Describing himself as a "realistic idealist" the Reverend Joseph Kohn, Cantor of Temple Beth Shalom in Las Vegas has accepted an appointment to the University of Nevada Board of Regents.

Reverend Kohn, planning to be an energetic member of the board, says he feels he can "contribute something to the growth" of the entire University system.

"Part of the reason I accepted the appointment," Kohn said, "is that I feel the most important institution in the city is the University."

The man selected by Governor Mike O'Callahan to fill the vacancy on the board is a busy man whose background includes writing textbooks, and working in the "underground" in Europe during World War II.

Kohn is also the educational director for the Temple, and among other activities he is also on the board of Half Way House and several international organizations.

Within days after his appointment, Kohn had met with Chancellor Neil Humphrey, acting UNLV president Donald Baepfer and student body president Dan Wade. He has already read the minutes of several of the recent regent meetings to get a feel of the direction of the board.

Emphasizing he had "strong opinions" regarding the disposition of the controversial campus drug raid earlier this year, and the question of student rights, Kohn said he would be talking specifically about these issues in the near future.

In an interview with The Yell he talked in a general way about the question of student rights. "In policy matters the student body should be involved in all aspects," Kohn said.

However he was not sure that he would be in favor of students having a direct vote "in all areas involving financial matters."

The new regent went on to say "it is important to always monitor student feelings because in the final analysis

"... the most important institution in the city is the University."

"... in policy matters the student body should be involved in all aspects."

"... our school is just coming into its own."

"... I am a realistic idealist."

they can make and break a university."

"a good university is not only important to the student, it is also an important asset in the community, and can be a drawing factor for the area," Kohn said.

The regent said "a person must have a place where he can expand his own knowledge no matter what profession he is in."

Arriving in Las Vegas in 1959 when there were only three buildings at UNLV with 400 students, Kohn says he wants to see the University grow. The regent said at the moment he was not prepared to say exactly what areas he would like to see "added or expanded".

But, he did say, "it should not be necessary for our young people to go out of state to school unless they desire to do so."

Kohn said that the charge of student apathy "has some validity". He feels that one of the reasons for the lack of interest in campus life is that "most of the students are from Las Vegas and live at home."

This feeling of apathy is changing, Kohn said, and this change was due in part to the sports program...an area he feels "our school is just coming into its own in."

And for that reason Kohn says "I am very much in favor of a sports program."

Kohn added "Identification with the school comes from having more activity on campus for students which I think will increase with the years, and hopefully I can contribute something along these lines."

Student identification with the university "does not necessarily come by the process of reason, but rather by an emotional attachment to the school itself," the regent concluded.

Although his first board meeting is a month away, December 7th, he was asked if he plans to run for election next year. Kohn said it was too early to tell, but he added, that if he does have an announcement, "it will be made in plenty of time."

Senator Muskie CSUN speaker

Senator Edmund S. Muskie, a Democrat from Maine, will join the list of CSUN guest lecturers when he speaks to UNLV students in the University Ballroom this Friday, at 8 pm.

Senator Muskie first came to the public eye when he was appointed Democratic nominee for Vice-President of the United States in 1968. Presently, he is outspoken on matters involving the Watergate Affair and feels the matter should be pursued until the truth is brought out.

In 1942, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy and served as a Junior officer on destroyer escorts. In 1946, 48 and 50, he was elected to the Maine House of Representatives and served as minority leader his second and third terms. He was elected Governor of Maine in 1954 and 1956, and was elected United States Senator, for the first time in 1958.

During his stay in the Senate, Muskie was Chairman of the Legislative Review Committee, assistane Majority Whip, and Chairman to the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Long recognized by his peers as a leader in the fight for clean air and water, Senator Muskie has written most of the key environmental legislation of the last decade. He was responsible for writing the Clean Air Act of 1963, the first major Federal Law aimed at air pollution.

His involvement in international relations has been crucial as he consistently supported legislative efforts to cut off all funds for the Indochina War by a certain date, conditional upon the return of our prisoners, an accounting of those missing in action, and the safety of our withdrawing troops.

The Senator first visited the Soviet Union in 1959 as a member of a Senate Committee to inspect hydroelectric projects. He returned to the USSR in 1965 as a part of a round-the-world trip with Senator Mansfield's fact-finding commission. In 1971, the Senator met with Premier Kosygin and Foreign Minister Gromyko in Moscow on matters of diplomacy.

Senator Muskie's lecture is free to full-time students, $1.00 for faculty, and $2.50 for the general public.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff,
v.
WILLIAM W. MORRIS,
Defendant.

Criminal - LV 2301

INDICTMENT for violation of Title 26, United States Code, Section 7206(2) and Title 18, United States Code, Sections 371 and 1621.

Morris Re-indicted

A University of Nevada Regent has been re-indicted by a Las Vegas Federal Grand Jury, and at the same time indicted on a new charge.

The new indictment reads in part: "count one...William W. Morris...did wilfully and knowingly aid and assist in, and counsel, procure and advise the preparation and presentation...of an income tax return...which was false and fraudulent."

"count two...William W. Morris...did wilfully combine, conspire, confederate, and agree with Alan E. Jarlson...to defraud the United States by impeding, impairing, obstructing and defeating the lawful function of the U.S. Treasury."

"count three...William W. Morris...did wilfully and knowingly testify falsely...Morris then and there well knew and believed that the testimony given by him was not true."

