Senator Muskie speech tonight 8:00, ballroom

1972 Democratic Presidential candidate Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine will speak on campus tonight, 8 p.m., in the Student Union Ball room.

Muskie's lecture, free to full-time students, is sponsored by CSUN.

Senator Muskie has been prominent in national politics since 1968 when then-Democratic Presidential candidate Hubert Humphrey was chosen by his party, and Humphrey in turn selected Muskie as his Vice-Presidential running mate.

The former Governor of Maine made his own bid for the nation's highest office in 1972, but after taking an early lead in the running fell back with Senator George McGovern eventually winning the nomination.

Recently Muskie has been outspoken in Washington D.C. calling for total investigation of the Watergate scandal, and stating that the possibility of impeaching President Nixon should not be overlooked.

Professor at nurses confab

An assistant professor of nursing recently represented the University of Nevada, Las Vegas at a geriatric nurses convention in Washington D.C.

Vivian Lindenberg, R.N., was among 250 nurses in attendance at the American Nurses' Association's national conference on geriatric nursing practice and was the only representative from Nevada.

The keynote speaker, Sen. Frank E. Moss of Utah, called on nurses to assume a central role in upgrading the quality of long-term care for the aged.

National experts reviewed the special problems of aged blacks, the role of ANA in developing national standards and promoting legislation for high quality health care for the elderly and the effects of reimbursement systems on the delivery of nursing care.

UNLV offered its first course in geriatric nursing care this semester and hopes to implement several workshops within the community working with the homes for the aged, commented Ms. Lindenberg.

Upcoming national legislation on medicare and health insurance was also discussed at length in hopes of bringing about the needed changes for the aged as soon as possible, she said.

Chivalry is lecture topic

Interested in what chivalry in medieval times was really all about?

Then attend a talk Monday night (Nov. 19) by Dr. John C. Unrue of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, a specialist in 13th and 14th century English literature.

Dr. Unrue will explain some of the chivalric ideals of the Middle Ages

He had prepared the address from various readings of both secular novels and religious works of the time.

Dr. Unrue is an associate professor and chairman of the English department at UNLV. The Medieval Colloquium is a group of people from the campus and community interested in the culture of the Renaissance and Middle Ages.

Students form profession club

Students are now forming a Pre-Professional club for the advisement and recognition of Pre-Medical, Pre-Dental, and Pre-Veterinarian majors. This club is recognized by the faculty and staff of UNLV.

Room 216A of the chemistry building has been designated the Pre-Professional office. This office is open to all students, regardless of major.

Catalogs for professional schools are available, along with school applications, WICHI (scholarship) information, and more information concerning the club.

The hours are Tuesday through Friday, 2-5:00.

The club proposes to advise the students on entering medical schools, present speakers on related subjects, and an advisement committee composed of faculty members.

All Pre-Professionals are invited to join. Sign up in room 216A of the chemistry building.

Israeli tells wars' damage

by Yoel Marcus

A Hebrew broadcast from Cairo said yesterday in a mocking tone that parents in Israel are "obsessed with worry" about the fate of their fighting sons and that this causes our country to be in a state of despair.

It's true. I cannot deny that every person who has a relative, son, or husband or friend in the battlefield is worried and feels great concern. It is also true that we believe in human life to be sacred. After all the pogroms, persecutions, wars and concentration camps--we do not want to lose even one soul.

I cannot but sadly confirm that the Egyptian leaders will never be able to understand that. A person like Sadat who is ready to talk about throwing a million soldiers--who have brothers, sisters, parents and grandparents--to death, only a person who dares to talk like that and is ready to do so, can be sarcastic about our "obsession with worry".

It is true: we are worried! But we don't wait; we pray that there will be no more casualties.

Bless the people who know and who is ready to fight--the way we do--yet does not want its sons to be dead.

Six hundred and fifty-six families were crying bitterly today when they heard the door-bell ringing and received the shocking and awful message of death. Six hundred and fifty-six people! This number does not even come close to the million Egyptians that Sadat is ready to sacrifice. Yet, the whole nation was seized with rage and was crying along with the families.

