

Welcome to freshmen and a welcomed return to all. 18

It is a pleasure for me to extend a very cordial welcome to you as you enter the University of Nevada, Las Vegas and become a member of our academic community. I hope that you will take full advantage of both the material and the personnel resources that the University can make available to you and that you will benefit greato you and that you will benefit grea-tly from the utilization of these resources.

I urge you to take an active part in the non-curricular aspects of the University in addition to your participa-tion in the academic offerings, and hope that you wil feel you are a wa-lcome addition to the total University community.

Dr. Donald Baepler President

It is with great enthusiasm that I welcome the coming semester and the return of the many CSUN and UNLV students, in The Student Senate has also concerned programs. This year you will note sev-eral new services such as postal supplies to be sold at the Information Booth in the Student Union, along with the check cash-ing service. And in the Student Government Offices, we will have functioning a mimeograph-ditto service for all students and organizations wishing to use it.

We further feel we have a tremendous activities program ahead of us bringing in notable speakers such as Gene Rodden-berry, Star Trek fame, and Senator Wil-liam Proxmire. Movies have been expand-ed to be shown on Wednesday and Thurs-day, and we will be pumping over $10,500 for that program. We also have a new Cul-tural Events program and a new outdoor tural Events program and a new outdoor camping and recreation program. We will continue to have concerts with the expansion of a dance program and the usual tra-ditional and special events. I recommend that you take advantage of the orientation program that has been planned and is more detailed later on in the newspaper.

The Officers and working members of the Senate are proud of the accomplish-ments we have had during the summer and feel secure that the $150,000 budget is being used to the best interest of the students, The YELL is being expanded to include a Semester Magazine, and its staff is work-of the many CSUN and UNLV students, in addition to the new faces that wil. frequent our campus. We at CSUN are proud of the accom-plishments we have had during the summer and welcome student input to further our programs. This year you will note sev-eral new services such as postal supplies and seek more involvement for the incoming and new students as well as the return-ing students.

Arthur C. Gentile, dean of the Dr. graduate school at the University of Oklahoma is the new vice president for academic affairs at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Gentile, who assumes his new position September 2nd, was the top selection in a nationwide search of more than 200 applicants by a ten-member university screening committee, at work since February.

A professor of botany, Dr. Centile comes to U.N.L.V. with 27 years experience in higher education and nearly a decade as an administrator.

As vice president , he succeeds Dr. Donald Baepler, who became U.N.L.V.'s third president. Dr. Baepler was named to the position last rebruary. "There is a pioneering spirit at U.N.L.V. that you don't find in many places around the country today," Dr. Gentile commented.

"It's still a young, growing institution, not hidebound by tradition or tied down to structure. I sense a real chance for innovation and the establishment of new kinds of programs."

As the vice-president, Dr. Gentile will be responsible for the overall academic functions of the university, including budgeting, personnel and curriculum development. The deans of U.N.L.V.'s seven colleges will report directly to him. Among his other duties at Oklahoma, was vice-provost for research Gentile administration.

Previously, he was affiliated for 16 years with the University of Massachu-setts at Amherst, where he moved up the academic ranks to a full professorship in botany, served as interim chairman of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, and finally as associate dean of the Graduate School.

Gentile earned his bachelors degree in biology from the College of the City of New York, a masters degree in botany from Brown University, and a doctorate in botany from the University of Chicago.

The native New Yorker will move to Las Vegas with his wife Gloria and their 14-year-old daughter.

State continues UNLV sex probe....

A probe by the state Attorney General's office into charges of sexual extortion was confirmed las week by University of Nevada, Las Vegas President Dr. Donald Baepler.

A local newspaper, the Las Vegas Sun, reported that a UNLV co-ed has charged an official with sexually propositioning her when she applied for a student loan. President Baepler said that "One student last spring made the charge", and "an investigation has been and is being carried on by an agency external to the University."

Baepler declined to name either the student or the official involved; however, he agreed that since possible criminality is involved, " externally." "we are having it investigated

The Sun article charged that several other students had been approached by the same official and had submitted to relations to obtain loans.