Morris, a 46-year-old University Regent is accused of guiding newsman Alan Jarlson into making a $63,000 expense deduction on his 1969 income tax return. The alleged deduction was made in connection with the sale of mining claims by Jarlson to the Hughes Tool Company.

The indictment contends that Morris planned to cover-up the expense deduction by issuing four checks to make it appear that other individuals earned the money by helping with the sale of the mining claims.

The perjury charge against Morris came after he testified during a federal court hearing. U.S. Attorney for Nevada DeVoe Heaton claims Morris lied when he testified during the court hearing in connection with certain advice he allegedly gave Jarlson.

No trial date has been set.

Students for Impeachment

Ron Smith, UNLV History student, and James Arrendale, a community social worker, returned November 5 from their Washington mission. Smith and Arrendale had circulated petitions to impeach the President and after having obtained approximately 3500 signatures left for Washington, D.C. on October 31 on a hitchhiking trek across the country to deliver the petitions to David Towell, Nevada's Congressional representative.

Smith reported their reception in Washington was encouraging from both Senators Cannon and Bible, and they ultimately delivered 3500 signed petitions to Senator Bible, inasmuch as Senator Cannon was busy as Chairman of the Committee to confirm Gerald Ford as the new Vice-President.

Resolutions to impeach the President must emanate from the House, however Rep. Towel was totally inaccessible, and according to Smith, Towel's office expressed no knowledge of the petitions.

Despite a lot of local publicity, especially on television, Towel's office expressed no knowledge or concern about the local grass roots movement.

Smith reported it took he and Arrendale about five days to collect the signatures on the petitions, and another five days to make the trip to Washington. Petitions are still being circulated, and Smith intends on forwarding subsequent petitions to Washington.

Freshman Testing

The University College is providing a battery of Educational and Vocational tests for freshman students. These tests will be helpful in learning more about one's aptitudes, interests, abilities, and achievement levels. The tests are open to any University College student and there will be no charge. The dates for these tests are:

November 19 (Mon.)

12:05 pm, in Humanities 245

November 29 (Thurs.)

7:00 pm, in Education 203/204

You must register with the secretary in the University College office, Frazier Hall, room 110 at least one day before administration of the tests.

Do you need library help?

If you're interested in getting library help with your school work, please drop by the Reference Desk. We're eager to help you.

We're also interested in getting your feedback, ideas, complaints, etc. about the UNLV library and our service. If you don't like to come into the library, stop by and tell us why. If we're doing something right, tell us---we like the thunder of applause like everyone else!

We are serious about giving you special help whenever you need it. If you don't know where anything is in the library, we'll give you a quick, relatively painless tour.

If you know where to find something, but not how to use it, ask us and we'll tell you all we know about it.

If you are pursuing some special topic for a class or even for your own enrichment (as they say in academe), we may be able to show you special material or offer unusual suggestions on how to approach your subject. You might even want to come over and relax with something from our Rebel Collection.

Student seats for basketball

With basketbal season approaching amid rumors that non-students tickets will be almost impossible to obtain, the CSUN Senate on November 6 focused its attention on student seating and ticket distribution for the coming games.

Sherman Bennett, representing the Booster's Club, explained that students would be allotted 1/3 of the available seating in the Convention Center. The remaining seats would go to scholarship contributors, boosters who have donated at least $375 for a partial athletic scholarship.

The remainder of tickets would be sold as season tickets on a first come first serve basis. The seating capacity of the Convention Center is 6200. 2000 tickets would be allotted for CSUN members.

When questioned about the limited amount of student seating and the fact that students will have to sit in their assigned seat perhaps preventing cheering sections, Bennett replied "That's the way it is".

"These people paid a lot of money to be sitting in row M,N,O,P," said Bennett. He added that Rebel supporters are not going "to give more money if they get bad seats".

President Dan Wade also pointed out that students can attend all athletic events for the price of $18 a year whereas some people are paying $50 for season basketball tickets.

Tickets will be issued for students two days prior to each game.

Bennett also stated that an attempt to check CSUN i.d. cards to prevent scalping would be made, but he also conceded since there was no picture on the i.d. some students would still give away or sell their tickets.

New Senate bylaws concerning senate attendance were approved. Failure to attend a meeting even if a quorum is not reached now constitutes an absence. Senators must also attend a minimum amount of meetings to obtain their salary of $7.50 a month.

In other business, Hank Eiler was elected Senate Protempore. Eiler as Protempore would succeed the current vice president in case of his resignation.

Senator Steve Jenkins was elected to the Appropriations Committee.

YELL operating policy and quality was again discussed and tabled until the next meeting. Senator Hank Eiler suggested that all senators whould visit the pub-

Senator Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, is slated to speak on the UNLV campus Friday November 16th 8pm in the Student Union Ballroom.

Guess Who Concert A Post Mortem

by Greg Waddilove

The first of two promised "super concerts" is over and done with. The Guess Who concert, Friday night, was at least an artistic success.

In other respects the whole affair was a dismal failure. Let me count the ways.

First: Less than 1,000 CSUN students went to the concert. In light of the fact that over 6,500 people are taking classes at UNLV that is not so hot.

If that many showed up at a pep rally or signed up for one class, that would be noteworthy.

The fact that student government looks upon that turnout as a success indicates to what degree they are elitist in attitude and isolated from the mainstream of the campus.

Second: Preliminary estimates from CSUN spokesmen indicate that anywhere from $4,000-$6,000 was lost on this venture.

Why then is everyone in student government walking around with self-satisfied grins on their faces?

