

Students Vote Against Plus/Minus Almost 4 to 1

by Rick Oshinski

CSUN members have voted overwhelmingly against the recent institution of the plus/minus grading system on the UNLV campus.

In a referendum question during this year's CSUN Senate elections, students cast 601 votes in favor of a straight letter grade system and only 141 votes in favor of the plus/minus system.

The referendum ballot read: "Do you favor the change in UNLV's grading system (i.e. A-4.0, A-3.7, B+3.3, B-3.0, etc.?" On the ballot, students were able to vote for either the plus/minus or straight letter system.

The referendum question came about on Sept. 30, 1980, when the CSUN Senate unanimously passed a proposal to place the question on the ballot for the Senate elections. The change in UNLV's grading system was originally recommended by the University Academic Standards Committee in the spring of 1978. The proposal made its way to the floor of the Faculty Senate on April 3, 1979 and was approved by a vote of 109-77.

Before such a change could be implemented, it had to be approved by the Board of Regents. That approval was granted on March 10, 1980, thus, the plus/minus system is scheduled to officially begin following the present fall semester. The new system will not be mandatory, however. Individual instructors have the option of using whichever system they choose.

The final results were no surprise to CSUN officials. The Senate has been fighting the plus/minus system since it was first recommended. In November of last year, the Senate passed a resolution opposing any change in the current grading system. Following the board of Regents decision, student leaders succeeded in getting the Academic Standards Committee to take another look at the decision with the hope that they might reconsider it. The ASC only allowed the student officers to voice their opinions as no action was taken on the issue.

The purpose of the referendum was to show the faculty that the majority of students were in fact opposed to the plus/minus system. Twelve percent of the CSUN membership voted in this year's election with a victory margin of over 3.5 to 1 against, it appears that CSUN has proven its point.

Quiet Campaign Ends, New Senate To Begin

by Mary Beth Nisopole

Results of the CSUN Senate elections, held last Thursday and Friday, were released only a few hours after the polls around campus closed because a computer was used for the first time by the Election Board to tabulate votes. This is a change from previous years, when having to count the ballots by hand took until late in the evening.

The Clark County School District donated both ballots and computer time to the election. Ron Jones, of the Clark County Computing Center, gave UNLV approximately 4000 ballots and ran them through the school district's computer using a program already written and used in school elections.

Besides taking only about 15 minutes to complete, using the school district's computer saved the Election Board from having to have a program written for the university computer.

Election Board Chairman Martha Boos said she felt the new method for adding up votes "went really well" and added there are plans to use the same system in the Executive Board elections this spring.

Twelve percent of the CSUN members, 647 students, voted in this election. This is the first year this total could be obtained, due to students being able to cast more than one vote in many races. The computer program used allowed the number of voters as well as the number of votes cast to be counted.

There probably were more voters in this year's election, judging from the number of Senators receiving over 100 votes. The 1979 Senate Elections were the first time any student collected 100 or more votes.

Last year, only University College Senators Kelly Campbell and Rick Oshinski each went over the 100 mark, with 125 and 118 votes respectively. Rick Oshinski was the top vote-getter this year with 166 votes. Eight other University College candidates in this year's race went over 100: Marshall Kulesha, 157; Lori Ann Kanton, 156; Scott Karoon, 153; Mark Jackson, Jr., and Patrick J. Malloy, each 110; Tom Foskari, 108; Scott J. Lewandowski, 108; and Sy Taylor, 101.

Despite these high numbers, the total turnout in the University College was only nine percent (258 students) of the total number of CSUN members there.

The College of Business and Economics had the largest percentage of CSUN students turnout to vote, with 24 percent or 139 people casting their ballots.

The Election Board acted on only one complaint in a generally quiet campaign. A letter of apology is being written to Arts and Letters candidate Robert O. Peters, who told the board he hadn't been notified that his posters were moved in the Union. The Board had rearranged posters on the board at the north entrance to the Union, assigning space to candidates by college.

The new senators take office on November 1. The first meeting of the new Senate is November 4, which is Election Day for local, state and national politicians across the country.

Opinion: People got in Negratti's Way

by Charles R. Bloom

Al Negratti, who became Director of Athletics at UNLV on January 1, 1980, has resigned his position effective on June 30, 1981.

Negratti felt that the lack of cooperation from the fund raising office and the administration left no room for second thoughts.

Negratti inherited a program in turmoil at UNLV and was some $570,000 in the red. In less than six months in office, that was reduced to $400,000. Many people got in the way of Negratti in trying to cut the deficit of the athletic department.

Negratti had run-ins with officials in the athletic department over reducing the amount of complimentary tickets to basketball and football games, cutting the amount of scholarships available and limiting the number of jobs in the athletic department.

When Negratti was hired, UNLV president Pat Goodall remarked, "He is well known and is particularly knowledgeable about intercollegiate athletics in the West."

Goodall added, "He is especially strong in internal management and budget administration, and is well regarded for his ability to work with alumni, boosters, and other community groups."

Negratti also worked very hard to schedule opponents for UNLV. He has secured contracts with Oregon, Washington State, Syracuse and the University of Michigan in football. Negratti also worked hard to have the three National Invitational Tournament games in basketball at the Convention Center this past year.

