

REBELS CHALLENGED TO ORAL EXAM

by Jerry LaFevre

Nationally ranked Oral Roberts University will be putting the test to the Rebels on December 11th for the first meeting between these two teams. The Rebels will be trying to "put it all together" and once again overcome the underdog spot on the ticket, after being defeated 102-92 in the season opener by the University of South West Louisiana.

Oral Roberts University will be starting All-American Richard Fuqua, a 4th year returning lettemen who holds the nation's #2 position in scoring with a 35.9 average; trailing only Dewight Lamar who maintains a 36.3 average. Lamar made his opening debut in Las Vegas against the Rebels. Still somewhat below his previous years average, he managed to score 30 points and make the Rebels feel the impact of an All American. continued on pg 9

A New Way to Learn

PSI

By John D. Goad

A quiet revolution in education at UNLV is about to take place this spring in the College of Science and Math.

Students in at least one physics course will be allowed to choose the grade they want, work at the speed they desire and not have to attend lectures in doing it.

Dean Robert Smith of the College of Science and Math has announced the institution of the "Personalized System of Instruction", PSI, in selected courses beginning with Physics 180. Features of the system make it possible for the student to work as the speed they desire, not unlike a correspondence course. Students work on a number of units of study and take a pass/fail exam designed to assure mastery of the unit subject material. Each unit will be mastered before going on to the next.

A certain number of units will be required for a grade of "C" with an additional number for a "B" and so on, thereby allowing the student to choose the grade they want to work for.

"With this system," explained Smith, "grades become more significant." He explained that due to the design of the units, objectives of the course are defined and the unit exam assures mastery of those objectives. The basic objectives are contained in the first units and other more advance objectives and concepts come later.

The system was devised by two American consultants working at the University of Brasilia. Due to the language barrier, the traditional lecture approach to course material was useless. As an alternative, they broke the course into units, used graduate assistants as tutor/proctors and found the results to be outstanding.

Through experimentation, it has been found that the student themselves make the best tutor/proctors, reinforcing their own knowledge while helping a fellow student with his comprehension. A ratio of one tutor/proctor to ten students has shown to work well at such places as Long Beach State and Berkeley.

Most of the drawbacks to the method lie with the students themselves. Procrastination on their part has shown to be the biggest problem.

"Once the students get rolling through, they really get hooked on the system," Smith said pointing to the fact that PSI, about 80% of the students worked for and obtained a "A".

Other courses are currently being designed around this method and will be offered in fall. PSI will be entirely optional to faculty members allowing them to employ more traditional methods if they desire.

Blind Help to See the Way

By Dick Juillerat

The Special Services Department of UNLV is pleased to have with them a very remarkable person on its counseling staff this year.

Born in Fresno, California in 1948 Ray Patterson has lead a life of challenges unsurpassed by many. Being visually handicapped since the age of three has not hindered Patterson in his appeal to his peers.

Moving to Kansas in 1951 Patterson grew up and attended Derby High School where he got into wrestling. Later Patterson attended Kansas State University where he graduated with a Bachelor's Degree in History in 1968.

After this experience followed another that summer in the Colorado Mountains at a rock festival which left Patterson with the effect that "there is a lot of good people left." Continuing on his travels, Patterson quotes: "I love to travel and hitchhike, every weekend finds me somewhere; Reno, LA, Phoenix, you see me on the road, pick me up, I need a ride."

The next two years found Patterson a wanderer between Alaska and California before settling down in Las Vegas in 1970. The active fellow then returned to school at UNLV. He then applied for the Special Services Staff.

Patterson is active in Political Science, and was basically a McGovern supporter. He wishes Las Vegas would become more active in the war. The campus needs to be more activist spirited to improve its culture. "The better movements would help our campus, not the radicals or burning," commented Patterson. He went on to say "war is old hat, useless to talk about it."

Among his other hobbies are writing, reading, debating, sports car racing, but "generally anything that has to do with people." Patterson also does volunteer work at the Runaway House with former Special Services Counselor Robert Stanovik.

R-Y EDITORIAL

First I would like to thank Head Football Coach, Bill Ireland, for all the years of exciting Rebel football he had brought us since he conceived and built it in 1967. Bill elected to step down, on his own volition; and will continue to help build the Rebel Athletic program in an executive position at UNLV. So, from the bottom of my heart, and I'm sure from most of the hearts in the community, I wish Bill the best of luck in his new capacity here at the "West's Rising University."

The aim of this student publication in the future will be to represent the student, faculty and surrounding community to the fullest extent. Anyone wishing to donate their time, talents, or money (in add form), please contact this office, or leave your name and number in the Student Government office downstairs.

Also thanks is given to Chub Drackulich for extending all possible help to the students in procuring game tickets against the Cajuns of USL. The students could pick them up for a day prior to the game and also on the day of the game at the P.E. building ticket office. About 2,000 students complied on these days, and all received the best tickets available. Only 200 tickets were available for sale to the public at the door as a result. About a half of the full-time student enrollment received these tickets. This is certainly a far greater percentage available to the students than many and even most major colleges. The students will have a gripe only if they are there on the days of ticket distribution and are not given a ticket.

The times for ticket distribution for next monday's game at the Convention Center is Friday and Monday, between 9:00 and 4:00 p.m.

Please make note of the Bread column on page three, it is of great importance to those waiting for loans or part time jobs on the work study program.