Hopefully it isn't because they lost only a fraction of what they could have. It is very unfortunate for the UNLV student body, but that is probably why. In their eyes that they did not lose the $20,000 it was possible for them to lose they had a success.

Wrong kids. It is nice to earn while you learn, but if 6,500 full and part-time students thought about how their money was being wasted they would have the lot of you recalled.

This leads into point three: In conversations with student government people, they freely admitted that they did not know what they were doing.

Sooner or later we'll get the hang of this concert business. That was the general attitude.

It is lucky for UNLV that the community is willing to go out of its way to make things easy for the college kids.

Can you imagine what a real, honest to goodness, grown up rock promoter would be going through after having blown thousands of dollars? He would be wondering where he could dig up the money to pay off his backers.

Fourth, and most important: The maturity and responsibility of university students must be called into question because of the way CSUN handled (or mishandled) Guess Who.

For months, THE YELL has been sticking its neck out, calling for the complete sovereignty of student government. This paper has been fighting the plans of University Chancellor, Neil Humphrey, to keep CSUN funds in an agency account controlled by the Board of Regents.

The financial naivete and irresponsibility exhibited by CSUN makes Chancellor Humphrey's case more credible than ever. How unfortunate for us.

It must be clear by now that the money lost on Friday night's concert isn't half the problem.

CSUN Activities dipped into funds, allocated to other CSUN bodies, to pay various bonds and fees that a new concert policy surprised them with.

The most notable of these misappropriations were funds earmarked, by the CSUN Senate, for THE YELL.

THE YELL was informed by its printer that some $3,400 in printing bills was past due. CSUN was unable to meet its financial and contractual obligations because $35,000 was being tied up by CSUN Activities for the concert. Not all of that money belonged to Activities.

Under those circumstances, YELL editors decided not to publish the week of November 5-9.

Unlike other parts of CSUN, THE YELL is striving to function like the business it actually is.

This paper will generate about $18,000 in advertising revenue, for CSUN, this year. In order to do this THE YELL must have the respect of present and potential business associations.

CSUN should adopt the same philosophy. Without the influence of Acting University President, Dr. Donald Baepfer, and the goodwill of the community, enormous sums of money and prestige would have been lost.

CSUN should realize that THE YELL remained silent, despite our private feelings, about the way the Guess Who concert was being run.

This paper did not wish to jeopardize the success of the concert.

We offer qualified congratulations to CSUN nonetheless. From all reports, the music was outstanding and the event went off rather well.

Law School Criteria Unfair

by TERRY MARREN

I know at least 35 of you out there have recently taken the Law School Admission Test (L.S.A.T.)

We need to ask ourselves just how meaningful this test is in determining the following:

1. Our general knowledge
2. Our ability to be successful in law school.

We only know one thing is certainly true—if we get less than a score of 500 we are forced to find a new profession.

Dr. Lorne Seidman, Chairman of the Business Department and a lawyer, stated recently about the artificial language section, "I'm not at all sure clear about what this section has to do with law school."

He is one of several concerned faculty members and students who believes that a serious revision of this test is now needed.

The L.S.A.T. was theoretically a useful tool in aiding both the law school and the prospective law student. In the last five years, however, this once neutral tool has turned into a coercive weapon.

Many law schools such as Arizona State, for example, have even stopped accepting letters of reference. They only want the G.P.A. and the L.S.A.T. score.

We now must consider the point spread of the L.S.A.T. Two sessions ago the UNLV mean was about 450. During the last session, the mean was about 480. I'm afraid that this test last week will be the worst one yet.

What do the law schools want? Most of the catalogs state a required L.S.A.T. score of better than 550 minimum. Here at UNLV those scores are few and far between.

What happens to those of us with less than 550? In the past the prospective law student has had two other devices to squeeze through the narrowing door. These were:

1. reference
2. G.P.A.

Now the references are losing importance and the G.P.A. helps if it is at least 3.3.

We seem to be coming to the time when the L.S.A.T. will be the only consideration. It is so convenient to objectively choose students as the result of a four hour test designed to cause mental diarrhea and nothing else. When one comes out of that test session he or she realizes that their chances of practicing law may have gone right out the window. Rage is replaced by despair.

All of us who took the last L.S.A.T. were suddenly hit with a completely new section. It was so bizarre and tricky, that no one whom I spoke with felt easy about it. That one section will probably keep another 50,000 students out of the nation's law schools.

I'm not saying that the L.S.A.T. should be abolished. I feel that it could be a very valuable tool again if it was revised and properly applicant.

The problem with all tests of this type is that it only measures the degree of conditioning and exposure the student has had in certain areas. The admission standards should be tough, but not slanted and inhuman.

But I'm sure that as long as the American Bar Association has anything to say about the standards, they will only continue to become more and more arbitrary. This protects the incompetents who got into law when the getting was good.

A New Yell Feature

The Law and You

by RUSS DAINES

This new column was prompted by the dozens of students and citizens who stop police officers daily with questions about the law.

Hopefully, some of the misconceptions and misunderstandings concerning the police, criminal law and how it relates to you can be cleared up. Too many of us are guided by naive or false notions about the criminal justice system, although it should be kept in mind that some laws are arbitrary and all laws are subject to different interpretations.

The author is a current fulltime policeman (patrolman) with a local agency, married with two children, and a full-time student at UNLV. The column will not be a soapbox for the police, nor a pacifier for students, or a biased blast at the "establishment", but a factual exposure of criminal law.