He got back-to-back games with nationally-ranked Georgetown University scheduled to be played in 1981 and 1982 on national TV.

Apparently, the Board of Regents have split emotions about this incident. Regent Bob Cashell is very disturbed with the way the Athletic department was being run, but since Negratti has come, he has been very pleased. Cashell has strongly opposed the resignation of Negratti and has ordered an investigation of the fund raising department at UNLV.

Southern Nevada Regent James "Bucky" Buchanan seems to think that Negratti did not have control of the fund raising process at UNLV. Buchanan said Negratti had conflicts with the coaches and the staff of the UNLV Athletic Department.

Negratti had been Athletic Director at University of California at Santa Barbara for six years before coming to UNLV. He also served 10 years at the University of Portland and became Athletic Director at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, New York before moving to a similar post at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Negratti believed in a clean cut department. UNLV, which has had its troubles in the past with the NCAA and is trying to gain admission into the WAC, needed the guidance of Negratti and he gave it to them.

Negratti looked into discrepancies of the athletic department. He turned information over to the District Attorney's office that resulted in three employees, Sherman Bennett, ticket manager; Dan Ayala, former women's basketball coach; and Dominic Clark, sports information director; facing charges of embezzlement.

Negratti received some negative feedback when he proposed that the soccer program at UNLV be cut from the athletic budget. But after many long days, the soccer program stayed on under a reduced budget and so far has done well.

Added Goodall about the appointment of Negratti, "He understands the need for balance between academics and athletics. I have talked to many people about him, and without exception, his absolute integrity and his commitment to hard work are mentioned as outstanding characteristics."

Bill Ireland was the athletic director for 11 years at UNLV before Negratti took over the position. Many people applied for the job but the Las Vegas police assistant behind Roger Harman, former seated athletic director who passed away March 14, 1980.

The selection of the athletic director is going to be a slow and drawn out process. Many people think that Dennis Finrock, who is the Assistant Athletic Director will be the new AD. But others who might have a chance could be former Arizona State Athletic Director Fred Miller or former San Diego State AD Ken Kerr.

Negratti announced his resignation only nine and a half months after taking over the job and seems that a successor will not be picked until later.

Elevators Fail To Comply

By Perri Jean Schlosser

Due to a change in federal regulations in August of this year, the original passenger elevators planned for the UNLV library addition currently under construction, failed to comply with handicap dimensions now required.

University staff, administration, architects, and members of the State Public Works Board will be meeting Thursday to discuss plans to remedy the situation. Architect Bob Fieldon said his firm has developed the information necessary for a change order that will comply with the new federal regulations. The revision focuses on reworking the freight elevator, including finishes to match the three other passenger elevators that originally complied in the '78 contract.

The additional cost of this change order is presently estimated at $25,000. According to Vice President for Business Affairs Herman Westfall, money for compliance will come from the $5,100,000 project cost allocated by the state, and the university bond issue.

Westfall hopes any problems regarding handicap regulations will be resolved at Thursday's meeting. Questions or complaints concerning this issue can be directed to Affirmative Action Officer Jim Kitchon, 739-3773, in FDH 632, as this group is monitoring the situation.

Jones Addresses Senate

By Ginger Clayton

Jim Jones, candidate for University Regent, District C, addressed the CSUN Senate Tuesday and answered questions posed by senators and students. His opponent, incumbent Chris Karamanos, is expected to speak next week. Questions covered topics such as zero based budget proposal, the proposed law school, and Question 8.

Jones said he agreed with the students' desire to have a strong voice in the operation of the University. In the case of the proposed zero based budget, this would include CSUN control over its own budget.

He estimated cost of the proposed law school to be near $6 million in the first year due to the cost of a building, a law library, and basic operating costs. He said the money could be used to build a law school or it could be used to improve existing programs. He described the push for a law school as being a matter of choice, not a necessity, with UNLV over professional schools and the prestige that would accompany the formation of a law school in Las Vegas.

About Question 6, Jones said, "My first concern is we're making a constitutional amendment. The money we're taking away the control of the people over regulating taxes." Jones said he feels higher sales and income taxes would be implemented to compensate for the loss of revenue in property taxes.

In other senate business, CSUN President George Hanson made a motion to disavow the relationship with UNLV over professional schools and the prestige that would accompany the formation of a law school in Las Vegas.

Arts and Letters Senator Dale Hulen, who originally charged Corbett, said that he was opposed to disavowing the committee, saying that Corbett should be given "this day in court, as it were."

It is a question of whether or not an individual has a right, under extenuating circumstances, to do some things that aren't appropriate for a senator. At this point Hanson withdrew his motion. George Hanson requested a new University meeting, which he incorporated the use of the MGM film at home games and a certain-winner film contests for seasons to year at outdoor state games. The accompanying slogan was "Rise of the Rebel Crowd." It was suggested that it would be a national promotion. "The MGM Lion national promotion."

Roars For US", and that the lion would project this image.

Hulen, chairman of the Mascot Committee, said there were "positive aspects" of the idea and that the arrangement would not be "necessarily permanent." He said, "It would be something that would symbolize the Rebel spirit."

