Enrollment up

Preliminary figures indicate a sharp rise in enrollment this fall at the University of Nevada at Las Vegas.

Through the first week of registration, the University Business Office reports that they have processed 6,600 fee payments.

According to the Director of the Information Office, Mark Hughes, a full 1,500 students enrolled following the opening week of registration last year.

Hughes told The YELL that the University was expecting a total of 7,500 students this fall, but that the figure apparently would be much higher.

A total of 7,227 were enrolled during spring of this year.

Fall figures from a year ago indicated that there were 6,918 students at UNLV.

At press time, there were no registration figures available for the University of Nevada at Reno.

It is possible that this could be the year that UNLV passes UNR in total enrollment.

The projected enrollment of UNLV for the 1978-79 school year, according to the University of Nevada System Comprehensive Plan, is 8,740 students, compared with Reno's estimated 8,115.

The study predicts that in 1978-79 UNLV will have 6,475 full-time students, and UNR will have 6,900.

What to take?...What to take?

"Study Hard," frosh, says Glennen

If you spend two hours outside of class for every hour you spend in the classroom, you will probably get C's. But if you spend three hours studying for every hour you sit in class, you just might make the Dean's List.

This hint was part of the advice given by Dean Robert Glennen during Freshman Orientation at the Judy Bayley Theatre, August 25.

The purpose of Freshman Orientation was to acquaint the newcomers with what they can expect from their new academic careers. Dean Glennen warned that uninterrupted study time is vital to success in college and "if your friends want you to go with them to get a beer while you are studying, tell them that you can't. Do your beer drinking on weekends. Put a lock on your door if you have to."

In case they do have any free time, however, the 600 freshmen who attended the lecture were informed of some of the various services and activities available on campus such as counseling, tutoring, and development of basic academic skills. Many of the new students got a more practical orientation into campus social life, though, by attending a Coffee House sponsored by CSUN after the lecture.

When asked what expectations they had of college life, the freshmen responded with a myriad of impressions. Most of the students interviewed felt that the classes here would be less formal than their high school classes, but much harder. And after hearing Dean Glennen's lecture, many were beginning to have doubts about their ability to cope.

The major reason all those interviewed gave for choosing UNLV was financial. Some added though, that their parents wanted them to stay at home for their first year of college.

Generally, the freshmen were impressed with their first exposure to college life and are anxiously awaiting the beginning of their new careers.

Freshmen gather for an orientation at UNLV.

Letters

Dear Editor:

I heard that several male athletes living in the dorm, gang-raped a woman student living on the sixth floor, and that The YELL was "asked" not to print the story. How about it--were you?

Susan Stevens
Campus Representative

This letter was slipped under The YELL's door after the last issue of the spring semester. We didn't have room to print it last week; however, a letter such as this deserves a reply.

For the record: no one has ever "asked" us not to print any story concerning the above-mentioned rumor. The above letter is the first we have heard about this alleged incident. -Ed.

The consumer movement and the buyers market in higher education has precipitated numerous changes in recent years which make colleges and universities more responsive to the purchasers of their services, the students. Now, thanks to a cooperative program coordinated by the Education Commission of the States, prospective students in the future may get better quality information about such things as the projected cost of their education and their chances of getting a job in their chosen field of study.

Just as a prospective stock buyer looks over a prospectus before investing, potential students at participating colleges will study a "prospectus" that will hopefully give them accurate information on student attrition and retention rates, student-faculty interactions, the environment of the institution as viewed by various subcultures, assessments by graduates of the relationship between their experience and job requirements, costs, employability of graduates and other pertinent information.

A total of 16 institutions and agencies are participating in the program which is funded by a $505,000 award from the Fund for Postsecondary Education.

When the Spanish explorer Cortes landed in Central America, the Indian population of Mexico was estimated at 25 million. After 30 years of war, economic upheaval, exploitation, and diseases to which the peoples of Central America had no resistance, the population was reduced to about six million by 1605.

Interests Changing

Student interest in law and medicine is declining while engineering and science are up slightly. There is a striking increase in the number of women interested in engineering.

These are a few of the findings reported by the Stanford U. Academic Information Center based on a survey of the preliminary academic interests of this fall's freshmen class. This shows:

- * 28% leaning toward the social sciences, down a percent or two from last year.
- * 27% favoring natural science, math, and technology, up about four percent.
- * 17% indicating a preference for pre-med, down slightly for the third straight year.
- * 14% choosing the humanities, down one percent.
- * 12% expressing a preference for engineering, reflecting a sharp gain among women.
- * 2% with no preference, down from a 4-5% level the past two years.

By far the most striking change has occurred among women interested in engineering, who now comprise 7.6% of the freshmen women. This compares with 4.8% last year, 2.8% the previous year, and 1.2% three years ago.

The proportion of men interested in engineering rose from 14% to 15% in round figures. Job prospects and salaries-$1200 for starting chemical engineers, for example-in this field remain among the brightest nationally.

Fear & Loathing at the State Fair

By Marc Hechter

This year's Jaycee State Fair was very big. It was full of exhibits. It took a long time to traverse. It wasn't much different from the last Jaycee State Fair.

Apparently there is an unwritten regulation that when one has a fair in this area one has to have something on the order of two million authentic peddlers of authentic genuine copies of original Indian turquoise, heishi, or whatever jewelry. Not to mention, of course, the one million perveyors of knots, pots, and decoupage.

That is exactly what the Jaycee State Fair was all about. Of course, there were several exhibits which seemed to provide some sort of diversification. Of interest to locals was the Las Vegas Valley Zoo "swamp" which presented a variety of animals and several young boys to guide onlookers through the exhibit. Our guide, named David, turned out to be very commentative on the matter and offered us one of the most entertaining points in an otherwise lackluster excursion through the fair.