This column will be devoted to frankly answering any questions you the student may have concerning criminal law and how it affects you. Answers to questions will be as objective as possible and when an opinion is slipped in it will be made obvious. Letters, postcards, or whatever should be sent to The Yell or you can catch me (if you can) in one of the hallways or suffering over a coffee in the student union.

All areas of law enforcement that are in the student's eye today such as laws of arrest, search and seizure, narcotics, "kid crimes", alcohol laws and your rights and guarantees under the constitution will be explored.

Much thanks goes to Ken Baxter of The Yell for accepting the idea of this column. He also felt the need for some type of a factual forum in regards to law enforcement. It is with high hopes that this column is launched, so remember to write to The Yell with any questions you may have.

Nixon Off Base In Energy Speech

by DAVID KELLEY

The President has given official government endorsement to the energy crisis. His stamp of approval came in a television statement that urged consumers to lower heating temperatures in home and industry; and state governments to limit highway speeds to 50 miles per hour.

There seems to be little disagreement that such measures are necessary-- indeed vital; however, Mr. Nixon seems to be missing an obvious point? Why is there an energy crisis at all?

It isn't that the energy crisis has suddenly sprung upon us. The facts of our insatiable appetite for energy have been lying there waiting for someone in authority to take action. No one has.

Indeed, until recently, the utility companies have been urging us to consume more and more power by offering lower rates for conversion to "total electric living."

Industry has been building bigger and more inefficient autos, and has produced such exotic contrivances as electric toothbrushes and can openers.

The basic problem is that no one in government has looked beyond day-to-day matters to undertake long-range planning and research into energy needs or energy alternatives.

One obvious remedy would be to divert highway trust fund monies to a much more urgent requirement for mass transit. President Nixon has not supported the idea.

We face serious problems that need serious answers. Government has been unwilling to search for them.

Opinion Briefs

How is our law school coming along? It wasn't six months ago that the Pre-Law Students Association was highly vocal and active. Whatever happened to them and their supporters?

The new wave of academic reform sweeping UNLV will force the state to provide all the graduate and professional schools imaginable.

No one else will want our graduates. It is not enough that you cannot flunk a class, now there's something called a bankruptcy semester.

Sixteen hours of F, I mean NG, and presto it never happened. The old slate is wiped clean.

A better idea for student fees. THE YELL is NOT knocking concerts or the movie program.

With an annual budget of around $100,000, CSUN could be putting books in the library or pay the salary of a visiting professor.

A lack of interest, awareness or money or something is causing anxiety in some areas of the campus.

First of all, library book check-outs is at an all-time low. No one knows the reason.

Speculation suggests, profs are requiring fewer term papers (unlikely), students are doing their studying and research somewhere else (where?), or the library is suddenly inhospitable.

Enrollment is way down for classes scheduled at night (some classes that is). What's odd is that freshman anthropology attendance is way off. Blame is being put on the University College advisor's. Apparently they are filling up the required courses.

Physical science classes are reportedly in a bind also.

Between low attendance and the lack of federal dollars, things are pretty grim over there.

To all concerned:

I am a student and employee of this university and I recently came across a paper you distributed to all faculty and staff encouraging them to let their children participate in your first annual Women's Club Holiday Card drawing contest. The details were given regarding prizes and recognition to be awarded to the winner. Actually, it was a cute idea until one read rule #5, which stipulated that the emphasis was to be placed on a non-religious theme, and that the entries would be judged on the "originality and universal appeal" in this area.

In light of all the good the Women's Club has done for UNLV, it surprised me that you would make this kind of a mistake. Taking religion out of Christmas takes all the meaning away from the holiday. I find it hard to believe that millions of people all over the world set aside December 25 in honor of the nocturnal antics of a fictitious fat man and his team of flying reindeer! What is Christmas but a religious holiday?

As parents, you have more influence on your young children than anyone else, and look at the kind of example you are setting for them! One does not have to be a fanatic Christian to honor the birth of the finest man who ever lived. Our entire value system is based on this man's life principles of love and concern for persons other than oneself. I can think of no theme which has more "universal appeal" than that.

I apologize for the harshness of this letter, as it is clearly not in keeping with the peaceful spirit of Christmas. But my conscience would not permit me to let this go unsaid. We have to put up with commercialism in Christmas before, but this the straw that broke the camel's back (much to the dismay of the poor wise man who now has to walk!).

You stated that this was the first contest of this kind ever held at UNLV, and I really hope it will be the last. I have discussed this matter with many members of the faculty and staff with whom I am associated, and it was unanimously agreed that you owe us an apology and an amendment to rule #5, at least making a religious theme optional. However, if these are not provided, you can be sure to have my earnest wish that, in the midst of your holiday shopping rush, your packages rip, your car stalls, you lose your tranquilizers and your 18-hour girldle lets you down!

Sincerely,
Jan Novosel

To the Editor:

I read your short OPINION BRIEF concerning tenure for University of Nevada professors.

As the system of tenure is equally regressive in the education system throughout the United States it should be abolished and replaced with an unprejudiced system that evaluates the educator by his ability to teach.

The present system retards the individualism of the professor and in the long run breeds incompetency.

There has been an abundance of rhetoric pro and con concerning tenure.

The pro arguments have come primarily from educators while the con has come from a multitude of people both in and out of education who see the fallacies of the system and who offer alternatives that would evaluate each educator by his or her ability to teach.

Those that advocate tenure offer arguments in favor of the system based on personal security the system affords rather than the merit of the system.