University College Senator Tom Foskari said the lion was "cute", and added, "into bohemian." He also said that the idea of the lion as mascot being temporary bothered him.

Hulen then explained that if the lion worked, "it could become permanent."

The mascot suggestion was given a vote of confidence and was left to further investigation. Hulen said that any input from students would be appreciated.

A request from the Philosophy Department for an allocation of $60 to bring in a speaker was turned over to the Entertainment and Programming Board.

The Executive Board was given a directive to make nominations for the Judicial Council as soon as possible.

Religious Groups Recognized

By Ginger Clayton

Religious organizations have been officially recognized by the CSUN Senate. These groups include the Baptist Student Union, UNLV Christian Fellowship Association, the Labor Day Senate Student Center, and Bahai's.

Official recognition gives an organization an opportunity to use student facilities free of charge. It also enables them to obtain funds through CSUN for co-sponsored events.

The religious organizations will only receive requested funds if they are to be used for non-religious activities.

The question of whether or not to recognize the religious organizations has been the center of debate for several years. Arts and Letters Senator Dale Hulen, a proponent of recognition, said that people who share certain beliefs shouldn't be discriminated against on that principle. He feels that every student organization should have the right to meet on campus.

However, he feels that asking CSUN for funds to co-sponsor events is another matter. He said that those groups have the right to apply for matching funds as long as they are providing entertainment services for the students that aren't necessarily religiously oriented. He says that if you go to any function sponsored by a group that endorses any kind of philosophy, the faculties will carry overtones of that philosophy simply because it is associated with this group.

He described the existence of a double standard on campus, and says that the fraternities and sororities, even though social groups, have distinct religious overtones in their events. He heard his statement on the fact that he is a member of a fraternity. He adds that the religious organizations are also social groups that have like-minded religious principles. He said it bothered him that the senate would dole out money to fraternities and sororities and not to the religious organizations when both are religion oriented.

Bill Haldeman, an opponent of recognition, said his major concern was that student monies are used for the furthering of a doctrine that the majority of the students may not endorse. Haldeman said that even though the sponsored event might have no religious bias, it would still have religious overtones, simply because the name of the organization would suggest it. Haldeman expanded this concern to include monies spent on events that may not be approved of, such as beer parties and wet T-shirt contests. He felt that it was not right that someone would have to support something he or she didn't believe in or approve of.

Regent Meeting Called

There will be a special meeting of the Board of Regents at 10:00 a.m., Friday, October 24, 1980, in Room 399, Carlson Administration Building, University of Nevada, Las Vegas. The discussion and possible action will regard to the intercollegiate athletic program at the two universities.

Vending Bucks to Financial Aid

By Ken Shope

Many students, faculty and staff may wonder who owns, runs and profits from the vending machines on campus.

According to A.L. Cunningham, an officer in the UNLV business office, the machines are owned by an outside contractor who operates and refills the machines.

The university then receives part of the profits from what is sold. The university receives a certain percentage from the sale of cigarettes, and different percentage for candy, and soda pop.

Many people ask why the university contracts the vending machines, allowing a private company to make all the money, instead of owning the machines itself, and keeping the profits?

In response to this, Cunningham said, "The information that I have obtained from various magazines and so forth tells me that several other universities have tried to run their own vending machine programs, purchase their own material, service their own machines, purchase their own machines and maintain their own machines.

"It has been found that in these instances where it has been tried, other universities found it was more profitable to go to an independent contractor and receive a percentage of the gross profits," Cunningham said. "And there is no problem with storage or theft of materials during the interim period."

What is done with the money the university receives from these machines? The profits, ranging from $15,000 to $20,000 each year, goes to the financial aid office.

According to John Standish, of the Financial Aid Office, "We act as the secretary for the Faculty Senate Financial Aid Committee. We let them know that there are X number of dollars that have been deposited by the business office.

"This year we received $20,000 from the vending machine revenue. The scholarships are $500 each, so we tell the committee that there are 40 scholarships available.

"The committee then makes the decision as to who gets these scholarships, and they are awarded on the basis of academic merit. Usually you must have a certain grade point average to get this scholarship.

"The way we are involved is that we keep track of the money that goes out. If a student applies for financial aid, we must see what other money he is receiving. But it is the Senate that has control over this money, and we just do with it what they tell us to," Standish said.

Dean goes to Weber State

By Patti Hibbette

Robert Smith, current dean of the College of Science, Math and Engineering, has accepted a new post at Weber State College in Ogden, Utah. At Weber, Smith will be the Vice President of Academic Affairs, beginning in January 1981.

According to Smith, he will have partial, and in some cases, total responsibility for many areas at Weber, including the honors program and all academic factors. The deans of each college will report directly to him, and he will be involved with the faculty and student senates.

Before coming to UNLV, Smith received his doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley. He then accepted the position of Assistant Professor of Chemistry in 1961 here at UNLV. He worked in this capacity until 1966, when he was selected as Associate Chairman of the Physical Science Department. During 1967-68, he was the Chairman of the Chemistry Department, and in 1968 received full professorship and became Dean of the College of Science, Math and Engineering.