Despair? Who despairs? Our tears are not only an expression of pain but also an expression of our decision to exist as a people and as a nation, whether the Arabs like it or not.

Our tears are tears of steel. The Arabs can never understand this.

$9,000 raised for ballet group

The first patron-founders of the organization that supports the new Nevada Dance Theatre directed by ballet artist Vassili Sulich have officially contributed more than $9,000 to support the group in a season of concerts in 1974.

The professional ballet company, based at the music department of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, has also been awarded a $5,000 grant from the Nevada Council on the Arts.

"We have matched the state funds and reached beyond our goal," said Mrs. J. K. Houssels, Jr., member of the board of directors of the Nevada Dance Theatre Association.

"We have found a tremendous interest by the private citizens here in the community," she said. "There is a great demand to see a truly fine ballet company perform."

Sulich, the artistic director of the group, will choreograph the season's first concerts, one in January and the second in May.

'73 - '74 Intra Squad Track Meet

This Saturday UNLV students will get a chance to see what the '73-74 track team will look like.

An Intra squad meet starting at 12:45 for the running events and at noon the field events start with the pole vault and long jump.

Some of the people to watch are : Lloyd Mitchell in the hurdles and Jeff DeLuca in the shot, discus and javelin on the White Team. The Red Team will have greatly improved Guy Smeltzer in the Two Mile run against Weaver and Jones will be spearheading it out with Jeff DeLuca in the javelin throwing event.

Another man to keep your eye on is "Little Giant" Mike Jennetta in the pole vault, for the Red Team.

Although the team is equally split for the Intrasquad meet, the White Team anchored by "Lighting Lloyd" Mitchell and Red Team anchorman Qualheim could along with two of their teammates set a new collegiate 440 relay record. If so, the track team will just be maintaining the momentum of UNLV's "First Era of Excellence" and the schools' emergence as an athletic power.

Again, the UNLV INTRASQUAD TRACK and FIELD MEET will start at noon and climax with the Mile Relay at 2:15 this Saturday.

Frat Football

The Mu pledge class of Kappa Sigma fraternity beat the Sigma Chi pledges in a tremendous upset, by a 38 to 0 score.

Combining the running of Mike Marshall and the quarterbacking of pledge trainer Ken Willis, the Kappa Sigma pledges scored every time they had the ball.

A stubborn defense led by ends Mile Moore, Steve Henry, Jim Haugabou and cornerbacks Tommy Boudreau, Jim Fuller and Jeff DeLuca kept the Sigma Chi pledges out of the end zone all afternoon.

In the end it was the Sigma Chi's who surrendered the traditional victory keg to the Kappa Sigs Mu pledge class and their coach Danny Patton.

Intramural Basketball

Intramural Basketball standings are headed up by the SIX PACKS in first place with a three win no loss record. THE BUDS ARE second with a two and one record followed by the KAPPA SIGS and THE TEAM with a no win three loss record.

In the last round of play, THE BUDS got by THE TEAM by a 79 to 71 score. And, the SIX PACKS won by forfeit from the KAPPA SIGS.

And the Intramural program keeps on keeping on...

Harris wheel

by Rick Harris

If UNLV beats UNR this weekend in Reno, there's a good chance UNLV will be invited to play in the Division 2 playoffs.

What exactly are the Division 2 playoffs?

Early this year the NCAA voted to establish a national tournament for both segments of college level football.

There are 3 divisions of NCAA football; Division 1 : USC, UCLA, OHIO STATE etc. Division 2 : UNLV, HAWAII etc. And, Division 3 : Southwest Cucamonga College etc.

The NCAA this year for Divisions 2 and 3 established national playoffs to determine Division Champions.

For our Division 2 playoffs, the format consists of an eight team single elimination affair to be played on the first three Saturdays in December.

The first playoff game is between two teams from one of the four sections of the country, (west, midwest, mid-east and east).

With a win at Reno Saturday afternoon, UNLV becomes a primary candidate for one of the two regional berths considering the criteria for the choice of teams.