I disagree with the statement that to be published denotes a "quality scholar". That statement is an insult to the intelligence of an idiot. If that statement is true, then every, quote, "author", unquote, who has ever written a "screw book" is a quality scholar.

Tenure has nothing to do with the competency to teach. It has more relevance to kissing the "head" of the department's ass and utilizing shelf space in a library to collect dust.

Those educators that are competent know it; their students know it better than anyone and I believe educators should be compensated for their competence like other professionals.

Rid education of the incompetent that the unprecedented and archaic system has bred and protected for so many years; pay the competent and let them devote their energies to education of students and perhaps there will be no students graduating that cannot read and write and converse in either secondary or college level education.

CSUN brings Guess Who

by Pat Denley

Student government leaders labeled "a success" the Guess Who concert held Friday night in the Convention Center rotunda.

Gross revenues for the CSUN-sponsored affair were almost $20,000, roughly $5,000 short of the amount needed to break even.

Student tickets sold were 979 out of a total 4,584 Guess Who tickets purchased. However, because a number of students apparently let non-students use their CSUN cards to get in, the exact student attendance was not known.

The three acts for the concert, Guess Who, B.W. Stevenson, and Skurow, were paid $12,500, $2,500, and $300 respectively. And in approximate figures, required security cost $2,500, publicity, $2,500, and for use of the hall the Convention Authority received 10% of gross revenues, about $2,000.

At the concert, the crowd was generally well-behaved as each group appeared on time without complication.

The average age of the concert-goers in the two-thirds full hall was probably 13 to 16.

The volunteer students working at the ticket windows and turnstiles, in the parking lot, up on the stage, and as student security were well organized. CSUN received praise from police and Convention Center officials for smooth handling of the event.

After being put under the assumption that only a bond for the amount would be necessary, student leaders discovered that $35,000 in cash would have to be deposited with the Convention Center as a guarantee in case refunds were needed the night of the concert.

At this point, CSUN could have pulled out of the concert, but it was decided that it would still be feasible to promote the show.

Wade stated, "It was the biggest concert CSUN has ever put on and we came close to breaking even."

had intervened with authorities and arranged permission for students to deposit the remaining $15,000 the Monday before the concert.

By Monday however, advance ticket sales had not been substantial enough for more than a small portion of the $15,000 to be paid. The remainder was deposited the day of the concert.

Having to put up the cash deposit plus other concert expenses put CSUN in a severe financial bind.

In the few weeks previous to the concert, all available CSUN money was tied up, with payment of any bills coming due having to be deferred until after the show.

A scheduled issue of THE YELL was not published the week before the concert because of an over-$3,000 printing bill unpaid.

YELL Editor-in-Chief Ken Baxter said it would be "unfair to Allied Printers" to allow the bill to go any higher.

The new Convention Center rock concert policy, which called for refund deposit, also laid down other new rules for rock promoters, such as increasing security, and a crackdown on drugs, and a no-smoking policy inside the rotunda.

With few problems occurring at the concert with the new regulations, many observers felt CSUN had broken the ground for other promoters.

CSUN President Dan Wade said he was "proud" that students had put on the concert.

"Nobody ever pulled it off before," said Wade.

"The students enjoyed it, the Guess Who were great," he added.

CSUN Treasurer Troy Newberry echoed other CSUN leaders in saying, "We learned a lot and the experience was invaluable."

Newberry said the experience of organizing the concert "improved student government".

There are no definite plans at present to have a similar concert next spring, but CSUN leaders could be receptive to the idea if students and the student Senate agree.

Above, Metropolitan Police officers make one of the few arrests at the concert. Police generally reported all was quiet in and around the Convention Center. At least one officer commented that no trouble was expected because Guess Who was not a "hard rock" group.

As concert-goers entered the Convention Center, plainclothes and uniform security were prepared to search for drugs anyone looking "suspicious". However, the security people present took a "hands-off" attitude overall and not many people were searched or questioned.

Learning Conference

A conference dealing with the problems of learning disabilities in children will be conducted Nov. 16 and 17 at UNLV. The workshop, open to all interested parents, educators and students in the community, is co-sponsored by the Student Council for Exceptional Children at UNLV and the Nevada Association of Children with Learning Disabilities.

Theme of the gathering is "Perception and the Learning Disabled: an Interdisciplinary Conversation with the Classroom Teacher." A nominal conference fee includes a luncheon.

Offering one hour of graduate or undergraduate credit, the workshop will convene at 5 pm Nov. 16 in the main auditorium of the Teacher Education Building on campus. It will continue from 8:30 am through 5:30 pm the next day.

One of the featured lecturers is Ms. Elizabeth Oder, who is past head teacher and present master teacher and lecturer of the Marianne Frostig Center of Educational Therapy in Los Angeles.

"Special" music Concert series

A totally new type of concert series sponsored by the University Musical Society (UMS) will be inaugurated next month at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

The "Special Artists Series", featuring five concerts by world-renowned solo vocalists, instrumentalists, and chamber ensembles, will be offered with tickets on sale to the public.

"This is the first time UMS has attempted a paid concert program, in addition to the free concerts that are held as usual on the campus on Sunday afternoons", said Harold Cunningham, president of the group.

UMS has sponsored concerts of high quality on Sundays free to the public for the past 15 years. The "Special Artists Series" however, will be the first offering of an admission concert series.

"We are aware of course that Las Vegas is a 24-hour town, with many of the activities centered during the night, and that was the reason that in the past concerts were presented in the afternoon," said Cunningham. "But we feel there is also an audience that can come in the evening."