The "Fantastiks" opens here this weekend and is free to all students. It will also run on the following weekend. It is one of the longest running off-Broadway plays ever, so take out the time to enjoy a free evening at the beautiful Judy Bayley Theatre.

CSUN Senate Meeting

The meeting was called to order at 8:30 p.m. on Nov. 21 by Vice President Shayne Skipworth.

Those members absent and excused were: Mona Andersen, Richard Torres, and Janet Green.

Absent and unexcused were: Bruce Asher, Gene DiSanza, and Mike Whaley.

(M) Fabbi (S) Newberry that the minutes be approved and dispensed with.

Passed by voice vote.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Student Lobby

The Legislative Report of the National Student Lobby arrived. This report is on all legislation passed regarding students.

The campus student lobby group will be meeting with Dr. Baepler next week when the final University budget arrives. This will be the budget that will go before the State Legislature in January. The lobby group will meet with the Governor before the Legislature meets and will lobby with the legislators here.

Anyone who is interested in this group can contact Loyd Gangwer in room 308 of the Student Union Building.

OLD BUSINESS

CPA/Media Institute

This on-campus organization is being reorganized to have more emphasis on involvement and experimentation in various types of media such as films, etc. on cultural and social aspects of the society. Due to this reorganization, the group wanted to be recognized by CSUN under its new name and constitution.

(M) Frazier (S) Spears to recognize.

Passed by voice vote.

(M) Newberry (S) Reynolds to table this discussion until the next meeting so the Senators will have time to read these documents.

Passed by voice vote.

DEAN POSITION OPEN for ARTS & LETTERS

To The Students:

The following should be made note of by the Consolidated Students of UNLV; specifically those whose majors are subsumed within the college of Arts & Letters.

The screening and selection committee for the position of Dean of Arts & Letter is now entertaining, for review, nominations by concerned students for said position. These nominations must be submitted before Dec. 31, 1972; any nominations after this date will not be considered. All nominations must take the following form:

1), name of nominee; 2), full address. All nominations to be considered must have a terminal degree, and must be submitted to the chairman of the committee or to a committee member.

The committee membership is Chairman, Dr. Claude Warren, Anthropology Dept.; Dr. Thomas Clark, English Dept.; Dr. Rosemary Masek, History Dept.; Dr. Andrew Tuttle, Political Science Dept.; Dr. Evan Blythin, Speech & Theatre Arts Dept.; Mrs. Elizabeth Warren, graduate student representative; Mrs. Della Yeager, undergraduate representative.

This notification comes to the student body in an effort to reach those students who desire to participate in the nomination of the new Dean of Arts & Letters; and thereby, aide in the development of their college. This committee is, in effect, attempting to be responsive to student concern. This is your chance to speak up and take a meaningful part in the formation of your college, as well as to contribute to the formation of your college, as the further growth of the University as a whole.

Sincerely,
Della Yeager

Typewriters

At last something is free for the students of UNLV.

The CSUN Senate donated 6 typewriters to the University library for the exclusive use of the students.

The Senate voted early this semester to furnish the typewriters and their first year maintenance cost to the library. The Royal office style typewriters were purchased by the student government organization at the cost of 14 cost of $1433 and installed last week.

There is no charge to use the machines. They are located on the third floor of the library in Room 336.

Directors of the library, Harold Erickson, said that "the typewriters have been well used already." "This has been a badly needed service on campus. I am very glad to see the use of the machines is free to the students. machines is free for the students."

HOTEL NEWS

by Jennifer Swan

The Hotel Association has had quite an eventful week. Activities started with the monthly meeting at the Tropicana Hotel on Tuesday November 14. Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. C. Smythe, who briefly explained the the work involved in a well run casion.

On Thursday November 16 the Hotel Association sponsored the annual Homecoming cocktail party in the SUB ballroom starting at 7:30 and ending approximately at 11:30. Hors D'oeuvre's were served with bar drinks being sold at $.50 per drink. There was a nine piece band which played the greatest of music for all four hours.

The highlight of the week for the Association was on November 18 at the Homecoming game. During half-time the queen was announced as being Efi Papageorgiu, the Hotel Assns. representative, secretary, and a most beneficial active member. Congrats to Efi!

On Sunday November 19 at Hotel and Business College get-together was held at the Straw Hat for all students interest in being interviewed by Host International. There was a most interesting talk given by executives with the Charlie Brown division and free beer for all in attendance.

Four Hotel members are now in Atlanta for the HSMA convention and will surely bring back interesting and informative literature. Watch for the posting of the December meeting.

THE BREAD

DEPARTMENT

Grant-in-aid cards, USAF loans, LEEP Grants and loans, Nursing loans, National Direct Student Loans and EOG grants will be available to pre-registered students for payment of fees, Scholarships, including Bob Davis, will not be released until grade reports are available and evaluated.

Pre-registration and payment of fees will take place in Moyer Student Union on December 7 and 8. Although no check releases are required, students must have completed their registration for at least 12 hours before the check to cover payment in full is released. Checks for financial aid will be available after pre-registration but prior to January 17 for payment of fees during that period.

Students on college work-study are advised that the 15 hour/week average will be maintained over the semester break (Dec. 22-Jan. 22). CWSP funding for 40 hours per week during semester breaks is not possible this year.

HOTEL SCHOLARSHIP--Robert Peterson, senior at UNLV, is the third recipient of scholarships made available by Pink's Produce of Las Vegas, Peterson, whose home is in La Jolla, Calif., will graduate this December with a degree in hotel administration.