Dr. Baepler denied this portion of the newspaper story and said that he had been advised by the Attorney General's office that no new evidence had been received since the initial complaint by the student, but the investigation is continuing.

Thus far, no official has been fired or suspended as a result of the current investigation.

Troutman Named Teacher Corps Head

A 31-year- old North Las Vegas man is the new director of the Teacher Corps program at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Porter Lee Troutman, Jr., a nine-year resident of Nevada, succeeds Dr. Aldo Cardarelli who has accepted a similar position at the University of Indiana at Evansville.

Until his appointment as director, Troutman had served the Teacher Corps for three years, first as lecturer, then associate director of its activities at UNLV and in the Clark County School District, The Teacher Corps locally employs 31

The Teacher Corps locally employs 31 interns-all junior level education students from UNLV--who work in five public schools along with regular school teachers to improve the instruction given to some 3500 school children from low-income families. Troutman, who served as a teacher in Clark County for five years before joining the Corps, is originally from Louisana, where he earned a bachelor's degree from Southern University in Baton Rouge. He also holds a master's degree from Northern Arizona University, a six-year Education Specialist degree from UNLV and further study toward a doctorate from the University of Wisconsin.

He and his wife Bobbie Jean, a sixth grade schoolteacher live at 300 Duke Avenue with a son Gregory, 8, and a daughter Portia, 2.

The Teacher Corps was established three years ago in Clark County and currently receives approximately $450,000 annually in combined federal funds for operating expenses.

Students Are In The Middle Of The Road

CPS---The last five years have seen the nation's colleges and universities enroll more blacks, chicanos and native Americans than ever before.

While statisticians agree that numerical and probably even percentage increases in minority enrollment are evident, they disagree over the exact percentages of this enrollment and point out that minority groups are still widely under-represented in higher education.

More importantly, recent troubling reports on enrollments and finances reveal that both current and future gains are endangered:

-- According to a survey of 360 institutions by the American Council on Education (ACE) the nationwide proportion of 1973 minority freshman declined for the first time in over a decade.

--After stating that the major mission of American higher education is equal access for all, the National Commission on the Financing of Post-secondary Education said that this mission has not been accomplished under current financing arrangements.

--"Without dramatically increased (minority) college enrollment and completion rates," predicted the College Entrance Examination Board, "There is little prospect that minority groups will make significant gains toward equity, either in terms of income level or participation in the professional, technical and managerial segements of our society," the professional, technical and managerial segements of our society." - A survey by the NEW YORK TIMES found that "the early results of minority recruitment programs have brought stark evidence of a high dropout rate and a disproportionate level of failures by minority graduates of professional examinations".

The ACE report said the proportion of minority students to students at all institutions dropped from 14.8% for the class of '76 to 13% for the class of '77. Most of the reduction was accounted for by black enrollment which declined from 8.7% for the class of '76 to 7.8% for the class of '77. (Analysts of minority aprollment cor-(Analysts of minority enrollment percentages proceed cautiously, however, because of different reporting procedures employed, differing definitions of minorities, and different classifications of institutions under study. For example, for 1970 the ACE reported minority enrollment at 11.3%, the US Office of Civil Rights at 10.5% and an independent researcher, Fred Crossland, at 8 percent. In schools with a small total enrollment an increase or decrease of a dozen students can seemingly indicate significant changes of policy.

Why the decrease?

Standard explanations for problems with minority enrollment include claims of limitations on the numbers of minority students qualified for traditional academic programs plus increasingly competitive recruiting for those who are qualified. Some critics, however, equate the end of the widely publicized and frequently violent demonstrations for minority rights in the late '60's with current enrollment problems.

Discussing the decline of black enrollment at Harvard, University of Massachusetts professor William L. Strickland said, "The increase in black admissions at Harvard in the 1960's demonstrated that the myth of academic qualifications was actually a political question. Their decline demonstrates that politics have changed."

Black enrollment in Harvard Graduate School dropped from 5 percent in 1970 to two percent in 1973. Black admission to Harvard College fell 17,5% from 1972 to 1973, followed by an 11% increase for 1974. As causes for the decline the Harvard CRIMSON cited the death of Harvard's minority recruiter and "clerical racism," the bureaucratic problems of locating, admitting, and retaining minority students.