The Energy Research and Development Administration maintained an exhibit disseminating information about the potential of fusion as a source for needed energy supplies.

Cast amid the boring booths of jewelry were several nursery's examples of landscape design which seemed out of place, but were well received.

We particularly enjoyed the Bicentennial Theatre. Although not well-attended by the public, we found it to be one of the best elements of the fair.

Moving outside of the rotunda, we found the rides too short and expensive. For the price of $3.00 we purchased a coupon book of 20 tickets for rides and found out that each ride required a multitude of tickets for an excursion of very short duration. The wife was not overly fond of our choice of rides, and, following the trip, neither were we, particularly since there were no bathrooms in the immediate vicinity.

The various and sundry skill booths along the midway proved to be a prime example of how many suckers there are in the world, considering the cost for some of $1.00 for four shots.

We are happy to report that the beer was excellent, and the price fair. Also, the pickles were good, but the cotton candy was dissatisfying.

For the price of $1.75 to enter the fair, plus whatever else was spent on food, beverage, and fun, it would have been cheaper to stay home and drink or go to a movie.

All seriousness aside, we had a fine time, particularly the part where we got in free on a press pass.

What this area needs is a representative fair--a place for hobbyists and homebodies to present their wares. What we do not need is another fair for the local merchants to get together and charge exorbitant prices.

UNR Protests Language Requirement

by Ann Henderson, Reno, Bureau

Nix the Greek, the French and the German, and even the Japanese: this was the registration message handed UNR students last week.

An ASUN Student Senate Finance Drive was underway to try and eliminate the foreign language requirement for College of Arts and Letters and Science students.

The foreign language degree requirement has been opposed in the past on the basis that it was irrelevant to a student's future profession.

Bill Brown, Chairman of the Foreign Language Options Committee, said that the group is hoping for "Alumni and student support" from which to fight a legal battle against the requirement.

The Curriculum Committee of the faculty senate could suggest a change in the requirements which would then be voted upon by the senate.

Gerald Petersen, Chairman of Reno's Foreign Language Department, said that dropping the foreign language requirement would change the meaning of a Bachelor's degree. He called for a study of what a Bachelor's degree means.

The success of the boycott will not be known until registration is completed.

Scholarships

Audrey May and Lisa Kay Blevins, both students at UNLV, were recently awarded $250.00 Martin Luther King Scholarships for 1975-76. The scholarships were presented by Father Benjamin Franzinella, formerly of St. James Roman Catholic Parish and founder of the scholarship fund. The awards are given annually to young people who have the intention of memorializing Dr. King.

Student Health Service

Most students have the good fortune to survive their years of college in the best of health, but some are not so lucky. Regardless of health status, the Student Health Service is here for the benefit of all students. One of the basic purposes of this service is promotion of good health practices through information, advice, assistance with health problems, and encouragement of personal responsibility for health maintenance.

One of the main concerns is helping prevent conditions that may keep students from taking advantage of educational opportunities. With this in mind, first-aid treatment, care for minor illness, dispensing of non-prescription drugs, and a temporary rest area are provided. When more extensive services are needed, referral to local medical services is encouraged. A complete listing of all community health services and lists of physicians and dentists are available.

Several diagnostic aids can be used when indicated. Testing for pregnancy, mononucleosis, and strep throat infection can be done as well as vision screening and simple urinalysis. Also, anyone may have their blood pressure checked upon request. It is hoped that these measures will assist students in deciding on the need for further medical treatment.

Anyone interested in diet and weight control may use the scales in the Student Health Services and obtain information on nutrition, diet, and weight control. Many other pamphlets and hand-outs on a great variety of health topics are available.

For the convenience of students, a counselor from the Clark County Health Department is here on Mondays from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. to offer birth control and pregnancy counseling. All referrals and information are strictly confidential. Male as well as female students are welcome.

All students are encouraged to take advantage of the Student Health and Accident Insurance with good coverage at reasonable rates. The importance of financial protection in case of unexpected illness or accident cannot be over-emphasized. Claim forms, information, and assistance with claims may be obtained here.

All Student Health Records are kept here with absolute confidentiality with no information released to anyone without written consent of the student, and used only as an aid in providing health care. Transfer of records to other schools may be requested, and information about Physical Exemptions is available for those unable to take the required courses in Physical education.

All students are encouraged to take advantage of the services offered, and suggestions are welcome. We are interested in optimum well-being of all students, and will help in any way possible toward attaining that goal.

College? Save your money, Says September Playboy

In its back-to-school September issue, Playboy magazine takes a look at the current status of a college degree and finds that it flunks out when it comes to today's cold, cruel job market.

First, some "facts:"

Four years of, say, Princeton are going to lighten you by $25,000. If you had put that sum into a special savings account when you graduated from high school, at the age of 38 you'd have over $114,000.

58% of this year's college grads will be competing for jobs in areas where the supply exceeds the demand. B.A.s in teaching outnumber jobs 2 to 1 and Ph.D.s are in even worse shape.

Plumbers make more than professors of Austro-Hungarian history. Besides plumbing, there is much you can do instead of going to college. Playboy points out, "Frederick didn't need a Ph.D. in physics to invent the crotchless panty." If you can't think of anything to invent, try recycling. A pound of Coors beer cans carries a 15-cent bounty. There may be booming markets in eraser dust, pre-owned pizzas and retread Band-Aids. Get out there and stomp around in some garbage. If it happens to be Henry Kissinger's or Bob Dylan's, you might even write a book about it. Or at least publish a magazine article.