A season ticket is being offered through the UNLV music department at the price of $10 for adults and $5 for children and military personnel. If purchased at the door, tickets will cost $3 and $1.50 per concert.

The series will begin with the presentation of Rumanian violinist Nejmi Succari on Nov. 23. Baritone Richard Dales of Arizona State University is scheduled Dec. 20; pianist James Fields, who recently won the competition of the Leventritt Foundation, will perform Jan. 26; the unusual ensemble Mrs. Antigua de Paris is scheduled on Feb. 28; and the Arriaga String Quartet will complete the series with a performance on March 18.

"Mr. X-Ray" UNLV teacher

Remember the last time you stood bare and defenseless before the cold nozzle of a giant x-ray machine?

It took a lot of trust to twist yourself into an awkward radiographic position and submit your body--voluntarily--to the zap of a zillion x-ray photons.

But, relax, chances are very good that you were in the capable hands of a technologist who learned his profession, at least in part, from Prof. Charles A. Jacobi of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Jacobi might be called "Mr. X-Ray" because all he has contributed to the modern field of radiologic technology.

Since then, he has written textbooks and laboratory manuals which have become the standard learning guides for a majority of the nation's college- and hospital-based x-ray programs.

And now the program he has built during the past six years at UNLV has received the ultimate compliment by the profession.

"from now on," Jacobi explains, "any x-ray school in the United States seeking approval of the American Registry of Clinical Radiography Technologists (ARCRT) must do everything the way we have done it here. In other words, we're the national model."

Jacobi wrote the registry's headquarters last February asking about its requirements for membership and school certification. Instead of responding by letter, the organization's director--- Charles Huddleston---flew to Las Vegas to find out more about the UNLV program first hand.

Impressed with what he saw, Huddleston soon asked Jacobi to re-write all of the essential requirements for schools applying for registry approval, using his program at UNLV as the archetype.

Jacobi complied with a detailed 11-page report, citing minimum requirements for faculty, physical facilities, curriculum, students, administration and organization. In addition, he wrote new regulations for the certification of teachers for the whole profession and a performance evaluation test which will be administered to any student in the U.S. wishing to be certified by the registry.

"Of course, the real reason for all of this is not to bring attention to our campus, but to improve the overall competence of the men and women who deliver the x-ray dose to the American public," said Jacobi.

In a speech last month at the registry's national conference in Phoenix, Jacobi decried the existence of x-ray "slave-labor" programs in which trainees work in hospitals and clinics at low pay while learning their skills partially on live patients, rather than the dummy models used at approved college-based programs such as in Las Vegas. "Any student or trainee is going to make mistakes," he said to the 200 technologists in attendance. "This type of on-the-job training is imperiling the health of patients unnecessarily."

Jacobi says there are nonuniform standards for the operation of such x-ray schools. Therefore, many are fly-by-night operations which teach the student barely enough to pass an examination, and not much else.

Hopefully, with the stringent new regulations Jacobi has offered the national registry, patients will be assured first-rate treatment by technologists who could not escape his reforming influence upon the profession.

He started the first radiographic technology school in the United States back in 1952 in Klamath Falls, Ore.

Archeology

Students and staff members of the Anthropology Department and the Museum of Natural History participated recently in meetings of the Nevada Archaeological Association in Tonopah. The Nevada Archaeological Association is a state-wide organization which meets twice a year to present and discuss problems concerning the protection of historic and prehistoric sites in Nevada.

Dr. Patricia A. Geuder has accepted the position of state coordinator for the National Council of Teachers of English Awards in Writing for 1973-74. She has also been selected to serve on the NCTE editorial board for the national publication "Achievement in Writing".

Chemistry

The Chemistry Department has been added to the list of approved programs by the American Chemical Society. It means that UNLV's program of study in chemistry meets the society's requirements for professional education, and that graduates from UNLV are now eligible for ACS certification as professional chemists.

Whats new at the Bijou?

HELEN MIRREN and MALCOLM McDOWELL have a fleeting love affair in Lindsay Anderson's "O Lucky Man!"

O Lucky Man at Boulevard

Is life a vicious circle? Does it seem to be a series of lucky breaks followed by predictable disaster? A never ending Mobius strip marked with uppers and downers? If it is, then you have a lot in common with Mick Travis, our hero, portrayed by Malcolm McDowell (who starred in Clockwork Orange). O LUCKY MAN may remind you of Clockwork Orange since many of the same actors are used, and, in a way the plot seems similar. However, there is enough here to keep your mind too busy to notice parallels.

The beginning is innocent enough ... Mick is training to become a coffee salesman when a lucky break catapults him into a regional sales position. On his way to the new job, he is witness to an accident and some rather unorthodox police behavior (or is it unorthodox?). After an uneventful spell of coffee selling, he finds himself at a bawdy party which seems to be a way of life for those who want to get ahead (you scratch my back, I'll scratch yours!).

Suddenly, there's new territory thrust at him. Now begins a series of wild, bizarre episodes of capture and escape. If you are easily grossed out, be forewarned.....there's a couple of "I don't want any more of my POP-CORN!!!" scenes. Are we dealing with real life here or not? If the ladder to success, money, etc. is like this, I think I'll stay on the bottom rung!

Scenes are separated by blackouts, which although artsy are effective. The music seems definitely written specifically for this film and is often presented a part from the action in concert form.. The composer-singer is Alan Price who also acts in the film. The music is great-- and so is the film. RECOMMENDED!