Even though we lost to the Ragin Cajuns, (how can they lose with a name like that?), and Harold (Hyperextension of the knee) Whaley is out for awhile, I'll still believe we will win more games than lose. I base this opinion solely on the strenght of F. Troop. (Better know as our bench).

For this week's recipe I thought I would give you something that you can eat anytime with any meal because it's that good. It's the Favorite Food of the Captain of F. Troop and my sister gave me the recipe so I think I'll call it:

Captain Lisa's Sour Cream Pound Cake

You need:

- 2 3/4 cups sugar
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 6 eggs
- 3 cups sifted flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/2 teaspoon orange extract
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Do:

In a mixer bowl, cream together sugar, and butter till light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Sift together flour, salt, soda; add to creamed mixture with sour cream, extracts, and vanilla; beating all the while. Pour batter into greased and flour 10 inch tube pan. Bake in 350 degrees oven for 1 1/2 hour or until cake tests (will spring back if lightly touched in center) cool 20 min., remove from pan, sprinkle with confectioners sugar, and tantalize your tastebuds with something to give you the munchies.

For the Cook's Corner cultural cubical, Maureen Heher suggested Stanyan Street and Other Sorrrrows by Rod McKuen. It's a nice get-away dream world book recommended by a nice get away dream world chick.

LEVIN and CATALANO Chosen to Represent Political Science Dept.

The political science department announced the selection of Shelley Levine and Stephen Catalano to participate in their annual Washington internship program.

The two students will aid Senator Cannon in his office and act as "junior senators".

The extensive internship program originated by Senator Cannon, offers students a chance to participate in government on the federal level. Each semester the political science department chooses one student on the bases of scholastic abilities and basis of scholastic abilities extracurricular activities.

Letters of recommendation and an essay are also required for the selection of students who apply for the six credit program.

This year's two students were chosen because of their outstanding qualifications.

Shelley Levine, former CSUN president and a member of various student organizations, was chosen from the many applications. Miss Levine, a senior at UNLV, stated the reason she applied for the internship was that "the experience gained by such a program would afford a valuable insight to the working of government."

When asked if she was looking forward to her trip to Washington, she replied, "Personally, I'm very excited. This is an opportunity of a lifetime."

Stephen Catalano, a honor student with a 3.7 grade point average, will also work in Washington. Catalano, who is a junior at UNLV, stated that he was "looking forward to see government from its practical side rather than the theoretical side." After completing the internship, Catalano plans to return to Las Vegas and finish his studies.

"Exploding population, decaying urban centers, threats of total destruction, and rapidly changing technology and life style characterize the present era. We believe that a University should lead society in combatting these de-personalizing influences." This appeared in a committee report on the Restructuring of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas Institute.

Recognized as a public service media division of the University on Nov. 14 by the CSUN Senate, the institute members are now preparing to present a proposal to the Board of Regents for Authorization to receive funding and grants from the national trusts and foundations. This is tentatively scheduled for January 12, when the Regents will be in Carson City.

The institute is founded in the belief that, "Given the increasingly complex environment about us, it is necessary for our social health to facilities each member of the community in gaining an expanded awareness of the environment."

The primary purpose of the Institute were reported to the Senate as being:

1. To establish and maintain a cooperative relationship with the commercial and public media systems, thereby securing channels of distribution for cultural enlightenment
2. To serve the students need for professional experience & the professional's need for non-commercial creative stimulins in the field of media.
3. To conduct and make possible research for innovating social and cultural ideals to aid in the remedy of social and cultural ills that befall our modern environment.
4. To promote artistic and scholastic efforts relative to the University community's need for the individual and collective enlightenment through the means of media.
5. In general to be a public service institution designed as a medium to transmit the benefits of higher education for public enlightenment.

Any persons with a sincere interest in becoming a part of the UNLV MEDIA INSTITUTE may sign applications in the CSUN office.

UNLV TO IMPLEMENT NEW ED AID

By Dick Juillerat

Eight professors represented the UNLV campus at a conference in Long Beach, California on "Personalized Systems Instruction" on November 18-19, 1972. "The concept of PSI has definite merit and I say this in spite of my reservations about behavior theories," Dr. Herman Van Betten stated in a recent interview.

Dr. Van Betten, Associate Professor of English here at UNLV was a delegate at the conference.

Some aspects of the program were brought out a few years ago on the University of California, at Berkely Campus. The Teaching Assistants were used as tutors in this particular case, and in some cases received credit.

Two professors from the Berkely Campus picked up its momentum the first year of its operation. The principle of positive reinforcement is one of the basis of its operation.

Because there is no lecturing involved in the method the student relays his question individually to the instructor. It is related to the commonly-used "self-pacing" method, where the student sets his own pace. "The lecture method is on its way out, this was the general feeling one had at the conference." According to Van Betten.

It is an insured reward for success. The concept was pushed to complete mastery. No one left the course without an A or B grade. "Using this system I had a successful course in symbolic literature." One philosophy instructor stated.

Out of the approximate 1,000 delegates from the United States in all disciplines ranging from business to physics everyone used the lecture method. One of the aspects that the 30 lectures of the convention brought out repeatedly was that it allows more time for personal contact between the professor and the student.

The irony of the seminar was that it was done totally in lectures which show other techniques to be better.