Smith said, "I have really enjoyed my 20 years here. The three nicest things about being here are that we were always able to do new things, it (UNLV) was changing quickly, and we have had extraordinary success in attracting good faculty members. They're the hardest thing to leave."

Hotel Prof off to Russia

By Rebecca Rounds

One of UNLV's Hotel Professors, Charles Levinson, will be participating in a panel conducting bar management seminars in Russia. This prestigious honor was offered to Levinson by the Seagram Overseas Sales Co.

Levinson's association with Seagram originated last year when he was notified of opening a company in Russia. According to the company, Seagram Overseas Sales Co., Levinson, the Seagram Panel had operation offers liquor, wine and champagnes to nations all over the world. On account of Levinson's work at the university, his credentials, and his college textbook, Food and Beverage Operations, he was flown to New York for an interview.

Levinson left October 17th for the two week seminar in Russia, which is being held in the cities of Moscow and Sochi. Following this trip, he says he has no plans in the near future to conduct another seminar.

Since his acceptance into the company, Levinson has done extensive traveling to lecture students and professionals on bar management. This past summer he had the opportunity to accompany a group conducting a

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Sexual Harassment: What To Do

By Mary Beth Nitzschke

Changes of sexual harassment recently surfaced at Yale University in Connecticut. Numerous complaints were filed against a male professor claiming he was making sexual overtures to female students.

It not only caught the attention of Yale administrators, but of administrators of other campuses as well.

Here at UNLV, the situation hasn't reached that level, but sexual harassment does occur. Because it does, Affirmative Action Officer James Kitchen is in the process of writing formal regulations concerning the reporting and handling of harassment reports. These regulations will eventually be incorporated into the University bylaws. Under this kind of contract, employees of the university, as well as the university itself, would be legally liable for a law suit if enough evidence was presented against an employee.

As of now, reports should be given to Jim Kitchen in Humanities 622. According to psychology professor Diane Turnbough, "Some women are hesitant to talk to a male about this type of thing. A female is being sought to help Kitchen." It is not known how much harassment goes on around UNLV because not much of it is reported. Turnbough has some hints about how students can avoid putting themselves in a position where harassment could occur, and how to deal with it if they fear it has already started.

1. Schedule meetings with your professor during regular business hours. Avoid unusual hours or meetings in social places such as bars, restaurants, etc.

2. Bring a friend.
3. Be assertive enough to ask that the door to the office remain open if you're uncomfortable with it closed.

4. Use the "broken record" technique. This includes repeating over and over again that you are not interested in the persons affection. They will soon tire of the game.

There are also cases in which the students make advances towards their professors. When this occurs, the professor also has the right to report a disturbance.

"If you really are interested in your professor and he/she is genuinely interested in you," says Turnbough, "wait until the class is over for the semester before you start dating. It is just a common sense procedure."

Health Fair Informs Public

By Thomas G. Fosharis

She added that "the advantages of participating in the Health Fair are that the participant can receive multiple health screening tests free of charge. For example, we offered a glaucoma-vision screening exam at no cost to the participant, while a comparable test at another health service facility could range from $45 to $75.

A Pap Smear with us was free but at another health service facility it might run between $45 to $100. The Health Fair was designed to reach those people who might otherwise neglect to take preventative health examinations."

The 1980 Health Fair was sponsored by the American Red Cross, KTNV Channel 3, and the Holiday Casino. One of the satellite locations for the Health Fair was the Moyer Student Union. Dr. Michel, Chairman of the Department of Nursing, was the UNLV site co-ordinator. Although the final figures for the total Las Vegas operation have not been released, she said that "we (UNLV) saw 802 people in two days." She added that "Most people were pleased with the Fair both as a community and health service."

"We owe a lot of thanks to the people who made it possible. Namely, the UNLV student nurses who volunteered their time, the faculty and staff from the Department of Nursing who conducted the counseling and referral section, and Pools by J.P. who was the financial sponsor for the UNLV site."

Dr. Michel also expressed a concern over a "disappointingly low student turnout" she said, but "community support was just great, but we would have liked to see more student and faculty participation, especially since we did find some cases in which students had high blood pressure."

Kelly Campbell, a student who participated in the Fair said, "I thought that it was very beneficial to the whole community, and those people who didn't participate really lost out. You know-I hope they do it again in the spring."

Last Drop Day

By Tom G. Fosharis

Tomorrow, Friday October 24th, is the last day to drop any classes according to Steve Neheisel, UNLV Assistant Registrar. After 24th classes can only be dropped with instructors consent. These regulations are part of a new Drop-Add policy which was adopted by the faculty senate last year.

Joseph Fry, Chairman of the Faculty Senate said that the new policy was an attempt to enhance communications between students and faculty. Fry explained, sometimes students drop a class when they are doing well, because they believe they are doing poorly. If they would check with their instructor, they could find out exactly what their progress was.

Also, the new policy is an attempt to tighten up some of the slack in the system, in order to make it more equitable.

