJP charges.

Headed by Charles J. Stephens, AYJP claims in its four-page 'Analysis of a political fraud' that NSA has no authority to speak for seven million American college students when it "Lists only 535 affiliate memberships."

While NSA claims that it worked out the treaty's terms with the South Vietnam National Student Union, AYJP says the South's four student unions have never merged. "One NSA delegate allegedly contacted a few representatives of the Saigon Union," AYJP says. "But NSA has produced no evidence that any of these representatives endorsed the 'treaty.'"

AYJP's arguments to the treaty's nine articles are summarized as follows:

ARTICLE I calls for a date for the "immediate and total withdrawal from Vietnam" of American forces. AYJP says it fails to provide for a similar withdrawal of North Vietnam's 400,000 forces that have crossed its borders.

ARTICLE II provides for "discussions to secure the release of all American prisoners." AYJP calls it "political blackmail," and wonders why the North would free the POWs in exchange for a prior American withdrawal.

ARTICLE III calls for an "immediate ceasefire" between the U.S. and the "Provisional Revolutionary Government" (PRG) in the South (the Vietcong). South (the Vietcong). AYJP asks, "What kind of ceasefire will there be if there is no ceasefire between the principal antagonists?"

ARTICLE IV provides for discussing procedures for insuring the safe withdrawal of U.S. troops. AYJP points out that it requires the U.S. and Vietcong to merely "enter discussions on the procedures" -- not guarantee such procedures.

ARTICLE V requires the U.S. to "pledge to end the imposition of Thieu-Ky-Khiem on the people of South Vietnam." AYJP counters with the fact that the 1967 democratic elections which brought in the Thieu government were internationally observed.

ARTICLE VI provides for an interim "provisional government to organize democratic elections." AYJP asks what the need for a provisional government is with a democratically elected government already in office. Granting such a need it asks "which Vietnamese will 'pledge to form' a provisional government? The Vietcong led by Hanoi?"

ARTICLE VII pledges both sides to "enter discussions of procedures to guarantee the safety and political freedom" of South Vietnamese who have backed the U.S. and Thieu government. AYJP replies that "discussions" are not enough.

ARTICLE VIII provides that both sides "respect the independence, peace and neutrality of Laos and Cambodia." AYJP reminds students that North Vietnam has "consistently and massively violated" their peace and neutrality.

ARTICLE IX pledges both sides to "end the war and resolve all other questions in the spirit of self-determination and mutual respect" of Vietnam's freedom and independence. AYJP recalls that the U.S. and the South's proposals on these issues "have been rejected by Hanoi and its PRG who have even refused to discuss them" at the Paris peace talks.

The AYJP analysis of the 'treaty' concludes: "It seems the height of hypocrisy for the unrepresentative inventors of this 'treaty' to believe that their one-sided proposals would be acceptable to the parties in the conflict. . ."

PAPER REORGANIZED BECAUSE OF EDITORIAL POLICY

Seattle, Wash.-(I.P.)—The University of Washington Daily will remain on the campus with a restructured Publication Board and a change in the channel for financial assistance.

The decision came as a climax to an unusual episode in University history during which criticism of the student newspaper last Spring rose to unprecedented proportions.

The controversy led to a recommendation by a special faculty staff committee last June that the publication be officially separated from University affiliations as of January 1, unless modifications of the student newspaper's operations were made.

This report, made by a committee headed by Vice President Robert G. Waldo, served as a basis for discussion of solutions for the Daily problems. In making the announcement, President Charles E. Odegaard said he based his present decision on a thorough consideration of opinions he has received during the past six months from students, faculty and staff.

Dr. Odegaard said that in these responses there appears a broad consensus on two recurrent themes: the desire to keep the Daily on the campus as a University aided publication and the desire to free the Daily from the dominant influence of any one group of groups of individuals.

"Experience of the past year has indicated that changes are needed," Dr. Odegaard commented, "but I still incline to the belief that we should not take drastic steps before making yet another effort to keep a daily newspaper on campus for the University community."

Under the new administrative structure to supervise and set policy for the Daily and the Tye Yearbook, the seven-member Board of ASUW Publications will be replaced by a nine-member Board of Student Publications. The new board will continue the tradition of having a student majority. For the first time, it also will include a professional off-campus journalist.

Another major change is that the compulsory student fee subsidy for the Daily will be allocated directly to the new Board of Student Publications instead of to the ASUW for re-allocation to the Daily as at present. Although the Daily is largely self-supporting through advertising, a fee subsidy of $1 per quarter per student is allocated in lieu of individual subscriptions.

In effect, these changes make the new Board of Student Publications independent of any particular agency or group on the campus though the University retains ultimate responsibility for the Daily.