Worried about losing intellectual status by not going to college? Playboy thoughtfully provides a college kit complete with cut-out fraternity pins (e.g., I Phelta Thi) and conversational tidbits to impress your college-educated peers. Just say stuff like:

- "Nietzsche was a very down person."
- "Gatsby was a fag. Everybody knows that."
- "Metaphorically speaking, yes."
- "Is there a God?"

If all else fails, mention how Moby Dick, which no college student in history has ever read, changed your life. Just remember that the whale is not merely a big fish but a symbol of "existential angst." You'll sound as well-read as the average college student and you'll still have that 25 grand.

Jewelry

Can you tell Navajo jewelry from Zuni?

How do you know if the jewelry is authentic or not?

A few years ago only a few people in the Southwest wore Indian jewelry, but now it's the "in" fashion from California to New York.

Continuing Education at UNLV is offering a program for those who would like to know more about the jewelry of the Navajo, Hopi, Zuni and Santa Domingo Indians, September 9-October 7.

Classes will be held on Tuesday nights (7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.) for five weeks with slides and displays as instructional aids.

Marilyn Bailey, silversmith, and Tom Marcek, collector, will give a comprehensive understanding of methods and materials used in making the jewelry: silver fabrication, overlay, sandcasting lost wax.

They will trace the story of turquoise from the mine to the finished piece and its classification as a gem, semi-precious stone or "junk."

Also discussed will be coral, jet, mother-of-pearl and shell.

Business

Going into business for yourself can be tricky business if you are not prepared.

If you are planning to start a business, the federal Small Business Administration and the College of Business and Economics at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas want to help.

A special one-day pre-business workshop is being offered September 11 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Moyer Student Union. The workshop is offered through the UNLV Division of Continuing Education as a noncredit course.

University professors and local businessmen will discuss what it takes to go into business such as organizing and planning, legal aspects, financial needs, advertising, accounting records, and insurance.

The course is open to the public for a small fee and persons interested in starting new businesses in Las Vegas are urged to attend.

The course is one of several in the Business and Labor Programs of Continuing Education. For information contact the College of Business and Economics at UNLV or the Division of Continuing Education, Frazier Hall 109.

Philadelphia was the scene of the first real American circus, a show produced by a Scotsman named John Bill Ricketts. It opened on Oct. 22, 1792. George Washington was a patron.

Open House

The first week of school, September 2-5 will be Open House Week, sponsored by the Consolidated Students and held in the Student Union building.

Tuesday, the first day of school, the band "Free Spirit" will be in concert in the lobby of the Union from 10:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon.

Wednesday, September 3, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., there will be a barbeque on the old practice field with chicken, potato salad, watermelon, and soft drinks. Prices are $.25 for CSUN members and $1.25 for all others. The band "Hot Goods" will perform during the barbeque.

From 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, the Student Union lobby will be the site of a Banana Split Giveaway. And on Friday, James Lee Stanley will be in concert in the SUB lobby from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. The concert will be free and beer will be sold during those hours in the Fireside Lounge by Sigma Chi fraternity.

Class Card Caper

By Don Barry & Barbara Scantino

This is the city, Las Vegas, Nevada. The city's university lies in one of the highest crime areas in the country. Every year more than 7,000 honest students enroll at UNLV and I'm damn proud to be one of them. This is my story. I have always been an honest student, always followed the rules. That makes this confession just that much harder to write.

8AM Friday Morning. Despite being without sleep for almost three hours, I considered it my duty to register for school and pick up my class cards. It was a job I didn't like. But I did it.

8:31 AM. The lines are long, the tension is high, the wicked wind whispers and moans. You've got the fever, you've got the desire, and I've got a few of my own. It's one of those nights. One of those long and lonely nights (Cha, cha, cha). I secure my Psychology class: "The Insignificant Ramblings of the Criminally Insane,"

"I need it," I persisted, feeling the quickening of my pulse. She picked up the phone and explained to me, "I need an authorization."

"Take as long as you want," I said, relieved that she wasn't calling Security.

But authorization wasn't coming. "I'm sorry," she whispered, her eyes clouded with tears. "The class is filled." She turned her back, pretending to return to her work. I walked out of the office telling myself, "Life is a jungle!"

Then I heard a voice: "Hey, kid!" I turned to see a man standing in the hallway. He was dressed in a hat and trench coat which covered nearly all of his face, except for his eyes, which resembled two black marbles which jumped from side to side (but not together). "Hey Kid. Come 'ere a minute." (I immediately noticed that all men like him slur their S's.) He was a tall man, deathbed. Something had always puzzled me: What the hell was Yul Brynner doing on my grandmother's deathbed?

The stranger placed the headdress between his teeth and bit hard. Satisfied, he said, "OK Kid, follow me."

I was flushed with excitement following this mysterious stranger. I walked five yards behind him so as not to be associated with this obvious felon. Immediately I noted that the man had a severe limp, as though his leg had caught the business end of Julie Andrews' umbrella. As we walked, he began to whistle. The tune was a familiar one. Requiem Mass by Lizett, First and Third Movements in C Minor, although with the distraction of the limp it sounded curiously like "Be bop Ba loopa, She's My Baby." He even whistled strangely.

8:39 AM We arrived at our secret destination; the third floor of th dorm. I was nervous, but the emphasizing their worth. With an insidious smile on his face, he slowly, lovingly sorted through the "gems" to find the card I so desperately longed for. Suddenly the sinister smile vanished.