Neheisel said that the new policy (which is now in effect) is as follows:

1. A student may drop a class up to the 8th week of school without receiving a grade.
2. Any drops after that time require instructors consent (signature).
3. A 50 percent refund will be given, up until the 6th week of classes.
4. No refunds will be given on classes dropped after the six week period.

Union Board Spokesman Discusses Damages

By Mary Beth Nitzschke

At the organizations Board Meeting October 16, Student Union Assistant Director Deborah Baird spoke on the subject of damages to the union at various activities throughout the year.

According to Baird, damages to the Student Union amounted to $8,000 last year. So far this year, damages include a broken door, two broken windows, tiles missing from the 2nd floor of the Union, and a broken light. In order to try and keep damage to a minimum this year, restrictions have been set on the times liquor, music, and people must be out of the union when an activity is held.

All ticket sales for beer will be stopped at 1:00 am. All beer drinking and music, if there is any, will be terminated at 1:30. Everyone will be required to be out of the building by 2:00 am. These rules will hopefully cut down on the amount of damages to buildings where activities are held.

Silver Stars Re-Form To Perform

By Perri Jean Schlosser and Dawn Stibben

Harry Blake

The Silver Stars performed "Hand Jive" at Saturday's Rebel game as a "drill team minus seven", according to Band Director Harry Blake. After the entire UNLV drill team walked out on their own accord, Blake stipulated one week in which the girls interested in returning could contact him. Nine of the original 19 members returned.

The drill team will continue performing with only nine members for the band's next appearance at the Rebel game. Blake said he will hold auditions for additional members sometime "down the road", but will make sure they are willing to work together as a group before they are accepted. Presently, Blake is "worried about future performances, not past problems", as the band's big performance is scheduled for the Hawaii game, November 18.

Issues from Blake were cited as the drill teams reason for withdrawing from the band two and a half weeks ago. Discussion concerning uniform design and performance procedure contributed to problems surrounding the walkout.

Music Department Chairman Kenneth Hanlon said the team wanted uniforms that would make the "Dallas Cowgirls a little less sexy than themselves." In regard to the walkout, Hanlon said, "As far as I'm concerned, this is a dead issue."

Balanced Budget May Affect Higher Education

By Michael Arkus

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)—Both Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan seek a balanced budget as soon as possible, but neither candidate will specify which segments of government's aid to higher education would be cut to meet that goal.

Almost certain victims of any belt-tightening, colleges and universities are still in the dark as neither man has designed a long-range strategy to cope with the escalating costs of higher education.

At the same time, the two candidates have been waging quiet campaigns claiming they are the closest friend of the nation's colleges and universities. The president's crew points to his long list of accomplishments in subsidizing college education for many lower and middle-income youth. With the same pride, Ronald Reagan's team makes it sound like no other former governor ever did as much for the students of his state.

Jimmy Carter has done more for students of higher education than any other president," says Anne Wexler, special assistant to the president. "Over a four-year period, he has increased aid to the system by more than 72 percent. Our focus will continue to be to help students make it into college."

"Ronald Reagan boosted state loans and across-the-board scholarships by 900 percent during his two terms," counters Mary English, a Reagan press aide, "and he raised state expenditures for state school and community colleges by several times."

And, of course, along with evidence of past commitment, come promises of future concern.

"The president knows education is an important investment in our future," says Wexler, "and he would never cut anything out that would be vital to that investment."

Wexler, though admitting there would have to be budget cuts somewhere to achieve the promised balanced federal budget, refuses to speculate where they would be. Instead, she says, the American people should leave it up to the better judgment of Jimmy Carter to decide what is necessary and what is fit in the budget.

Reagan wants to restore the integrity of our higher education system, especially the student loan program," English adds. "Most of all, he believes that if we fix the economy, that would be the best solution for the colleges."

Yet Reagan's record in dealing with higher education was highly controversial in the past. As California governor during the turbulent protests of the sixties, at times he became very impatient.

"If students want a bloodbath, by god they're going to get one," he said during that period.

And it is said that many of the massive student aid programs he signed into law were stuffed down his throat by a liberal-minded legislator. He, it is alleged, was personally against those programs.

Carter, on the other hand, raises some doubts about his future plans for higher education. Even Wexler concedes that the president has developed no concrete overall plan to deal with the upcoming problems of colleges during the next four years. Despite the certainty of difficult financial conditions, neither side could promise that the federal government would be there to pick up the slack.

"Everybody has to learn how to tighten the belt," said Wexler, implying that colleges and universities would have no choice but to reduce or even eliminate specific programs of departments.

"The role of the federal government will be what it has always been," she adds, "and that is to help the students much as possible. If we do our part and the states do theirs, there shouldn't be any problem. Still, we can't be responsible for mismanagement."

English said that other than Reagan's firm commitment to repairing the economy—which he believes would automatically solve most of higher education's problems—the governor has no specific programs to insure the stability of many institutions. But, considering his belief that states and localities should have more control over education, it seems likely that he would reduce the involvement of the federal government.

Wexler, who was interviewed in a special press conference by reporters from College Press Service, Yale, Boston University, Syracuse, Rutgers, and the State University of New York at Brockport, also defended the president's often-biting criticism of Reagan's campaign. She said his personal attacks may be slightly exaggerated, but are necessary to define the clear differences between the two men.