"It is precisely the racism of 'clerical inefficiency' that is the hardest to pin down and the hardest to combat," said the CRIMSON. "There is no recognizable ill-will, nor is there any overt discrimination that can be attacked. But the end result is always the same: a repressed minority continues to be repressed."

Enrollment targets....

Many schools have targeted eventual minority enrollment to equal the minority representation in the population as a whole. Most have failed to meet even their short term goals.

In 1972 the interim chancellor of the University of Wisconsin at Eau Claire said black enrollment there should increase by 25-50% during the 1973-74 academic year. It remained constant.

In 1970 the University of Michigan set a target of 10% black enrollment by 1973. The actual enrollment was 7.3%.

Ohio State, with a current minority enrollment of 5-6%, "would like to see" minority representation "somewhat at the same level" as the ll-12% representation state-wide.

Higher enrollments....

Some schools, nonetheless, reported significant progress in increasing and maintaining minority enrollments in a 1972 National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges (NASULGC) survey of member institutions.

Schools that reported enrolling blacks in a proportion equal to or greater than the proportion of black's in the state's population included the City College of New York (CCNY) (42,565), Wayne State University (6,548), Temple University (4,346), and Rutgers University (4,330).

Investigation indicates most successful minority enrollment programs have been based on a combination of substantial recruitment plus retention efforts.

Graduate schools at Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Yale, and Princeton all had either full time recruiters or a long range minority program, an all reported high stable levels of minority enrollment.

One student at Rutgers cited the educational counseling and tutorial services provided by the school's Educational Opportunity Program as being particularly effective in retaining minority students. The University currently has 5600 minority students who make up 15% of the entire student body.

(Part II will cover the problems of finances and some of the conflicts over academic standards surrounding minority enrollment.)

The UNLV Day Care Center has a new Director and a new Assistant Director according to CSUN President Val Buhecker.

Buhecker said the decision to hire Karen L, Roethel as Director and Elizabeth H. Keers as Assistant Director was "unanimous".

"unanimous". Celeste Williams Chairman of the Day Care Center Board, said the decision was reached "after extensive interviews had been conducted,"

Mrs. Williams said that she felt that Roethel and Keers were "the two best candidates offered out of a large field of twenty."

The Board Chairman went on to say that the new Director and Assistant Director show "great enthusiasm."

In addition Mrs, Williams further noted that with the addition of a new Day Care Center board and the appointing of a new Director and Asst. Director that the program at UNLV would "be largely expanded and improved upon."

Mrs. Roethel received her BA degree in Elementary Education in June of 1973 from Michigan State University. She is a certified Elementary Teacher in both Michigan and Nevada, Mrs. Roethel has an extensive background in pre-school teaching including work in the Head Start Program.

Both Mrs. Roethel and Mrs. Keers expressed an interest in moving the Day Care Center in the direction of educational instruction rather than just a babysitting service.

Mrs. Keers is a recent graduate of UNLV. Her major was Elementary Education with a minor in math. She came highly recommended from the Elementary Education College and from the Placement Office. Her student teaching was done at the Boulder City Elementary School in the Spring of 1974.

'strong year ahead'

Unly day care center has new directors

"The Day Care Center this year should be coming on stronger than ever with a new Day Care Center Board and a fresh philosophy. The kid's welfare and growth are upper most in our minds. Our motivating principle is that the Day Care Center, which is situated in a seat of learning, should be a place of education and learning. Our intent is to create as much as possible an atmosphere conducive to learning. Children need not be forced, but certainly the opportunity to learn will be there." "Such learning situations as were employed last year included, crafts, project, modern dance, painting, paper mache, and simple scientific experiments. TV was always available, however, for thos child ren just wanting to spend a relaxed minute which, by no means, intends to imply that TV did not create learning situations in and of itself. And of course for the young ones, a nap period during a portion of the day always took precedence."