The second round of the playoffs pits the winners of the regional games against each other.

This year the semi-final games will match the West and Midwest against each other and the East versus the Midwest winners.

The winners from these games will then be playing for the Division 2 Championship.

The NCAA set up two standards of team eligibility.

The first item is that all the student athletes are eligible for post season competition. The second thing is the team's won lost record considering the strength of opponents on its playing schedule.

If a team qualifies under the NCAA standards, there are two more factors in determining what the first round playoff pairings should be.

The two points of criteria are the seeding of the teams and the quality of the available playing facilities for the first playoff game.

UNLV has one of the best Division 2 stadiums in the country; are seeded in the top 10 in the country and have played a relatively tough schedule which had some top seeded teams.

Therefore, if UNLV comes back from Reno with win number nine, it is a good bet that December first UNLV and the city of Las Vegas will be hosting the first round of the Division 2 playoffs.

I've got my seat all picked out for the game and am fading all money against UNLV.

NUMBER 1...HERE WE COME...

Head Coach Jerry Tarkanian (with ball) is discussing his ideas with Assistant Coaches Tony (Hot Dog) Morocco on the left (in sweatshirt) and Dan Ayala on the right (hands on hips). Lynn Archibald behind Ayala (leaning on Ayala's shoulder) and squeezing in from the bottom; Yell Sports

Editor Joe Hovsepian (on the floor between Morocco and Tarkanian). According to our sources, the subject was what action the basketball team would take in the event of a conflict of play dates with the football team, if the football team should go the whole way and get into the playoffs of the Division 2 Championships. One idea they came up with was having Paul Bunyan visit Las Vegas and offering the football stadium as a stable or corral for Paul's Blue Ox Babe for the duration of his stay. Coach Morocco suggested asking Paul to landscape Mt. Charleston and use the surplus earth to fill in the Las Vegas Basin.

It will be interesting to see what happens on playoff night and basketball season opening day December the first.

Basketball Tickets

Just to keep the record straight, UNLV students have a full third of all the available seats at the Convention Center for this season's basketball games.

From approximately 6000 seats, students have 2081 reserved for them.

The two biggest student areas are on one sideline and one section behind the basket.

Roger Barnson said the ushers at the games are off season UNLV athletes and have been coached on handling ticket problems and are virtual experts in locating and directing ticket-holders to their appropriate seats.

So there won't be any confusion about it; students get their tickets on a first-come-first-served basis and get only the one ticket their student status provides. Any other tickets must be bought like anybody else.

Also, if there are any "Stevie Slicks" out there who intend to get their student ticket and then scalp them to non-students, stand by, because this year there will be a super close look-out for any "jive" business and you must show your student body card of the ticket-holder won't get in...

The only thing is--if the big number comes up for the football team, who's going to the opening of the basketball season December first? Oh, well, whatever.....

The New Land

I suppose you've noticed how movies have been trying to portray the past as it really was. Many of them have been very successful--at least as far as reproducing material, visual images of the past. The New Land reproduces the excruciating effort and sometimes pain of starting and continuing life in a new land. I guess it starts where The Emigrants left off--same stars--Liv Ullmann and Max von Sydow. That doesn't mean that you had to have seen The Emigrants in order to understand the film--I didn't. If you have a tendency to get a bit squeamish at the sight of real blood and real death, then just prepare yourself for it. It is not the blood of violence, it's the blood of life. This country was built by people like this, and I'm convinced that it's shown to us as it must have been.

The story begins in 1850 in Minnesota. A Swedish emigrant family selects a homesite and starts their new life. Don't expect Indian battles and incredible suspense--sure, there's a small massacre--just enough of one to make a point. Liv really would rather be back in Sweden but forces herself, with the help of Max, through what must be described as the limit of just making it. Conversation is amazingly lacking, but communication is extreme. I suppose I could say you owe it to yourself to see The New Land--or that it's one of this century's most important films, even. However, that has been and will be said by others. I regret having missed The Emigrants--but to see that film now would be like trying to relive the first part of your life knowing its gripping conclusion.