"The president is expressing his concern that Reagan wouldn't want BALT and that he has a very simplistic approach to our country's problems," she said.

She adds the White House lawyers are working vigorously to settle the constitutional problems of the nationwide draft registration program. In July, a federal court judge in Philadelphia ruled the program unconstitutional because it discriminated against women. But within a day, the Supreme Court granted a temporary injunction to enable registration to be completed. "We want to solve this as soon as possible," Wexler said, adding the president has no plans to institute a draft in the near future.

When asked under what circumstances President Carter would commit American troops to the Persian Gulf, she answered, "If the Straits of Hormuz were to become inaccessible."

"In that condition," she says, "the president might have to fall back on his promise in his State of the Union address to protect our vital interests."

The presidential assistant, a former undersecretary of commerce, praised the Carter administration as a prime innovator of "reducing government regulations" on American industries during the first term. She referred to the deregulation of the trucking and airline industries as the best examples.

Her comments contradicted the Republican's accusation that President Carter has impeded the growth of big business because of excessive government regulations.

Colleges Bring Back Old Mascots

(CPS)—"What would you think," activist Lamar Thomas rhetorically asked a crowd of some 500 students gathered to convince Michigan State University administrators to make their affirmative action programs more aggressive, "if they called the Washington Redskins the 'Washington Yids' or the Atlanta Braves the 'Atlanta WASPs'?"

But that was more than ten years ago, when civil rights activists used sports team nicknames as part of their broad attack on institutionalized racism. The activities, in fact, earned a number of successors on the collegiate level in their effort to soften the stereotypes often employed as sports mascots.

Stanford and Dartmouth, for example, surrendered "Indian" as their nicknames out of respect to Native Americans, who characterized the appellations as racist.

Yet now, often years after the changes and after the activists who forced them have left campuses, some restive traditionalists are trying to bring the old mascots back.

At Stanford last month, an insurance salesman named Larry Ziebell staged a rally in favor of restoring the "Indians" name to Stanford's sports teams, and bringing back a character named Prince Lightfoot to ride horseback around the football stadium during games.

At Dartmouth, an alumni group called Faddis is lobbying in favor of re-adopting the school's old Indian mascot, which was dropped in 1970.

And at Peikin High School in Peikin, Illinois, an administration attempt to rid the school once and for all of the nickname "Chinks" inspired about a dozen students to pull off a three-day boycott of classes last month.

Stanford's traditionalists are probably the boldest. The university had dropped its "Indians" name—eventually replaced by "Cardinals"—in 1973, when it also quit its practice of allowing the fully-costumed Prince Lightfoot to whoop around the playing field. Last October, however, Tim Williams, the man who portrayed Prince Lightfoot from 1951 through 1972, abruptly re-appeared at a Stanford game in full regalia.

Williams, it turned out, had been snuck into the stadium. His ride around it elicited cheers from some and dismay from others. Richard Lyman, then Stanford's president, later ordered Williams never to appear on the field again.

So this season Williams' supporters organized a rally which drew about 100 people. Bob Beyers of the Stanford News Service claims that "half of them were against it. They came wearing armbands in protest."

Beyers derides "movement" leader Ziebell as a "tee-shirts to promote the cause."

"I haven't made any money off this," he asserts.

Ziebell and his co-sponsor Allen Smith—who works with Ziebell in the insurance business—think Prince Lightfoot was the victim of a conspiracy.

Smith says that Williams, the prince's alter ego, "is a leader in the community, and there was some jealousy among other Indians. They got the officials at Stanford to get rid of him."

"Most of the Indians at Stanford are from out of state," Ziebell adds. "They don't have a right to make a decision about this." Same goes for Lyman, who ultimately did make the decision to axe the mascot. "Prince Lightfoot had danced on the field before Dr. Lyman was even going to Stanford."

They argue that the character wasn't an insulting stereotype. "He's a famous Indian chief," Smith says of Williams, who owns a California fishing resort. "he's not just some drunken Indian."

"As far as racism is concerned," Ziebell argues, "the Dallas Cowboy doesn't offend Texans; the Minnesota Viking doesn't offend those of Scandinavian descent. We got all caught up in trying to do everything for the minority. Now there's a tremendous backlash."

But university administrators persist in seeing the Indian symbol as unrepresentative of racism. "Universities should be at the forefront in promoting human dignity," Stanford President Donald Kennedy recently wrote in response to the rally on his campus. "A mascot which is offensive or demeaning to groups of people should quite simply not be permitted."

"It was insulting to watch some person at the game put on stripes or carry tomahawk under the influence of liquor," maintains Grace Newell of Dartmouth.

Newell, a Paiutekahone Indian who works in the office of Native Americans at Dartmouth, said that the Ivy League school's prior symbol was especially ironic.

Dartmouth, she explained, was founded some 200 years ago as a school for Indians and area residents. But until 1870, when it shed its Indian mascot, it had graduated only 20 Native Americans in those 200 years.

Presently, "we have now a student body which doesn't use the symbol, but it alumni that uses it because it was in use when they went to school," Newell says.