"Tours were not out of the ordinary. "Tours were not out of the ordinary. The kids viewed art shows and visited the natural history museum in the Desert Research Institute across the street from the University. The new Day Care Center Board has strong intent to initiate various recreational activities such as a swimming program, or just playing in the water. "Worthwhile programs initiated depend to a great extent upon assistance and cooperation secured from other groups and organizations interested in the well being of the children. The Day Care Center Board is very much interested in tapping the community's resources in an effort to provide continually improving facilities. As the community extends services to the Day Care Center, the kids will be the first to benefit." "Our interest is in the children and pro-

"Our interest is in the children and providing those who use the facility with the best possible program. ## Nearly 7000 expected to register for Fall term

An Open Letter From VP Joe Karaffa

During the summer's time, we the student government, have tried to establish a onsive, well organized program. The CSUN Executive Officers, Senate and Ac-tivities Board planned this year's activities and governmental policies in a way the student body, as a whole, will want to be affiliated with and participate in.

Student government can play an important part in the student's extra curricula activities and career. This is indeed what we would like and hope to accomplish. However, this is not possible unless we promote activities that the students want, therefore, we welcome your ideas and in-vite you to the CSUN office to express them.

The Yell

We are looking forward to a good year, and to hearing from you.

hunters will walk the streets, with journeyman experience in registering. All the hocus pocus, go here, do that, bring Ali this, returen, over, fill in card number 1,2,3,4,..., pay and pray for the check. Jeff Halverson, an assistant registrar, is distraught over the 'underwhelming' number of pre-pays at the chashier's booth. Do you realize all of the lines could be avoided at registration. . . (If only no one registered).

It's over and it's beginning. Eight reg-istrations and one more trainload of job Fabulous frontiers of learning gape at unsuspecting scholars from the 292 page General Catalog and the 71 page Fall Schedule of Classes. Then add all of the cards and evelopes and class lists, and signs, and say goodbye to another thous-and acres of Colorado timber and one acre of Nevada 'greenbacks'.

U.N.L.V. has eight colleges and 37 departments on campus. Some payroll, huh!

If the 329 faculty members and an equal number of students, 22, then your chance at seeing an advisor would be great. However, many faculty members are too busy with elections, university politics and hid-ing to care for 10 of the 22.

Oh well, Merry Registration and a happy new semester to you!!!

Next Tuesday, September 3rd, is the day to cast your vote for the candidate of your choice.

It is the policy of most newspapers to hand out endorsements for one reason or another.

It would seem that these endorsements are only creditable because the newspaper is supposed to have some insight into the candidates "real" story.

The Yell is endorseing several condidates, those that we have a personal connection with, and that have demonstrated an ability to not only serve, but lead. Forwhat ever reason the endorsements are sought and received, the voter should only look at them as simply another piece of information in their decison making process. The Yel, will not endorse any candidates in the so-called major races, enough valid information is available on these candidates in the primary battle.

However, there are several candidates in the other races where very little has been published.

For that reason we present the following list of candidates that the Yell strongly supports. Not only have those listed already shown a sincere desire to serve the community, they that the Yell strongly supports. are honest and concerned.

New team sport makes its debut!

While the UNLV football team began its seventeenth year of existence last Thursday sport officially made its debut a new on the Rebel sports scene. It's soccer, which was a club sport in 1973, which had its first practice last Thursday with daily workouts starting at 6 p.m. on the UNLV multi-purpose field located inbetween the tennis courts and the base bal stadium.

Soccer coach Tom Khamis expects a roster of 20 for the inagural season compromised mostly of local high school products. Their season will open on the weekend of September 19, by attending the Far West Soccer Classic in Santa Along with UNLV and host Barbara. University of California, Santa Barbara, competing in the three day event will be the University of Washington, Seattle-Pacific College, Westmont College, Cal-State Chico, Biola College and the University of California, Riverside, The first year Rebels will open its season by hosting the University of Arizona and Arizona State University in a double-header on September 28 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on the UNLV multi-purpose field. In all, the Rebels will have a 10-match home schedule with such schools as UCLA, Pepperdine, San Diego State, and Brigham Young University visiting Las Vegas. The only other road trip for the Rebels after Sept. 19, will be in Phoenix on November 30 to end the season with a double header once again against Arizona and Arizona State.