The new Board of Student Publications will consist of two students, appointed by the ASUW president; one graduate student appointed by the President of the Graduate and Professional Students Senate; two student members chosen by the staffs of the Daily and Tye Yearbook; one faculty member of the School of Communications, appointed by the Director of the School; one member of the administration or faculty appointed by the President of the University; and one professional journalist, appointed by the President of the University.

None of the student members may be officers or board members of the ASUW or GPSS or staff members of the Daily or Tye. To assure adequate representation of undergraduates, it is recommended that the appointments made by the President of the ASUW should preferably be undergraduates.

HORSE SHOERING TAUGHT

Do you want to learn how to scalp, forge or strike? How about paddle, wing, plant or crossfire?

Persons over 21-years-old may learn to do these things in a five week basic farrier course sponsored by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

In case you are still undecided, a farrier is one who shoes horses, and the class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Latter Day Saints Welfare Farm, off Vegas Valley Drive at the foot of Sunrise (Frenchman) Mountain, beginning May 3.

Mike Dawson, a graduate farrier from the North Texas Horseshoeing Institute and a farrier in Southern Nevada for three years, will teach the course.

The class is designed to acquaint a person to the basic working functions and problems that are common to the ordinary horse.

Coursework will include lectures, demonstrations, trimming of a hoof, and the actual shoeing of a horse. It will be especially helpful to the owner regarding basic knowledge of farrier work.

Enrollment is limited and each registrant will be required to attend Monday night lectures and one laboratory session each week.

Students in the class are also required to bring their own tools, including pulling nippers, hoof nippers, nail clincher, hoof pick, clinch cutter, pritchel, hoof knife, rasp, hammer and apron. Dawson will offer suggestions on where to shop for classroom equipment.

Pre-registration is required for the $100 course. However, nails, bar stock to build shoes and use of anvils and forges are included in the price.

Also, a Farrier Certificate will be awarded to those who successfully complete the course.

For information on pre-registration, contact the Office of Conferences and Institutes, UNLV.

692,000 ATTEND SCHOOL ON GI BILL

"It's about that time again, the Veterans Administration today reminded 692,000 veterans, servicemen and dependents attending college under the G.I. Bill.

That reminder was designed to induce veterans to return their certification of attendance cards to VA during the last full month of their current enrollment period. For most schools, this means the months of May or June.

And there are two very good reasons for jogging their memories:

- (1) VA cannot prepare a final check for the spring 1970-71 school year until the agency has received the certification of attendance card from the student involved.
- (2) If the card is not returned at the end of the current semester, the student cannot automatically be enrolled under the G.I. Bill for the upcoming summer or fall semesters.

Trainees attending school below college level also must return their certification of attendance cards, but they must do so every month, VA explained.

Failure to complete and return the cards on the part of both college level and below college level trainees will automatically stop payments.

VA further pointed out that it is the responsibility of students attending school under VA programs to keep the agency informed on changes in their number of dependents, or their education programs.

VA also reminded college registrars of their role--to promptly return students' re-enrollment certification so students may start receiving their checks on schedule the next semester they are in school.

The agency urged eligible persons interested in entering training or desiring further information to contact their nearest VA office or their local veterans service organization representative.

STUDENT'S OPINION FAVORS PE REQUIREMENT BY 2/3 MAJORITY

Current University of Nevada, Las Vegas policy calls for four units of required physical education, and according to the students presently enrolled in PE classes, the requirement has gained favor.

By a 2-1 margin, 1024 UNLV students who are enrolled in the basic Physical Education 100 courses have indicated they favor retaining the four units of required PE. This decision was one of the major results of a survey conducted last week by Dr. Starr, Chairman of the UNLV Physical Education Department.

The survey, which missed less than 200 students enrolled in PE 100 classes for the Spring semester, indicated that the UNLV physical education program has gained a high degree of popularity, and will be even more successful with the completion of the recently approved outdoor facilities and gymnasium. Results also echoed the favorable sentiments which were expressed in a similar survey conducted two years ago.

Actual figures on the question of whether or not four units of PE should be required showed 67% of the students answering yes, 32% indicating no, and one per cent undecided.

Also receiving favorable responses were questions related to the importance of PE classes in a total education, and the effectiveness of UNLV's PE program in preparation for life-time activities. Seventy-one per cent of the respondents felt that physical education activities courses were a valuable part of their college education, and 86% indicated they were given activities which they could use now and in later life.

UNLV's PE staff also received a vote of confidence in the survey, with 89% of the students involved in the survey agreeing that their instructors had been thorough and effective in all aspects related to the class.

On two other questions Dr. Starr was pleasantly surprised at the results, because they involved areas where facilities (the lack of facilities in UNLV's case) were very important.