Despite the re-adoption papers filed by Faddis, the alumni group, Newell observes, "it's not all that political an issue." She suggests that few on campus take Faddis, which also wants to abolish the university's co-educational system, seriously.

But the problem is a common one. Ziebell says 542 secondary and post-secondary schools around the country use some variety of Indian mascot.

No one knows how many of those schools have dropped those mascots, or how many have been pressured to re-adopt them after changing.

Sometimes schools keep Indians as mascots, but try to tone them down. In 1977 Florida State replaced "Savage Sam," a student dressed up as an Indian and used to exhort crowds from the sidelines, with a somewhat less outrageous Seminole Indian image.

Members of the Seminole tribe, which is said to have once owned the entire state of Florida, endorsed the idea of the change, which was conceived by the football coach's wife. Tribe members have even sewn authentic tribal clothing for the new brand of mascot, who is supposed to represent the revered Chief Osceola.

"Everybody loves him," enthuses a spokesman for FSU's sports department. "He leads the team out, and the crowd goes wild."

Selective Service Budget Up

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)—With little debate and even less notice, the Selective Service—which oversees military registration and conscription—has picked up a healthy 26 percent increase in its funding for next year.

Of the racial question, she says, "We've never had a problem with that."

They did at Peikin High School, to which some Chinese-Americans from Chicago traveled in 1974 to take issue with the school's 40-year-old unofficial nickname of "Chinks."

"They didn't demand anything," recalls school principal Art Keller. "They only explained why this is derogatory." In response, Keller began gradually to phase out use of the name, culminating this fall in the official adoption of a new nickname, "The Dragon."

Some 200 students rallied in protest. A dozen of them conducted a three-day boycott of classes. But Keller is determined to see the change through to a conclusion.

"It was not a name we could use freely," he says. "They could use it here, but students couldn't wear garb with 'Chinks' on it and go elsewhere and not be ridiculed."

The funding provision, which gives Selective Service an extra $6 million for a total budget of $27 million, is currently resting in a House-Senate conference committee.

Budget Freeze at State U.

National On-Campus Report

A student government budget freeze at the State U. of New York-Stony Brook halted activities there until student leaders agreed to resolve affirmative action complaints against Polity, the student government.

University President John Marberger refused to certify the 1980-81 Polity budget after the U.S. Office of Civil Rights ruled that the student government violated affirmative action guidelines. The OCR ruling came in response to a complaint lodged by an alliance of Stony Brook minority student groups.

OCR's complaints were primarily of a technical nature, says Marberger. Polity was charged with not making specific affirmative action statements, not keeping records of the ethnicity of its employees, and not advertising enough for minority participation.

Religious Ban Lifted

National On-Campus Report

The U. of Missouri temporarily lifted its ban against religious activities in campus facilities, rather than face further legal action by a Christian student group.

Conserations, a 30-member religious group, originally brought a suit against the U. of Missouri-Kansas City in 1977, seeking the right to hold worship services in school facilities. A three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals this summer upheld that right, saying that allowing religious student groups to use school facilities does not violate the constitutional doctrine of separation of church and state. Polity President Rich Zuckerman maintained the OCR ruling was unfair because the organization wasn't told of its affirmative action obligations.

Zuckerman and Polity agreed, however, to sign a letter of intent promising to include statements of affirmative action and equal opportunity in the Polity constitution and bylaws and to make a formal statement of hiring practices by Nov. 1, says Paul Chasen, Polity's assistant to Marberger. Polity also agreed to include in its budget report income from investment of student fees and sources such as ticket sales, says Chasen.

Polity and the alliance of minority student groups originally clashed last spring when the minority groups unsuccessfully demanded a certain percentage of Polity funds to be given to their activities.

Unique Pay Program

National On-Campus Report

Rather than pay its student leader outright, Ohio State U. compensates its student body president and vice presidents by replacing the money they would have earned as summer or school-year jobs.

These two officers are required to attend school for their yearlong term of office, says Undergraduate Student Government President Paul LaRue. OSU provides quarter expenses, however, including tuition, room and board, and also provides the cash equivalent (up to $4,400) of what the student earned the previous year in the summer job. If the USG leaders worked during the previous school year, the university will replace those earnings as well. Funding comes from a special endowment fund, set up in honor of a former alumni affairs director. Despite these provisions, LaRue says he will lose money as USG president and dismisses the thought that any candidate would be financially motivated. "All this basically does is make the office available to anybody, not just the students who don't have to work while in school," says LaRue.

Christmas Cards to Servicemen

By Karen Cohen

If you would like to send Christmas cards to American servicemen, Armed Forces Mail Call can help you. All you have to do is write personal messages inside Christmas cards. Place the cards in individual envelopes, but do not stamp on them. Write only your own address on the outside of the envelope, and mail them in one envelope. Mail Call by November 20.

Currently, the non-postal distribution operates only at Christmas time, but plans are being made for a year-round program.

Cards can be sent to Armed Forces Mail Call at 2170 West Broadway, Anaheim, California, 92806. Applications for participation in the program can be obtained by writing the same address.