"PSI is the coming thing" Van Betten emphasized. The English Professor went on to say "I can see it used when dealing with factual data, it lends itself well to sciences, languages, writing and problem solving." Van Betten is thinking about using it in his beginning Latin Class. Some students may get through the course in four weeks and others may take longer.

Setting up such a system entails a lot of work. The material has to be divided up in units, beginning with the simple elements, developing and becoming more difficult.

The people who want this system need to get together and discuss what position to take with PSI since it is difficult to ignore. Van Betten sees possible implementation of the plan at UNLV.

A university wide committee is being organized to study PSI. This method also serves well for Junior Colleges and may even be applicable to high schools.

HIGHER GRADES

By Bill Porter

"Personalized System of Instruction," said Michael Stowers, is a programed course of learning."

Michael Stowers, audio-visual instructor at UNLV was asked how he felt about the new learning process of personalized instruction.

"There are many different ways and approaches to the Personalized System of Instruction," said Stowers, "It all depends on the instructor."

"The Branch System is one type of personalized instruction, quoted Stowers, "It concerns different levels or steps the student must master to complete the course."

Stowers said that through the Branch System, the student is able to get higher grades with a lower failing rate.

Through the Personalized System of Instruction, better areas of learning are open to all students.

NO More

BORING Lectures

By Bill Zender

The boring lecture may some day be replaced by a new teaching method; The Personalized System of Instruction.

Mr. Ramon Martinez, instructor of engineering, here at UNLV, has been attending classes on the Personalized System of Instruction for three years.

"The object of this program is to improve instruction," said Martinez, "Personalized System of Instruction circles out the slow students so that he may be helped individually."

Martinez also related that with this system the student knows exactly what the instructor wants and in this manner, cuts down on the percentage of failure.

"The foundation of the Personalized System of Instruction is the Keller Plan," said Martinez, "It's a self based approach with guidelines and outlines to show the student exactly what the teacher wishes to accomplish."

"The primary philosophy of the Keller Plan is instruction by steps," told Martinez, "The student has to master each step in the subject to pass it."

At each level, the student is helped along at his own pace be a student teacher till he finally pass it. But the main load is on the student. This method of teaching is self-paced, student-tutored and mastery oriented.

There are thousands of approaches to personalized instruction. it depends totally on the teacher.

In the future, personalized instruction may be used by single instructors, certain classes, or by the entire university.

self pacing

By Vic L. Byers III

Dr. Lon Spight, professor of physics at UNLV, is one of several instructors on campus who will implement an innovative method of student self-pacing instruction this Spring.

Spight and seven other UNLV professors spent last weekend at a university educators convention in Long Beach, California learning about PSI (personal student instruction).

This teaching method - devised by behavioral scientists - completely does away with the concept of lecturing.

"The lecture has long been regarded negatively by students," Spight commented, "but till now there has been no reasonable substitute for it to get the basic concepts across to the students. Now we have PSI."

The main tenant of the PSI method is the one-to-one student/tutor relationship. Dr. Spight suggested that "the best tutors would be students who recently learned the material by the suggested that "the best tutors would be students who recently mastered the course material. Graduate students who learned the material by the lecture method would not be well suited to this type of teaching."

The tutor (who would be assigned about ten students) could help each student with his individual problems - this would eliminate holding up the class for one student or pacing the class too fast for others.

Spight added that "testing under this method would not be dropped but would be reformed." He explained that the material for a given course would be broken up into perhaps 15 or 20 'units'. A test would be given on each of these whenever each student felt he was ready for it.

Spight said that the matter of whether or not to have a comprehensive midterm to final examination is being considered. He ventured an opinion that "it might be feasible to give a maximum grade of 'B' to a student who has completed all the 'unit test' and offer a possible grade of 'A' to those students who, besides completing all the unit tests, satisfactorily completed a comprehensive examination."

There should be no problem for any member of the science faculty at UNLV instituting this method in any class he desires - Dean Smith of the College of Science and Mathematics attended the convention and was very much impressed," Spight said.

"I believe that most students will like this method," he continued, "because the reward of finishing the class when the student desires will come at any time in the semester that he, the student, desires - it's that simple."

Spight's conclusion was that "students can now, in effect, give themselves the grades they desire - the responsibility for learning will be their alone."

MEANINGFUL LEARNING

by Sylvia Zaoral

"Damn little takes place in lecture format, but with PSI (Personalized system of instruction) teaching would be different and meaningful," Professor Leonard Storm, of the Biology department, said during a recent interview.

"PSI entails an attempt to get away from the traditional method of teaching," Storm stated. He also said that he plans to use this experimental system of instruction next fall in Biology 103.

There are about 100 students in class and one proctor for every ten students. Storm said, "PSI works on the ancient idea that students can teach one another."

In the PSI system the professor gives the student a package of materials which includes various assignments. With this method of instruction the student can develop at his or her own pace. "Cheating becomes more difficult and less convenient," Storm said. With PSI everybody takes different tests at different times which makes it harder to cheat than to actually do the work.

The professor said that with this personalized method of instruction the student is not depersonalized. In his opinion the student is treated as an individual and not just like another number.

Storm emphasized that a student from a foreign country would not be penalized for his background. Since the PSI method is self-paced the student would learn what he could, as fast as he could.

The PSI method assures that he or she taking the course will get a good grade and Storm said that "it's an advantage for the student."

The professor advocates that in the beginning "there should be a doomsday contingency,". This deadline of turning in the material would motivate the students to do the work and not slack off.