Coach Khamis is naturally excited about Coach Knamis is naturally excited about the new adventure as he put it, "Soccer in Las Vegas has really come a long way. There are a lot of people res-ponsible for the foundation we have built in the area and believe me soccer will be a winning sport at UNLV."

The seven footer that got away

Earlier this year, Assistant basketball coach Dan Ayala told the YELL that seven center David Vaughn had the potential of being one of the top three centers in col-lege basketball this next season. It doesn't matter anymore, because Vaughn has sign-ed a reported $1.4 million dollar contract ed a reported $1,4 million dollar contract with the American Basketball Association professional team the Virginia Sauires, Vaughn came to UNLV in January and was expected to help second year head coach Jerry Tarkanian to a national champ-ionship ionship.

The highly regarded center, who quit Oral Roberts University last December then decided to come to UNLV, left Las Vegas a couple of weeks ago to make the final arrangements for signing the six year contract with the ABASquires. When asked how Coach Ayala found out where Vaughn was, he said, "It happened by ch-ance that we found his wife staying at a motel here, getting ready to fly out the next morning and I got on the plane with her and that's when we knew where David was." If coach Ayala hadn't discovered out where coach Ayala hadn't discovered out where David's wife was staying, then more than likely he would have never been able to talk to David, However, after finally getting in touch with him in New York City, Ayala said, "David had already signed the con-tract by then." Coach Ayala commented that he didn't think there were any hard feelings by David geningt the INI When but feelings by David against the UNLV basket-ball program, but it was a "financial situation" that made him sign with the Squires.

Newly appointed assistant basketball York the day after Ayala did, said, "Our concern was simply that he (Vaughn) had completed his red shirt year and had com-pleted 24 hours of academic work at the community college; he really paid a price in order to be eligible to play Rebel basket-ball this coming season. We had no in-dication, evidently, that some kind of negotiations or communications were going on between David and a given agent or representative."

With David Vaughn, "our seven footer who never was," no longer a part of the UNLV basketball program, the outlook for the 1974-75 season has taken a big step downward, but Tark's Rebels did well last year without Vaughn, however, the question remains can the do it this year after expecting for so long that Vaughn would be in a Rebel uniform come the start of the season? Only time will tell!

Women's Athletics Arrives!

Women's athletics have arrived at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Overseeing the vastly-expanded program is the new coordinator of women's intercollegiate athletics athletics, Barbara A. Quinn.

Is Quian, with nearly 20 years experience in coaching and ysical education instruction, s been on the job for little more in a month; but has already own an adeptness in scheduling my major schools as opponents r her charges.

She told the YELLthat she plans

this fall to field female teams in basketball, track & field and tennis. Next year UNLV will also add comming & diving, gymnastics, and power volleyball..

The current upgrading of women's sports is not unique to UNLV. Colleges and universities all across the nation have been thrashing about, trying to comply with Title IB, a complex and much-argued passage of the U.S. Education A -A mendments of 1972.

Title IX forbids sex discrimination in in any activities or education programs receiving Federal Funds. Since most schools do receive Federal monies, the choice has become obvious: do more for women or face a cutoff of Federal Funds.

Until recently, the spectre of Chio State being forced to fund the women's volleyball team equally with Woody Hayes' football brought a shudder to almost all college administrators. Gwen Gregory, who's an attorney with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Office of CI Civil Rights has come forward with HEW's interpretation:

"The phrase I like to use is proportionate comparability,," she said. "It means the school must take into consideration the number of men and women in the athletic program, their relative interests and needs, and provide comparable opportunities."

The first coordinator of women's athletics disagrees that Title IX was babind UNLV's new athletic program. "The program is here because the administration wants it"

University President Donald BAepler a agreed, "The demand for womens' sprots is high in Southern Nevada... it is clearly time to establish such programs at UNLV." "MS Guinn has been working out scheduling for her teams and plans to have that item finalized by the end of Sept-

She said that UNLV's is shooting for 14 games in women's basketball. Already lined up are: University of Utah Utah State, University of Arizona, UCLA, USC, University of S San Francisco, and Whittier College. Quinn informed this chauvenist that the only difference between male and female basketball is a 30 second shooting clock is ineffect for the g3entle sex. Funding for the vew department will be taken, in part, from the male athletic