Only 30% of the students indicated they had not been able to enroll in the class which was their first choice, and a question which asked if anyone had ever taken what they consider a poor class came up with only a 21% negative vote.

Of the 19 different activities taught in PE 100, the survey showed that archery was rated the lowest, and only two per cent considered it poor. The other 18 classes had one per cent or less of the students handing out a poor rating.

A final question asked if there were other life-time sports which should be added to the UNLV physical education program, and 68% of these polled came up with ideas. The two most asked for activities were swimming and water skiing, and a total of 39 new activities were suggested by the students.

Dr. Starr himself has plenty of new activities which he would like to see added to the curriculum, but in all cases facilities limit a physical education program. However, the approval of the new PE complex and outdoor facilities by the 1971 Nevada State Legislature is going to alter many situations, and make it possible to improve some classes and add many more. Some of the new offerings in the near future will be handball, fencing, wrestling, and la crosse.

Improvements in the present program will be forthcoming with the addition of 12 new tennis courts, a track, separate wrestling, gymnastics and dancing rooms, and acres of playing fields.

Included in the 1024 students who filled out questionnaires were representatives of all four undergraduate classes, plus a small number of graduate students. Athletes currently taking part in their varsity sport were excluded. Completion of the survey was also conducted in such a manner that all replies were private and undeniable.

Dr. Starr stated that the results of the survey indicate that the primary purpose for physical education activities are being met and additional offerings can be achieved as soon as the desperately needed new facilities are constructed.

Students and faculty members seeking more specific survey information are invited to contact the physical education office, HPE 103 or ext. 291.

BASEBALL MAY FINISH STRONG

Just as the South will rise again, so will the UNLV baseball team, we hope. The Rebels finally won a league series in beating the University of Nevada at Reno two out of three games. On Friday, the Rebels won the single game, but it took a last inning rally to attain the victory. Trailing 6-2, due to slug-gish play during the entire game, going into the bottom of the ninth, the Rebels exploded for 5 runs to notch Herb Pryor's sixth win of the season. The Rebels' leading slugger, Rich Meily, led off the final inning with his ninth home run of the year. Then after receiving two bases on balls, Mike Lombardi singled home Les Con-tretras with the second run of the inning. Pinch hitter Gerry Alesia got a RBI by grounding into a force play. That made the score 6-5 Reno, but the Rebels weren't through yet. After Albert Walker's single, Charley Weir cracked a ground-ruled double scoring pinch runner Tom Crine and set the winning run in the person of Walker up at third base. Billy Anthony lifted a fly ball single to left field that brought Walker home with the winning run. The final score ended 7-6 UNLV. Herb Pryor pitched about the worst game of the year for him, but still secured the victory. It was about time that both Pryor and the Rebels got lucky and won a one-run ball game. The Rebels have lost 5 one-run ball games this year, while only winning 2 of them.

In Saturday's doubleheader, the Rebels slipped back into their shell, only to break out of it with a flourish. Hopefully, the Rebels busted the shell to pieces this time. Dennis Chambers pitched the first game of the double and he received his usual amount of support from his teammates. Chambers had to leave the game in the eighth inning after losing the lead to Reno 4-3, but of the 4 runs only one of them was earned. All the others came about on Rebel errors.

It would probably be a close contest for "hard-luck" pitcher of the year between Pryor and Chambers. Gary Benson helped get Chambers off the hook by restoring order the rest of the inning. The Rebels scored a run in the bottom of the inning to make Benson the pitcher of record, thus getting Dennis off the hook. But Reno scored 4 more times in the ninth and the Rebels could only respond with 2 of their own in the bottom of the ninth to fall short 8-6.

The Rebels had finally reached the bottom of the valley by losing to the team with the worst record in the WCAC, 0-10. The Rebel loss must have angered the Las Vegas winds, because it really picked up at the start of the second game. Due to the winds, the game was shortened to 5 innings. But 5 innings was all the Rebels needed to bang out 14 runs with 6 home runs. John Christian picked up the victory, 14-5, while Billy Anthony Rich Meily, Fred Demick, Mike "Ernie" Lombardi, Al Walker, and Charley Weir were all hitting home runs. For Lombardi it was his second home run of the weekend as he homered also in the Friday's game. Ernie's speciality is hitting home runs on windy days as he has hit 4 home runs this year all on windy days.

"Big Dick" Meily also got 2 more home runs this weekend to boost him into double figures for the year with 10. Rich also has 40 RBI's this year and is shooting for the half century mark in this category.

Fred Demick continues to hit over .400 this year with a .425 average. Along with Pryor and Chambers, Meily and Demick are strong contenders for the all-league team, if they're not messed over somehow. Good luck, men.

I have it from good source that the rumor about Frank being here this week to see his Sinatra 10 is false, but from the same source the championship game is a definite possibility.