Patterson joined the Special Services team this fall. He wishes that if students do not understand the program and are having some problem to come in and discuss it with him or the other counselors. The program is tailor made for the individual. There are such services as tutoring, reading for the visually handicapped, typing, transportation and others. The Special Services Staff is branching out into new areas such as reinforcement of the English B program for foreign students. They are also trying to cooperate better with other departments.

Putting together the Ethnic Coalition is important because it gives meaning to the fact that it helps all these students stay in school who would otherwise get ground out by people who just don't want them here. "To get the things they are working for they must pull together and have political awareness and power." added Patterson.

Patterson also emphasizes the need of the individual and getting them to come in and talk to the staff. Since it is Special Services for the disadvantaged it covers such a broad category from orienting freshmen to the aide of out of towners. "It is the first step in getting into the whole university hierarchy." Patterson concluded.

BLOWN in the WIND

Tuesday night November 21, the sixty member UNLV Symphony conducted by James Stivers, performed for the first time this year in the Judy Bayley Theatre. For his debut with the Wind instruments, Stivers featured eight works by eight composers. Opening with a march, "Army of the Nile" by Kenneth Alford, Stivers led his troops into Beatrice and Benedict, a Berlioz composition, following with an exceptional "Folk Song Suite", the Ralph Vaughan Williams piece. The contemporary Warren Benson classic, "The Leaves Are Falling", preceded the intermission. After intermission, the group performed "Fanfare pour la Peri" by Paul Dukas, "Fantasies on a theme by Haydn" by Norman Tello Joio, a Robert O'Brien arrangement of Walton's "Popular Song from 'Facade'", and finished with the rousing J.C. Heed march "In Storm and Sunshine".

If success is to be measured by the number of people who attended the concert, the Wind Symphony should have been thrown on the wind. But, those who were there enjoyed the breeze and my feeling is that those who missed this one should call the weather bureau now so as to be ready for the next "Wind Storm".

"LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION"

By Bill Zender

"Lights, camera, action," will be heard echoing through the Audio-Visual department next semester at UNLV.

Mr. Michael Stowers, audio-visual instructor, here at UNLV, will be introducing a course on the selecting, evaluating and utilizing of all aspects of educational media this spring semester.

This class, "Selection and Use of Audio-Visual Media," which is a three credit course is open to all students with the permission from the instructor.

Classes are Tuesday and Thursday from 5:00 p.m. to 6:15 p.m. and will be held in the new audio-visual studio. It will cover all aspects of the media, such as slides, films and selections in general.

All students interested in audio-visual instruction are encouraged to sign up for this class.

THE PERFECT MASTER

Marharaj Ji, the popular 14-year-old Indian guru, self-proclaimed perfect master and ruler of the world, has been having his problems. In early November he returned to India with 3,000 western disciples and $80,000 worth of undeclared cash, jewels and watches. Indian customs was unhappy and may press smuggling charges.

A November 12th U.P.I. dispatch also reports that a number of political and religious leaders in India claim guru Ji is really 22 and want him arrested for lying about his age.

$55,000 GIFT TO ARTS

LAS VEGAS--A bank executive and attorney presented a personal gift of $55,000 to UNLV Tuesday (Nov. 21) as his contribution to the campus' Performing Arts Center.

Robert Z. Hawkins, chairman of the executive committee of the Security National Bank of Nevada, made the presentation to Dr. Roman J. Zorn, UNLV president, at a press conference at the university.

The money will be utilized in the construction of a central plaza between the Judy Bayley Theatre and the Artemus Ham Music Hall--the two component facilities of the arts center.

President Zorn said the new plaza would be named for Mr. Hawkins in commemoration of his kind gesture toward UNLV.

"The university is greatly appreciative of the philanthropy of Mr. Hawkins," President Zorn stated. "His generosity will assist UNLV in providing a major cultural facility to serve the students and Southern Nevada community."

Construction of the Artemus Ham Music Hall--the second phase of the center--will depend upon a combination of public contributions and a funding request endorsed by the Regents which is now before the state legislature.

Already, the citizens of the community have contributed approximately $300,000 which has been set aside as a nestegg for the building of the music hall.

About $352,000 in private gifts helped construct the 600-seat Judy Bayley Theatre which opened its doors on the campus last April.

A Nevadan since 1910, Hawkins is a successful lawyer in the Reno area in addition to his leadership post at Security National Bank.

He is also active in the rice farming and motel industries, and serves on the board of directors of the Nevada State Bank.

Hawkins resides in Reno with his wife Kathryn. He has one son, Robert M, who is head of the marketing department at Security National.

ORAL ROBERTS HERE MONDAY

Fuqua has unusually tremendous range, scoring from 30 to 35 feet from the basket with 50 percent accuracy, and has acquired the nickname the "Mad Bomber" by the New York Press. His honors include being selected as a sophomore to make five small college All-American teams. He has been named to the U.S. Basketball Writers Association 10-man major All-American team. He was voted # 6 man for recipient of the Adolph Rupp Award signifying the nation's top college player.

The major advantage Oral Roberts seems to have over the Rebels in the coming game is the fact that they have a large portion of their squad returning, with some valuable playing experience under their belts. The Rebels on the other hand are entirely dependent on an extremely young squad, comprised almost entirely of sophomores and juniors,

WCAC ranks 13 among 15 major conferences

Reprinted from Review Journal

It's a New Season for 1972-73 college basketball, but the West Coast Athletic Conference still has the same old lowly national reputation among major college cage leagues.