What's 10 inches long and full of meat? Ha! Ha! WRONG, it's Peppina's meatball sandwich. That's right, for all you meatheads out there, Peppina's has the meat ball sandwiches that are not bad, as a matter of fact are very good. Peppina's Greek and Italian Deli, formerly Antonio's, is one of those local, down on the corner type deli's. It's simple and full of great Italian and Greek munchies.

It's a take-out deli, so don't plan on staying. Although there is a handy curb out the door. That is if you can dig curb service. Anyway their meatball sandwiches are 10 inches or longer and they are full of those little meatballies all covered with thick, juicy red sauce. It's almost the perfect meatball, but sorrowfully enough is not. So needless to say the search of the perfect meatball continues. In the meantime, trip on down to Peppina's and pick up 10 inches, it'll only cost you between $1.10 and $1.75.

And even Linda Lovelace couldn't eat one of these sandwiches in one bite, by serge

If you think you're beaten, you are,
If you think you dare not, you don't,
If you'd like to win, but you think you can't,

It's almost a cinch you won't,
If you think you'll lose, you've lost,
For out in the world you'll find
Success begins with a fellow's will,
It's all in the state of mind.

Ful many a race is lost
Ere ever a step is run
And many a coward fails
Ere ever his work's begun,
Think big, and your deeds will grow;
Think small and you'll fall behind;
Think that you can and will,
It's all in the state of mind.

If you think you're outclassed, you are,
You've got to think high to rise,
You've got to be sure of yourself before
You can ever win a prize,
Life's battles don't always go
To the stronger or faster man,

But sooner or later the man who wins
Is the fellow who thinks he can.

There is a commune within the borders of the Sauternes district of France that produces what may be the sweetest wine in the universe.

In fact, this wine is so sweet, that it could be called the one and true "nectar of the Gods".

Most of the wines of the Sauterne district are sweet and crisp and very enjoyable with fish, cheese, sausage and girls. Then there is Barsac.

Barsac is sweet and yet not overpoweringly so to the pallet. Here is a wine that can be enjoyed with any food, person or place at any time of the day or year.

Because the wine is a regional blend of grapes, Barton and Guestier (known on your local wineseller's shelf as B&G Barsac) brings to you the most reasonable cost allowed.

With the cost of all imports going up like 100% and more in the next couple months I would suggest laying away a couple of bottles of this godly mixture. It may cost $4 plus now, but just wait till Nixon devaluates the dollar a few more times. Even Boone's Farm will go over a buck a bottle. Not that I care to compare the two.

After laying away some of this sweet stuff, just find yourself something sweet and lay away with the two. At least till your supply runs out.

In order to enjoy this delight (the wine) to its fullest, warm up the girl and chill the wine to between 45 and 50 degrees.

Then sit back (possibly by a fireplace, but a creaky radiator will do) play some mellow vibes, burn your own (candle) munch on some gouda or muenster cheese and sip your wine.

The rest, in this case, will be history.....

REBEL & SPORTS

Reno and Play-Offs Next!!

by Rick Harris

On Fan Appreciation Night at the Las Vegas Stadium Saturday night, the 12,124 fans were treated to an impressive showing by the possibly playoff-bound UNLV Rebels. The Rebels simply out-classed their Northern Arizona University Lumberjack opponents en route to an easy 42-14 victory.

The victory was again paced by UNLV's All-American candidate halfback Mike Thomas, who scored 3 touchdowns and rushed for 204 yards in 29 carries.

As a team the Rebels massed 379 yards rushing, with quarterback Mike Pry contributing with a 53-yard scramble in the opening quarter and Steve Matousek whose 47 yards included a 35-yard touchdown burst in the 4th quarter.

The Rebels scored the first time they got the ball as they marched 83 yards after receiving the opening kickoff. The key plays in the drive were a 52-yard scramble by Mike Pry and a 20-yard pass to Jesse Roberts. Mike Thomas carried the drive sweeping 3 yards to score his 19th touchdown of the season.

NAU came right back to even the game in the opening period on a 68-yard drive. NAU scored their TD on a 4th and one on the Rebel 21. Quarterback Wheatie Taveretti faked into the line on an option and scampered untouched for the tying touchdown.

However, on the ensuing kickoff Thomas Bywaters returned the ball 83 yards to the Lumberjack 10. Bywaters, frustrated because he did not return the kickoff for a touchdown spiked the ball into the astroturf and was awarded a 15-yard personal foul. But Mike Thomas on three consecutive plays totaling 25 yards scored his 2nd touchdown of the game and 20th of the season on a run of six yards.

Following a missed 49-yard Arizona field goal, the Rebels scored their third touchdown of the first half on a ten-play 80-yard drive.

Mike Thomas carried the ball on 8 of the 10 plays and scored his 3rd touchdown of the game on a 2-yard plunge. Mike Thomas needs only 135 yards next week against Reno to break the NCAA College Division rushing record of 1745 yards.

The Rebels opened the 2nd half as they ended the first. Following Walt Rozansili's recovery of a NAU fumble, the Rebels marched 68 yards for another score, this time scored on a quarterback sneak by Mike Pry. The key plays in this drive were a Mike Thomas run of 29 yards to the Lumberjack 2, which was preceded by a 20-yard pass to tight end Ralph Ev-anovich.

Mike Pry completed 6 of 10 passes for 96 yards to give the Rebel offense the diversity in attack which seemed to bemissing in prior games. Flanker Jesse Roberts was the leading Rebel receiver hauling in 4 passes for 63 yards.