"I don't have it!" he screamed, beating his fist hard on the bathroom wall. The tall stranger pulled me outside. "We better go, this isn't going to be very pretty."

"He wasn't very pretty to begin with."

"Listen kid, you still want that card? Go downtown, the alley behind the Mint Hotel. There's a door there. Knock on it at 12:30. Come alone." Coming alone. The story of my life.

12:15 AM Saturday: I arrived alone in the alley behind the Mint Hotel. As I entered the alley, I realized the need to maintain silence. If I made the least little noise and was caught, I would be banished from UNLV forever. I would have to move to another town, find another school, make

I held it, touched it for the first time. I caressed it gently. Suddenly the alley was alive with bright lights and the sounds of sirens.

"This is the police. We've got you surrounded. Give yourselves up or we'll shoot." Quickly I tried to eat the evidence, but I was grabbed and wrestled to the ground after only managing to bend and mutilate the card, an offense in itself. The police pulled the man from the trash can. I recognized him. The beady eyes darted back and forth, up and down, in and out. His hair was disheveled, his clothing tattered and his right leg was swollen twice its size, probably due to the cramped conditions of the trash can.

"Let's go buddy," the cops ordered him. The man was undaunted by the severity of his treatment as the officers hoisted him on their shoulders and carried him to the wagon. The and my class card to "Siberian Ethnic Culture Studies" without a problem. Now I had to go in for the kill: "The Contemporary Relevance of the Political Theories of Marie Antoinette: Let Them Eat Twinkies." A real heavy class, but I needed it to graduate.

8:40 AM. I arrived at the History department office. The secretary on duty is Shirley Would. I walk in casually so as not to cause any panic. I panic easily. Shirley is on the desk. I come right out with it.

"I would like the class card to "The Contemporary Relevance of the Political Theories of Marie Antoinette."

"Let them eat Twinkies?" She looked startled. I wanted to pretend it was just a joke. I didn't really say that, she didn't hear it. It was all a joke. But it was no joke. I wanted it and I knew deep down she wanted to give it to me. I heard she had given it out before.

"I don't think there's any left," she sighed.

very menacing, as those cold balck eyes scanned the hallway. I immediately mistook him for Lance Rentzel (which explained the trench coat), but closer examination led me to ask if Peter Lorrie had a brother. (Or a mother?)

"Kid. You looking for some class cards?"

"Do you know where I can get..."

"Not so loud! You want to get me busted?"

I knew then that I was about to take that first step that would lead me behind the walls of the Big Rock. I could see the front page of the morning paper: "Student Given Severe Wrist Slapping in College Fraud Scandal." I could see my wife and dog leaving me, my goldfish drowning himself in disgrace. I realized the consequences, but I had to get that card I needed so badly.

"I think I can help you kid, but it's gonna cost you."

"I expected that," I said, offering him the bronzed lock of Yul Brynner's scalp given to me by my grandmother while on her cool look in those beebie eyes reassured me. He knocked three times. Waited. Knocked four times. Then once. Then he repeated the Inca War Chant from the Third Dynasty, B.C. and waited for the counter sign. It came. "Come on in, the door's open."

Immediately I could tell I was in the den of evil because of a sign over the door that said: "Welcome to the Den of Evil." There in the middle of the poorly kept room was a rotund man with a shock of wavy hair. The wave was all the more shocking because the man was completely bald.

"Close that door!"--he cut me off with a motion of his hand. He slugged me. The women and I went into the bathroom. Again all the doors were locked. He turned the shower on full force to further drown out all noise. Then the fat one reached under the sink and pulled out a long narrow package.

He carefully unwrapped the protective plastic covering that glittered under the dull light as does all valuable contraband. He touched the valuables gently, new friends. I found myself screaming out of control. Finally, I pulled myself together. I found the door and knocked three times. I heard a voice. "Hey Kid. Hey you!"

I looked around. There next to the door was a trash can. A pair of beebie eyes peeked out from under the lid. The cold eyes of a killer. (Or a woman in love).

"Have you got the money?" (Right away I noticed these guys always slur their S's.)

"How much will it cost?"

"Eight bills!"

"Eight hundred dollars for a lousy class card?"

"It's three credits, for crying out loud!"

"I'll have to give you a check."

"A check? Where do you think you are? The Broadway?"

"Look, I don't carry that much cash in dark allies downtown in the middle of the night." I wrote out the check.

"You got a check cashing card?"

"Yeah, here. Who do I make this check out to?"

"Just make it out to cash. And hurry up. I'm a busy trash can.

man raised both arms over his head. "My fellow Americans," he babbled, "I have done nothing wrong. I am totally innocent of all charges. And I know when President Baepler reviews my case I will receive a full and complete pardon..." They placed him in the wagon and sped away.

I was left alone. In the chaos, they had forgotten all about me. But I had what I wanted. My somewhat crinkled and soiled precious class card. "Should I do the honest thing and turn it in or should I take advantage of this illicit opportunity to further my studies and graduate with honors?" was the question that turned over and over in my mind.

My choice was clear. I was to do the one thing that would bring me fame and fortune and would insure my future as a public figure. Quickly I jumped into the trash can and pulled the lid over my head. Moments later I heard the sound of hesitant footsteps. I peered cautiously over the top of the trash can and whispered. "Psst. Hey kid. You want to buy a class card.....?"

Aggravation

By Barbara Scarsantino

The first in an unceasing series of confusions labeled "Registration", pre-designed to strike unprecedented terror in the hearts of first year collegiates is categorization of students.