Among 15 major college basketball conferences evaluated by the respected Larsen's Basketball Forecaster, the good old WCAC is listed 13th according to the pre-season "mean power ratings" of all the teams in each league.

The only leagues the WCAC beats out are the Southern Conference and the Big Sky Conference, which is hardly the hotbed of major college basketball tradition.

In fact, the WCAC was rated 13th in the final conference evaluations in both 1971-72 and 1970-71, finishing ahead of only the same two conferences.

For evaluation of Larsen's ratings themselves, he had a percentage of 76.4 in picking outright winners of more than 1,200 games last season, while he said the well-established Gold Sheet was 74.9 percent for the same games.

Larsen does much more, such as select a probable winner and margin, give a power rating to some 225 teams, list the top sophomores and likely All-America prospects.

At any rate, Larsen rates the Atlantic Coast Conference as No. 1 with a 101.52 pre-season mean power rating, as compared to the 87.60 by the WCAC.

The entire list: (1) ACC (2) Big 10 (3) Pacific Eight Conference (4) Southeastern Conference (5) Western Athletic Conference (6) Missouri Valley Conference (7) Pacific Coast Athletic Association (8) Big Eight (9) Ivy League Conference (10) Mid-American Conference (11) Ohio Valley Conference (12) Southwest Conference (13) WCAC (14) Southern Conference and (15) Big Sky.

But God bless the WCAC for one thing. The champion of the WCAC is automatically seeded into the semi-finals of the NCAA Western regionals, while the winners of the WAC, PCAA and Big Sky, along with the selected independent, must play in a preliminary round. How sweet it is.

Year-to-year, the ACC has long been considered one of the strongest if not the strongest — conference from "top to bottom" in the country.

Meanwhile, the three main western conference — Pac-8, WAC and the relatively-new PCAA — are third, fifth and seventh, respectively. Last year some people we know were comparing the WCAC with the PCAA as being equal or better. Not quite.

For the uninitiated, the PCAA consists of Long Beach State, Pacific, San Diego State, Los Angeles State, Fresno State and San Jose State in basketball. Not bad.

WCAC Better Than 13th

From the results of recent WCAC basketball action against some of the nations "Top Twenty" teams, it would seem to the ordinary laymen that maybe the West Coast Athletic Conference is a little better than the Larson Rating system has given them credit for. In fact, over the last weekend it would appear that the WCAC is much tougher team for team than several of those rated higher.

Santa Clara, not picked to be any tougher in the WCAC than any one of the other 7 teams, split a pair with #12 ranked Brigham Young University. And then #15 ranked Houston (a future Rebel opponent) succumbed to the University of Seattle, after having won their first 3 games. Then St. Marys California, nobodys choice to do anything in the WCAC this season, beat the University of California. And to top things off, UNR(Reno) is off to a winning start this season with a victory over Idaho.

Not to be forgotten are the two prime choices by many to contend for the crown of the WCAC this season, San Francisco in a convincing win over Arizona and UNLV in a close loss to national powerhouse and #7 ranked Southwestern Louisiana.

Indeed the WCAC's combined record looks to be a very strong one against some of the best competition the nation has to offer. Meanwhile, the nations top five lookd nearly invincible to all other opponents. It may be UCLA all the way for the next 100 years, but the WCAC will definitely be heard from this season and in future seasons even m

MAN OF VISION TO STAY

Ireland and University of North Dakota Coach

BILL IRELAND

By Dominic Clark
UNLV Sports Information Director

Bill Ireland has resigned as the head football coach at UNLV. Thankfully, he will still be part of the growing athletic program in some teaching, and public relations-type capacity.

It is only fitting that "I" remain with the school and the program which is "his baby". He has fathered the UNLV grid program into an established recognizable force on the gridiron map today. He, probably more than any other single person (and they have been many) is responsible for the creation and continuation of Rebel football.

And now, as he turns over his place on the field to a yet-to-be-selected successor, one must feel a tremendous amount of pride in having been associated with Bill Ireland. "Irish's" three main characteristics are congeniality, determination and loyalty.

A natural PR man, Ireland has been able to maintain his jovial nature despite the hard times of late. No one is alibing a 1-10 season, but a lesser man than the McGill, Nevada, native would forget and abandon the entire program. But not so, Bill Ireland.

Ireland is not a man who believes in the word "no" and so often has he proved it. People said football is not for Las Vegas. He proved them wrong. People said we would never have a stadium. The sparkling Las Vegas Stadium bears witness to this man's positive effect on others.

Ireland is loyal. Being a native Nevadan he chose to remain here and help further the development of the program and the contributions he makes to the Silver State are endless.

Ireland, with his determination and his love for the school foremost in his mind, is and has been extremely loyal to not only his school but also to those who have been associated with him. I speak from experience.

Coach Ireland and I first crossed paths when, in 1967, I was an undergraduate at what was then known as Nevada Southern University and was the Sports Editor at what was then known as the Rebel Yell (the campus student newspaper).

From the beginning I could see that Ireland was a dedicated and straight-man who thought more of what he could do for others rather than what others could do for him. Through his patient "tutoring" I learned more about being a journalist that I did in my entire career has taught me thus far.

He knows what it means to be a father and he has seven beautiful children who prove 24-hours a day what it is like to have a great father. And Ireland is the father of the UNLV program and his determination, dedication, and loyalty will see to it that he stays with the job he has started until the end.