The Lumberjacks appeared to be back in the football game when Jerry Wallace ran 67 yards for the second NAU touchdown.

But the 4th quarter belonged exclusively to the Rebels as they ran the Lumberjacks out of the stadium.

First Steve Matousek opened the final period with a 33 yard touchdown burst that completely shattered any hopes of a comeback by NAU. The Rebel defense held the visitors in check allowing only 30 total yards in the fourth quarter.

The Rebels finished the scoring on a 23-yard pitchout for a touchdown by freshman Mike Marshall. Marshall took a perfect pitch from reserve quarterback Tony Grantz, who waited to the last possible moment before he pitched out, cut back against the grain and romped into the end zone to register his first touchdown as a Rebel.

The Rebels close out their regular season next week with a tough contest against the University of Nevada at Reno on the road. Only last week did Reno upset Boise State, a highly ranked team that UNLV was hard-pressed to defeat, and will be looking forward to meeting the Rebels. In addition, a victory by the Rebels would give UNLV a prime shot at a playoff berth to determine the college division champion.

Turning in its strongest team performance of the year, the young UNLV harriers finished eighth among twelve teams at the Biola Invitational.

Reno won the team championship with 32 points, outdistancing runner-up L.A. State with 59 points and Westmont with 86 points.

UNLV finished a strong eighth with 209 points, outdistancing ninth place host Biola with 244 points. A very creditable performance considering UNLV's team consists of one junior and four freshmen.

Highest UNLV finisher was junior college transfer Dale Campbell; he over the hilly five mile course. Also finishing up near the front of the pack for the Rebels were Guy Smeltzer 34th 27:49, Larry Lyons 52nd at 30:14; Bert Curry 53rd at 30:28, Terry Downey 54th with 30:37, all freshmen from the Las Vegas area.

The individual championship went to Hans Menet of Reno who set a new course record of 24:36 in a field of 90 runners.

UNLV Sailors

On Nov. 3-4, last weekend, in varying wind conditions, the University Nevada Las Vegas Sailing Association and the Dunes Hotel hosted the first annual Dunes Regatta.

In 20-30 knot winds Saturday, skippers from Stanford, University of California, Irvine, San Jose State, Long Beach State, USC., U.C. Santa Cruz, Orange Coast College, College of Alameda, and UNLV sailed five races resulting in a three way tie for first place.

After eight more races on Sunday, Mark Hughes, from U.C. Irvine, won the Dunes Cup.

The next intercollegiate competition for the UNLV skippers will be the Maui Cup, hosted by Long Beach State, November 17.

The UNLV Sailing Association is looking for new members to sail with its existing crews so that the University can be better represented in future intercollegiate competition. If you don't have any experience in sailing, don't worry, we'll teach you and get you in on our many trips to the coast. The UNLVSA office is in rm. 308 of the S.U.B., office hours are from 12 to 2pm.

Basketball Tickets

Just to keep the record straight, UNLV students will have a full third of all the available seats at the convention center for this seasons basketball games.

Out of approximately 6000 seats students have 2081 seats reserved for them.

We'll talk with Sherm Bennett at the ticket office and keep you posted with more details...

18-year-olds must register

The Selective Service System no longer has the authority to induct young men into the armed forces but the draft is still in operation.

The law reads that a young man turning 18 years of age must register with the Selective Service System during the 30 days preceding or the 30 days following his 18th birthday. The requirement to register is a federal law and failure to do so is a felony.

The State Director of Selective Service has stated... "It would be regrettable for a young man to be faced with a felony because he was unaware or neglected his Selective Service responsibility. At Selective Services in Nevada are aware of this problem and anyone registering late because of a misunderstanding need not fear prosecution."

To enable UNLV students to fulfill this requirement as easily as possible, Mr. David Works, Director of Local Board #2, will be on campus in the Student Union on Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 12 and 13 between the hours of 9:00 am. and 3:30 pm. to register those students who have not already done so and to answer questions anyone may have regarding the current status of the Selective Service System.

Visitors are always welcome at the Olympia Brewing Company, Tumwater, Washington, 8 to 4:30 everyday. Oly®.

We're surprised that they don't claim it cures cancer.

The makers of STP Oil Treatment make it sound like a fountain of youth for old cars and a super tonic for new cars.

They claim it does everything from protecting engine parts to reducing heat, noise, friction, and wear.

They say it's the "racer's edge." Whatever that means. Well, here's what STP Oil Treatment really is.

It's a can of thick goo that makes the oil it's added to thicker.

But if you want a thicker oil, you can just buy a heavier grade of oil (like 40 or 50 weight) in the first place. Or if you want a "multi-viscosity" oil (like 10W-30), you can just buy that, too. And save the expense of STP. For most cars under almost all driving conditions, the right motor oil is all you'll ever need for your car's crankcase.

The very nicest thing we can say about STP Oil Treatment is that it's probably a waste of money. But there are less nice things, too.

STP can change the proportions of chemical additives (detergent, anti-rust, etc.) already formulated in most motor oils, and it can make cold weather starts harder.

Mercedes Benz even says it could invalidate their new car warranties.

Many motor oil manufacturers, including Kendall, Quaker State, Pennzoil and Valvoline, advise you not to use additives like STP.

Even Consumer Reports (July 1971) says you don't need STP. The makers of STP must have forgotten to mention all that. And what do you have on the other side? "The racer's edge." Whatever that means.