You wonder as you wander: "Am I a regular student, an auditing student, a special student; a foreign student; a veteran, war orphan or senior citizen student?" As with every other facet of college life, your category remains a mystery, since you've been programmed to be a total misfit until you stagger on the auditorium stage four years hence to receive your sheepskin claiming you are now a B.A., which does you no good since the world is only hiring those with Master's Degrees anyway. However, first 100 problems first.

In my vast experience at being utterly confused, I've concluded that all students fall under the same category: Irregular students, orphaned by the establishment, veterans of the bureaucracy that considers logic foreign and makes us senior citizens before we've processed our packet.

Ah, the packet! Your entire life computerized and key punched on five little cards and a self-carbonated two-part schedule form. Card #1 is your permit to enroll. Nothing to fill out. So far so good. Card #2? No card #2. Hmm. Some cards here with no number. Like the "Release of Information" card that reads: "My address and phone number may or may not be included in the campus directory and released to family and friends." Whose family and friends? Heretofore I was under the impression that my family and friends knew where I was, along with my creditors, the IRS and the Jehovah Witnesses who wake me up every Sunday morning at two bells. But who's to argue. Sign it.

Cards 6, 7, and 8 do nothing but panic you into believing you've lost cards 2,3,4 and 5. Now...fill out the two-part schedule form with all the classes you desire and their times, section number, credit hours, prof's name, building and room number, etc. Proceed to department for class cards.

"I'd like a card for English 101 please."

"Which Section?"

"Number 2."

"Sorry that's closed." Scratch out English 101.

"But section number 6 is open."

Fill in section number 6. "That's at 10 am, Monday, Wednesday and Friday."

Scratch out Psych 101, Sec. 3, 10 am, MWF. Fill in Psych 101, Sec. 5, 11 am, MWF.

"Hi. I'd like a card for Psych 101, Sec. 5."

"Sorry, that's closed." Scratch, scratch, scratch.

"But section 118 is open." Fill, fill, fill. "That's on Tuesday & Thursday, 10:30 am." Scratch out Anth 101, Sec 9, Tuesday and Thursday, 10:30 am.

"Hi. Is this the Anthropology Department?"

"Yes. But we're all closed."

"Good, I'll take it whatever it is."

"OK. It's 'The Mating Cycle of the Menopausal Bush Baby and the Relevance of Simeon Psychology to the Advancement of Primeval Man.'"

"When does it meet?"

"During the ovulation cycle of the Teddy Bear Hamster and on Black Tuesdays."

"I'll take it."

Off we go to the registrar's office which is in the Frazier Hall Building. What's this? The Registrar's Office is closed in with white sheets and the sign says: "All Registration and Packet Check in Moyer Student Union West Lounge. All other campus activity registration, including Bikini Wrestling with the IBM Computer will be conducted in the back alley from 11pm - 1am."

Making the long trek from Frazier Hall to the Student Union, the campus and Union building are alive with instructive signs telling you where to go. All the signs are bright and colorful, clear and easily understood pointing the way to the proper area for registration for all students.

"Hi. Where do I go to register?" But the Maintenance man is not very cooperative. So I follow the crowd to Checker #1. As she checks my #6 card in my packet, she asks: "Do you have a degree?"

"Well, no. I'm just a freshman."

"Yes, I know. But it's on the card and you didn't fill it out."

"I didn't fill it out because I don't have a degree."

"Yes, but if you don't have a degree, you have to fill it out. Now...do you or do you not have a degree?"

"Yes. It's 102 and rising." After checker number two stamps my packet, I proceed to the Financial Aid Line.

"Hi. Do you have my checks?"

"What are you getting?"

"An SEOG, a BEOG and an NDSL and a partridge in a pear tree."

With check in hand, I proceed to the cashier. The lines are long and bustling with activity and nervous students embarking on the greatest experience of their lives. Expectations for future goals and achievements are high and I'm caught up in the excitement as a fellow lineman asks:

"Hi. Are you in line?"

"Actually, I've been told I'm completely out of line."

"Are you of Freshman standing?"

"Freshman are always standing."

"I'm getting my doctorate this year."

"Oh." I am impressed. "What for?"

"For $75 a credit."

"Where will all this lead you?"

"To the State Unemployment line."

"But what about your chosen profession? Don't you want to go to work?"

"Have you tried to get unemployment lately? THAT'S work!"

Outside the door of the lounge, there is car registration.

"Please fill out the little white card." Fill, fill, fill. "Okay. Rear bumper, left side."

"What's wrong with it?" I ask, tugging at my slacks.

"What's wrong with what?" "My rear bumper, left side?"

"I don't know. Where did you park it?"

"Where I usually park it", I blushed. "Wherever there's a space."

"Well, maybe the space belongs to someone else."

"I won't give it away. But I'll gladly share."

Having escaped registration almost unscathed, I saunter down to the bookstore. I love books. I love to touch them. To have them. To own them. Sometimes I even read them.

"Hi. Do you have English 101 books?"

"Oh, yes. But they're not in yet."

"When will they be in?"

"Anytime now."

"When is that?"

"Well, they're late."

"How late?"

"About three weeks late."

"Ah, then they should be in soon. How many did you order?"

"Well, we originally ordered 25 books and they sent us 35. So we returned 20 books for credit because you see we get a 40% discount off our bill if we return more than half of an order. So we had to back order for 10 books but they told us we had to order at least 20, so when we received the 20 books, we returned them all for credit, and now there aren't any left until next semester."

"I see." Scratch English 101. "Do you have any books for Psych 101?"

"Yes we do. In fact we have some used books which are different in price than the new ones."

"Oh, good. You mean I can save money by buying a used book?"

"No, actually the used books cost more than the new books, you see, because they're harder to come by."