Don't think he is being "put out to pasture" with the creation of the new position for him. Ireland is as energetic now as when he first accepted the challenge to build a program for UNLV. His undying efforts will continue as long as there is a need for his helpful, guiding hand.

If Coach "I" weren't so human, it might be easier to accept the cold fact that he is "leaving his first love (coaching)" to accept his new post.

He said he feels sorry for his assistant coaches, who for 91 straight days have worked without rest from 12 to 14 hours daily with nary a day off. The thing coach humbly neglected to point out is that he was there every minute along with his faithful assistants.

The Fremont Cannon no longer remains at UNLV but coach Ireland will,

Coach "I" and daughter Chris capture the fever pitch emotion following the loss to UNR in the closing game of the season.

NORWICH, England (AP)--
Walter Worts was fined 50 pounds-$120-Thursday for having sexual intercourse with his wife in their side yard.

Only a row of flowers separated the loving pair from the garden next door, and the neighbor's two young children saw them. They told their mother, who telephoned the police.

"I love my wife and I cannot see why we should not show some affection to each other," said Worts, 39. "The children may have seen us, but it was not intentional."

Prosecutor John Bates argued that an Englishman may do what he likes in his castle, but it shouldn't be necessary for his neighbor to put up a fence to

Political Science Student Association

UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Nevada 89109

Harold J. Jacobsen

P.O. Box 1628

Carson City, Nev.

Dear Sir:

The Political Science Student Association would like to express their concern over recent developments in the political science department. The current movements to retain two faculty members and get full student representation has brought to light many disturbing factors within the department.

The most obvious of these developments is the animosity shown by members of the political science faculty toward the students who are involved in these movements. As students we are familiar with teacher favoritism for their "pet" students. This is something that we have adjusted to as a fact of academic life. The students know how to play this game of student-professor by reinforcing the professor's image of himself. Those of us who consider it abhorrent to play this game have tried to compensate by being better students. Even if this does not completely overcome the favoritism its overall effect is good.

However the situation now exists where several members of the faculty openly show their hatred for many of us in the association. Many students have noticed things like an erection of barriers that did not previously exist, an extension of the former social distance, an insistence on more formality and even to publicly ignoring simple greetings.

This is not a new trend in this department. Some of it has been going on for some time even before any of the current disagreements. What is happening now has served to bring more of these jealousies and animosities to the surface.

UNLV is a small university. The political science department has only seven full time professors. When several of them cannot objectively grade and rate a large number of their students because of petty dislikes, it severely limits the effectiveness of the department.

It narrows the choices that the students have and it destroys any possibility for an open expression of views. Many of us prefer this university because of its small size. We prefer it this was because we feel that more student-teacher contact, discussion and freedom of expression will give us the best education possible. The present condition in the political science department makes this impossible.

Another important change has been in the availability and accessibility of the professors in the department. In the past only one or two members of the faculty were readily available and really practiced the open door policy. The other were usually around only for a few hours in the morning and either maintained an attitude, or gave the students a feeling that was not conducive for meaningful, open discussions.

Lately, most of them have been even more difficult to find on campus at all, except for the classes they teach. There are exceptions to this of course and later we will show how we, of the Political Science Student Association intend to demonstrate them.

Since the first moves were made on the part of the students to become more active in the decision making process in our department we have been treated like incompetent children. Many members of the faculty believe that we have had a great deal of outside help from other departments. They just could not believe that their own students could be that organized and efficient. It is true that some professors in other departments have been involved in this issue but their assistance was neither solicited by us, nor always known to us. Much of what they did was on their own, following the dictates of their consciences and their belief in certain academic ethics and standards.

The students are in a tenuous position. Our entire future that we have tied up in our education is in jeopardy. Under most circumstances we have little positive evidence with which to prove our case. Preferential grading based on personalities, actual bullying in class, avoidance by the professors outside of the class, and the egocentric behavior of certain members of the faculty is felt and known to us but almost impossible to prove. The way that the system now exists leaves students at a tremendous disadvantage and they can do little about it. The most we can do is to avoid classes that are taught by the professors with whom we have conflicts. This has severely restricted our academic freedom and made it difficult or impossible to get required classes. The options that are available to most of us now give us at the most two or three instructors to choose from and even that slim margin is shrinking. The final result of a situation like this is either an extremely narrow education or none at all. Many students have already changed majors and others are seriously considering it. Some are committed to the discipline but not to the university. If this trend continues everyone will suffer, the students and faculty alike.

We as members of the P.S.S.A. and students of political science do not want to see this happen. We would like the department to improve. We would like a wider variety of classes and more variations within the separate disciplines. We are adults and would like to be treated as such. We want to be involved in decisions that affect our academic careers. We want the system to be open enough to alleviate the personality conflicts that invariably occur.

We would like the entire political science faculty to be reevaluated by the administration keeping these previously mentioned points in mind. What we propose to do is initiate our own student evaluation of the faculty.

The P.S.S.A. intends to poll all of the majors and non-majors who take political science classes. We want to get their true opinions about the department and the men in it. The questions that we intend to ask will be student oriented, leaving other values to be measured elsewhere. We want to show how the students actually feel and what direction they believe their education is going.

We know that this will reinforce many of the statements made in this letter. We desire to make it as unbiased as possible, so we intend to make up a committee to supervise the making of the questionnaire, the distribution, collection and final analysis of it. We would like this committee to be made up by members of P.S.S.A., members of the political science faculty, faculty from other departments and students from other departments to make sure that interpretations and reports are as objective as possible.