"Why's that?"

"Because no one returns their books after they're used. They only return the new ones when they can't use them."

"Do you have a book on the 3,000 tasty recipes for hemlock?"

"Oh, are you taking Greek Mythology?"

"No. I'm having a cocktail party and I want you to come as the only guest!"

Finally I am completely registered and a full-fledged student at UNLV. My packet has been stamped, processed and recorded. My fees are paid and my car is now legal. My books are shiny and new and my jeans are old and wrinkled. I look forward to an exciting semester of learning, larceny and loitering, not necessarily in that order. I've only one problem. Does anyone know when the next ovulation period of the Teddy Bear Hamster begins?"

CSUN Bar-B-Que

There will be a CSUN-sponsored barbeque Wednesday, September 3rd, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the old practice field on the campus. Admission: $.25 for CSUN members, $1.25 for all others. Everyone is invited.

Art Exhibit

An exhibit by artist Dick Peitz will open in the UNLV Art Gallery Tuesday, September 2nd. A reception for the artist will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in the gallery.

Peitz, a 41-year-old artist who has exhibited extensively in the Reno area, is noted for his attention to detail. Many of his works reflect the influence of the Eastern religions and metaphysics.

Poetry

A statewide poetry contest, initiated by the Las Vegas Bicentennial Committee and sponsored by the Las Vegas branch of the National League of American Pen Women, is now open to all Nevada residents.

As a part of the Bicentennial celebration, this official statewide contest will be judged by competent Nevadans from different parts of the state. All poems must have a Nevada theme. The categories are: Nevada's History; Nevada's Place in the Union; Famous Nevadans; Nevada's Unique Environment--Animals, Plants, Deserts, and Mountains.

The entry fee per poem is as follows: Children, $.25; Teens, $.50; Adults $1.00. Check or money order should be made payable to: Poetry Contest, Las Vegas Bicentennial Committee.

There must be three legible copies of each entry. Some of the poems may be chosen for purchase by the Reed Whipple Cultural Arts Center, Las Vegas, for permanent display through the years--to become a permanent part of Nevada's history.

Contest closes February 1, 1976. For further details, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Mrs. Vivian Trollope-Cagle, Chairman, Statewide Bicentennial Poetry Contest, 5683 Titanium, Las Vegas, Nevada 89120.

Form, soon to be available to campus entertainers, will cover "cooperation and attitude of the school's representative the day of the performance, the school's hospitality, whether or not the school met contractual obligations," and other areas of concern to fellow campus entertainers.

There must be three legible copies of each entry. Some of the tified through the organization's monthly magazine.

Now, the entertainers too have been let in on the act and have been given the opportunity to evaluate the campuses on which they perform.

UNR Goes to the dogs

By Ann Henderson, YELL Reno Bureau

Relieved pet lovers are still singing praises for the Reno city Fathers after the city council voted recently to turn down the University Medical School's request to use dogs and cats from the city pound. The animals--approximately 100 to 200 animals a year-- would be used for medical research at the school.

Although medical school officials said that Nevada is the only school in the United States not conducting experiments with higher forms of animal life, and that such research is necessary for accreditation, feelings ran high against the university's request.

The school was asking for a portion of the ten thousand animals destroyed yearly, arguing that the animals would die in the animal shelter vacuum chamber anyway. But an overflow crowd at the decision-making council meeting apparently was not satisfied by university proposals geared to assure protesters that the animals would be treated humanely.

The medical school had proposed an additional waiting period for animals chosen to be research subjects. They claimed this would allow owners additional time to claim their pets. They also proposed a committee to check on the school's use of the animals and called for an owner stipulation that the animal could be used by the school at the time it was brought to the pound.

Acting medical school dean Dr. Thomas Scully said that the school might end up having to buy the animals from commercial breeders. The cost of securing animals for experimental purposes through commercial sources was fixed by one medical school spokesman at approximately seventy-five dollars per animal.

The controversy, however, is far from settled: one county official reportedly made an unofficial statement that the university might look into obtaining animals from the county in the co-operated facility.

Vet cheating investigated

A concern over abuse of government educational benefits by veterans who collect monthly financial benefits but do not attend classes has prompted the Veterans Administration to order each state to investigate the problem.

While the vast majority of veterans are using their benefits properly, a number of wild stories are likely to come to light as the states begin releasing the results of their investigations.

In Oregon, for example, the Daily Journal of Commerce, a state business newspaper, reported that some colleges report that as many as ten per cent of the veterans enrolled in their institutions register for classes then vanish for the rest of the term.

The greatest abuses are likely to be found at community and vocational schools since they tend to be relatively inexpensive. Veterans, who receive a minimum of $270 per month in benefits, would have little to gain by enrolling in a more expensive four-year or private college merely to collect the benefits.

One community college veterans coordinator told the Journal of Commerce that "a number of veterans who are already professional welders have been enrolled in welding for three or four years just to pick up the benefits. Welding has been our most abused technical class and we finally had to limit the number of hours we'd approve for a degree."

POLICY STATEMENT: PROGRESS AND ATTENDANCE

1. Standards of Progress:

A veteran must demonstrate progress in achievement of his/her established goals (degree). Withdrawals or "N's" will not be considered satisfactory progress for any veteran at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. A minimum of twelve units per term must be satisfactorily completed in order to qualify as a full-time veteran under Chapter 34, (G.I. Bill) or a pro-rated number for less than full-time enrollment.