As soon as the questionnaire is completed and the committee set up we will forward copies to you. We will also forward the final report. This evaluation will be for students and by students and we would appreciate your consideration of it although that is not its main purpose.

We thank you for giving your valuable time to listen to our grievances. We believe that they are real and important and need to be openly expressed. We would like to be informed of your feelings on the above matters. We await your reply and due consideration of the matter.

Respectfully,
Peter J. Calos,
President

Just a little ditty I picked up at the game last Saturday.
Enough said.

The year books have arrived! Helen Barnett, editor, got her job when she promised a spring delivery. Congratulations, Helen! You're six months ahead of schedule, (too bad for all the seniors who have graduated and left for parts unknown.)

Occasionally there is someone who is doing such a fine job at whatever he is doing, that there are no complaints. The only time one hears his name is when something is going wrong. Well, such a man is K. Dean Black. "Dean" came to UNLV to take over the Union director's job after the messy firing of the former director. Dean was looked upon by many of the students here as being rather "square."

K. Dean Black

He had a long uphill battle. He had to win the respect and loyalty of those people with whom he worked, and whom he worked for.

Dean: When you first came to UNLV, you asked me one day, how long did I think it would take to win that battle. I did not know, but I suspected it might never happen. There were too many people who had loyalties "elsewhere."

But Dean is not an ordinary administrator. (When the going gets tough, the tough get going.) He will pitch in and help with even the lowliest tasks.

Just last summer, the information circle needed to have the tiles scraped from it, so new ones could be put on. Dean was there leading the way. And when he was through, he looked like a chimney-sweep who had not seen water in weeks.

But perhaps the most important point is this: He is the one man that people who know him will go to when there is a need to talk something out. Just a release. A lift.

Thank you Dean, for winning your battle. We need you.

Shelly Levine, during her administration fought long and hard for a birth control information clinic on campus. She recently reported to this column that it is not getting much use.

Are all our girls sterile? Frigid? Lesbian? Or perhaps they just don't give a f***.

I want to express my thanks to UNLV Rebel Ron Husband. Ron did such an excellent job on our front cover last week. Thank you, Ron!

Isn't it sad that one department on our campus is so concerned about maintaining its stronghold on the governing of that department? Kind of like an old monarch who does not realize that the people who pay the taxes have a right to say how they are used.

And sadder still when one discovers it's the Political Science Department which is treating its own students as though they had no education in the fine points of self-government.

But the saddest part is that the students must take their case to the Board of Regents.

And it all could have been avoided if the department had decided to let a few students into their departmental decision-making group. It has been said before, but it's worth repeating. Had the students been given a voice in their department (as in so many other departments at UNLV,) the staff of the department would have been in a very strong position. Had the students done a good job in electing representatives, and the representatives done a good job in governing, the department would have avoided all this trouble. Had the students done a poor job, the department heads could sit back and said "We told you so!"

Well, now the Regents are in on it, and the faculty looks like a bunch of inconspicuous fools. (Looks like?)

The UNLV administration is now going to evaluate the Political Science faculty, but after a boner like the faculty pulled, the admi-

termpaper ads

To the Editor:

I would like to ask you to reconsider your policy of accepting paid advertisements from term paper services. You would refuse to run ads for Organized Crime syndicates, would you not? I consider these groups to be instances of organized crime as well, despite the above-ground nature of their operations.

In spite of all the platitudes and the phony rationalizations, we all know that a purchased term paper is good for only one thing: to cheat with. Anyone who is involved with these outfits, or runs their ads, is by definition condoning, aiding, and abetting plagiarism of the worst kind. We may not be able to put these operations out of business completely, but we can certainly avoid giving them a helping hand.

I cannot accept your notion that, "college students should be mature enough to determine for themselves what method they will use to complete their assignments."

Love letters & other comments

This implies that cheating is just as acceptable an option as honest work. I think it is about time that we take a stand here with regard to some values that are fundamental to the University education process. John Tofano stated in The Yell (October 17, p. 2) that last year the student senate voted down a measure urging that these ads be banned. If he is correct, I would consider that also to have been a very unfortunate decision.

Being human, we all suffer from moments of weakness, and the easiest way out may appear the most attractive in moments of stress. But we need to remind ourselves what it is we came here for in the first place. We came to learn fascinating and important things, and we should avoid any actions that could only serve to undermine our basic purpose. One of the most important and potentially most rewarding undergraduate experiences is the putting together of one's own term project. It is the logical answer to the student's request for a chance to do independent work. Of course papers have been done before on similar topics, but that is not the point. Originality and creativity are relative. No undergraduate should receive a bachelor's degree in any field without the experience of producing what is for him or her an original, creative project. Sincerely,

Michael K. Schultz

nistration should not have to consider this too seriously.

It seems the Poly-Sci faculty have not learned their lessons. My next question is: How do they expect to impart any knowledge upon those people whom they consider to be idiots?

Well, my friends, wouldn't it be pleasant to see 'Ol Frank Wright reinstated as Department Head? With Richard Miller as his right hand man? Chances are they would refuse it anyway. Nice thought, though...

Another thought: Miller & Wright must be a helluva pair of teachers. NO ONE can tell me the Poly-Sci students learned their tactics from the people who flubbed it from the beginning in that department. They just don't know enough about political techniques to be able to teach it.