A veteran who does not maintain a 2.0 or better cumulative Grade Point Average (G.P.A.) will be placed on benefits probation for the next term and must contact the Veterans Services Coordinator for counseling or risk the loss of his/her certification for G.I. benefits at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. If after being on probation for one term, the veteran does not make satisfactory progress and maintain a minimum 2.0 Grade Point Average (G.P.A.), he/she faces the possibility of non-certification for further veteran's benefits. At this time, the veteran is required to seek counseling through the Veterans Services Office at UNLV and the Veterans Administration.

A veteran who receives payment for more credit hours than were actually obtained must return overpayments to the Veterans Administration and seek counseling through the Veterans Service Office at UNLV or risk the loss of his/her G.I. benefits.

It is the responsibility of the veteran to immediately advise the Veterans Services Office at UNLV of any change in his/her academic program, or any reduction in hours or withdrawals from classes.

2. Attendance:

At the mid-point of each semester, professors and instructors will be asked to provide information on veterans in their classes who have not maintained satisfactory progress.

New Insurance Plan for Fall

A bargain is hard to find these days, but the new student insurance policy is one that should be irresistible to most students.

This financial protection for unexpected illnesses or accidents should be seriously considered as a necessity no student can be without. Because of the increasing cost of medical services, it was considered necessary to re-evaluate the present policy and plan for increased benefits.

To this end a committee was formed by Dr. Glennen which included representatives from the College of Business and Economics, Student Government, Student Personnel, and the Student Health Service. Proposals were requested from several insurance companies, and, after considerable study, the policy with the most advantages for students at the lowest possible cost was chosen.

Some important features are increases in hospital room and board, hospital miscellaneous expenses, and surgical and anesthesia benefits. One of the most attractive benefits is the coverage for out-patient injury: 100% payment up to $300.00. Another feature that will please many students is the inclusion of treatment for pre-existing conditions on a "one year treatment fee" basis. Over and above these benefits, a Major Medical Plan goes into effect.

These are just general descriptions, but for more detailed and accurate information, brochures are being distributed at registration and are available in the Student Health Office.

The insurance fee will continue to be included in registration fees of regular students taking seven or more credits and may be waived. Dependent Insurance and insurance for all regular students taking six or less credits may also be purchased through the Business Office.

Faculty Activities

Lawrence Dandurand and Henry A. Sciuolo (marketing) were requested to provide research information for expert testimony to the National Commission on Gambling during the recent hearings held in Las Vegas.

Maurice A. Finocchiaro (philosophy) is at the University of Western Ontario in London, Canada, to present a paper on the "Foundations of the Historiography of Science" at the Fifth International Congress of Logic, Methodology, and Philosophy of Science, August 27th to September 2nd. Under the auspices of the International Union of History and Philosophy of Science, the Congress meets every four years and brings together scholars and scientists from all over the world interested in the foundations of mathematics, physics, biology, psychology, social science, and linguistics.

Musical Arts Auditions

The Las Vegas Musical Arts Workshop is now accepting new members for its fall concert, a performance of Handel's Messiah for soloists, chorus, and orchestra, to be presented Sunday, November 2. Guest conductor for this performance will be the world-renowned choral and orchestral conductor, Robert Shaw, musical director of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra and former director of the Robert Shaw Chorus.

Preparatory rehearsals for soloists and chorus will be conducted by Douglas R. Peterson, resident conductor of the Musical Arts Workshop. Choral rehearsals for this performance are held each Sunday and Thursday evening from 7:30 to 9:45 p.m. at the Las Vegas High School Choral Room. Persons interested in joining the chorus or auditioning for a solo role should contact Dr. Peterson for further information. Phone 451-6672.

Library 1st Floor:

"NEED HELP? ASK US" Do that as you start to use the library. For a little advance help I will tell you about the First Floor. Reference Department, Inter-Library Loan Department, Documents Department and the processing departments make up the first floor. You will be concerned with the first three.

Reference is set up to assist you in answering short questions and doing research. The books in this area give factual information such as statistics, biography, summaries like encyclopedias and references to other books, or bibliographies. As we only have one copy of most of these books and they are the "look up" rather than the "reading" kind, we do not check them out, but keep them in the library for constant use.

Indexes and Abstracts are also in the Reference area. These publications let you look under a subject (in some cases also an author) for articles in a variety of journals or magazines. The Card Catalog is a listing in separate sets of drawers of all the books in this library under title, subject and author. It does not list documents or magazines. If you have any problems with it or any other reference materials, don't hesitate to ask the reference staff at the desks or in the yellow offices by the stairs.

Interlibrary Loan is a service which borrows books or magazine articles from other libraries if they are unavailable here. The major problem is the time element. Closeness of a library is not always the deciding factor, volume of business and staffing weigh heavily. Remember if you need to use the interlibrary loan service, that you must do your research early to allow for a two to three week wait for materials to arrive. Foreign or rare items may require months. There is a charge for xeroxing, which is used for most magazine articles, that will vary with the library sending the material. At the present there is no charge for books borrowed from out-of-state libraries.

The Documents Department maintains a collection of U.S. Federal Documents and Nevada State Documents. The Document Librarian will have an article in the future explaining what they are and how to use them.

This sort of sums up the contents of the First Floor of the Library. Remember! When you come in stop and talk to us. The Library offers a one credit course on how to use the library. There are two sections, and they meet Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Greek Column with Don Barry

Get Acquainted Party

In this week's edition of the Greek Column we will take a look at the individual fraternities and sororities at UNLV.

Alpha Delta Pi (AD Pi) Sorority was introduced to UNLV in 1968 and has been active here ever since. Over 25 girls are currently members as well as several "pledges" who signed up last weekend. AD Pi has no house, thus they hold their meetings in the Student Union or in private homes. There are scholastic requirements which must be met, but there are no other restrictions on membership. Trish Truesdahl is the current AD Pi president. For information about AD Pi call Robin Patterson at 870-7726.

Alpha Tau Omega (ATO) Fraternity has a house located at 723 Naples Drive. There are 26 active members in ATO, with Danny Russell serving as president for the third consecutive year. The UNLV chapter of ATO was also started in 1968. The house is a single-story, twelve-room structure which accomodates ten live-in members. Any interested parties should call 734-9289.

Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity was not contacted at press time, and, therefore, most of the information is unavailable. Delta Sig has no house, but uses several recreation centers for their parties which have been quite impressive. Delta Sig has over twenty members (all of them difficult to find!). For further (or should I say any?) information call Steve at 736-8147.

Delta Zeta (DZ) Sorority lists over 30 girls as active members. The president is Debbie Hofferd, who is suffering through her third year at that post. DZ has no house, but appears to be the next organization to build one. As with most UNLV Greek clubs, DZ was established in 1968. More information is available by contacting Jodi Tenuta at 736-3492.

Kappa Sigma (KE) Fraternity is well-known to most students by the weekly parties held after every football game. Their house, located at 2169 Tropicana, is suffering the wrath of State Highway Department which, in order to widen the street, bought their front lawn. But don't worry: president Ric Truesdahl assures me that all systems will be go for a party following next week's football game. Hit hard by graduation, KE is the smallest fraternity on campus, a condition that is not expected to last too long. Kappa Sig was the first fraternity at UNLV. The number of the Kappa Sig house is 736-9045.

Sigma Nu (EN) Fraternity is the newest fraternity, being just one year old. More than twenty members are currently active. Due to the short span of their existence, they, of course, have no house and usually use private homes for parties and meetings.

Sigma Chi (EX) Fraternity is the largest fraternity on campus with total membership of about 50. Last year's Greek Week winners, EX also plans to have parties following each of the football games. The EX house is located at 721 Naples Drive, where the telephone number 734-9291. The Sigs plan to move to a larger house sometime soon, but until that time the two-story, six-room house will be the site of many open parties. The Sigma Chi president is Bill Valardo.

These seven clubs are not the last word on Greek societies, however. Phi Mu, another sorority, may be in the early stages of organization. There have been rumors about Tau Kappa Epsilon starting a chapter here. Both have been here before and are hoping to make a comeback. There is also speculation of a black sorority and a black fraternity which will be reported in coming weeks if these groups get off the ground.

There seems to be a group for everybody, so get out there and find out where you belong!

The UNLV Hotel Association begins its 1975-76 school year with its annual get acquainted party to be held at the home of Dean Vallen on September 6, 1975. All Hotel Administration students are cordially invited to attend this function. This annual affair dates back to 1968 and its purpose is to introduce new students in the hospitality field to their fellow students, faculty, and Hotel Association officers. Food is being furnished through Mr. Michael Mavros, President of the Food Services Executive Association.

The party begins at 12:00 noon until? Students are urged to bring their swimsuits and towels. Further information regarding the party and membership applications for the Hotel Association may be obtained in the Hotel Student Lounge, 7th floor, Humanities Building.

College Football IS Different

More work, more intensity, and more mental preparation are major differences between a high school format, and a college football program.

The YELL spoke with two incoming freshmen who were high on the UNLV recruiting list.

Brian Bethke, an All-American quarterback from South Hills High School in West Covina, California, and Manny Rodriguez, Nevada's most sought after athlete last year talked with the YELL following last Thursday morning's workout on campus.

"A college football program, at least at UNLV, is more mental preparation than anything. More intensity is involved and learning your assignments on the field. More time is spent with the team because there are team meetings each night," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez talked with Iowa, Colorado, UCLA, and Notre Dame before choosing UNLV as his choice.

"The program here is a good program and I really like and respect Coach Meyer and Coach Anderson."

Meanwhile, Bethke had a choice of Georgia Tech, West Point, Oklahoma, UCLA, or Stanford before coming to UNLV. Bethke not only quarterbacked his team to the 4-A Southern Section championship, but punted and place kicked while playing strong safety.

Bethke was impressed by the program Coach Chris Ault presented to him when Ault recruited him. "The new complex on campus is really nice and I know I can adjust to the program. A lot of it is mental preparation and the amount of time put in is much different than high school."

Both Rodriguez and Bethke feel that this is the year for UNLV and a national championship.

Are there a lot of colleges violating NCAA rules and regulations when it comes to recruiting? Bethke felt that there was some colleges violating NCAA rules but he was not approached by any offers "under the table." Rodriguez did not wish to make a comment.

Sick Call Dept.

After two weeks of practice, the UNLV Rebel football team has suffered but one major injury.

Terry Matsy, a sophomore from Lanising, Illinois, suffered a severe ankle sprain and will be in a cast for at least three weeks.

Other than Matsy's injury, the Rebels have been fortunate. Last season, although going undefeated, the Rebels were plagued by injuries all season.

According to head trainer, Rodney Poindexter, there have been a few sprained ankles and knees, but the Rebels seem to be in good shape.

Glenn Carano, who underwent a cartilage operation during the summer, is working with weights and should be 100% by the season opener on September 13th.

Last Friday, Greg Willis, Lucien

Hardy, and Ken Rogers all had their knees checked by Dr. Thomas Armour for the okay to play, but as of press time the YELL had not received the doctor's report.

The Rebels are now down to one-a-day practices after going a full week with two-a-day workouts and with the exception of Terry Matsy, UNLV should be at full strength by the season opener.