Basketball Practice Starts

By Ken Wilson

Once again, the North Gym of the Paul McDermott Physical Education Complex echoed with the sound of bouncing basketballs as the University of Nevada Las Vegas, Runnin' Rebels basketball team officially began practice this past Wednesday.

Under the enthusiastic direction of eighth year Coach Jerry Tarkanian, the Rebels, with a nucleus consisting of returning stars and the addition of several outstanding junior college talents, have all of the prerequisites for a successful 1980-81 campaign.

Here at UNLV the first day of "roundball" practice also means the annual media-photo day. Without a doubt, Tarkanian and Company were in full stride as was evident by 25 foot jump shots going criss! Bam-jam slams going bang! And an over-abundance of confidence in anticipation of the upcoming season filling the air.

Certain statements and questions seem to arise about this time every year. Last season's million dollar mystery statement was: "They're too young, but talented." Many Rebel analysts observed the team in this manner. This year's stopper is, "Who's gonna play point guard?"

It seemed as if Michael Burns had inherited the spot in the season, but a twist developed with Greg Goojian's arrival on campus.

On one side of the coin, Goojian, a transfer from Arizona State University who redshirted last season is a skilled ball handler. And at 6-3 Goojian, a sophomore, is also an explosive outside gunner.

Turning to the other side, there's Michael "Spiderman" Burns, a smooth 6-7 junior who packs the necessary equipment, quickness, and ball-handling ability, to upstart at the position. Burns was also the second leading scorer on last season's 22-0 squad, averaging 14.3 points and 7.3 rebounds per game.

"We're gonna try to rotate them at the position," said Tarkanian. "Practices will tell which way we'll go."

Concerning depth at the point, the team is hurting from the loss of junior guard Michael Loyd. The 5-10 speed merchant suffered a dislocated knee in an automobile accident last month and is definitely out for the coming season. Since Loyd suffered no paralysis, playing basketball in the future is very possible.

There's one thing for sure this season: When you say Sidney Green, you've said a mouthful. Green, a 6-9 forward from Brooklyn, N.Y., who received All American Honorable Mention honors, is back after a sparkling collegiate debut in which he led the team in scoring with an average of 15.5 points per game, and in rebounds with 11.1 per game average.

Also returning from last season's squad that made the Final Four of the National Invitational Tournament are key members: Sophomore Larry Anderson, a sleek 6-6 guard with averages of 11.4 points-per-game, and 8.1 rebound-per game; academically gifted junior forward Richard Box with an average of 10.8 points-per-game and 7.1 rebound-per-game; and the massive Michael Johnson, a junior and a frightening figure at 6-6, 240 lbs., who came on very strong in the latter part of the season, and finished with averages of 10.4 points-per-game and 7.3 rebound-per-game.

Coch Tarkanian recruited only two players, but what finds! The first being 6-10 center John Copeland from Mt. San Antonio College, where he averaged 17.0 points per-game and 10.0 rebounds per-game last season. However, if at all possible, Tarkanian indicated that he'd like to save this prize and redshirt him for next year.

Tarkanian also hooked another New Yorker, Eddie Roberson, who arrived here by way of Riverside Community College, where he averaged 19.6 points per-game and 17.3 rebounds per-game last year. Roberson's 6-8 frame should strengthen the Rebel frontline play.

Other returning lettermen from last year are Mr. Hustle, Ed Pawlak, a 6-7 junior center and classy 6-3 senior guard Eric Gaines.

The remainder of the Rebel's roster will be filled by eager walk-ons that include: Derrick Giles, a 6-2 freshman guard; Mike McWilliams a 5-8 freshman guard; Terry Tebbe, a 5-10 junior guard; Steve Flint, a 6-3 sophomore forward; and Sam Johnson, a 6-4 junior guard.

Once again observers question the lack of overall depth of the Rebels acquired by the loss of Michael Loyd. Thus far, Coach Tarkanian has indicated the possibility of going with a seven-man system, thus adopting the phrase, "A few good men," in hopes of making the trip to Philadelphia and the NCAA final four.

Colorado State Rams Have Come A Long Way

The Colorado State Rams have come a long way. Earlier this season, it seemed as if the Rams were going to build a home in the cellar of the Western Athletic Conference. But the Rams are now 3-0 in the WAC and are all alone in first place.

The Rams beat the Astecs of San Diego State 26-7, this past weekend in Las Vegas. Alvin Lewis, who was the WAC's leading all-purpose runner, gained 187 yards on 33 carries against the Astecs and also scored on a 40 yard touchdown run for the Rams final score.

Placekicker Jon Poole connected on four field goals to give him 11 on the year and helped the Rams to 14 first half points.

The Rams were outscored 177-39 by non-WAC opponents and started the season 0-3.

The Rams are now 3-0 in the WAC and 4-3 overall. The Astecs, who were supposed to be contenders for the WAC crowns, but have the lowest point total in the WAC, are now 1-3 in the league and 1-5 overall.

The Utah went into Laramie, Wyoming for their matchup with the Wyoming Cowboys tied for the top in the WAC with the Rams. They left Laramie with second place as they dropped a 24-21 decision to the Cowboys.

The potent Utah rushing game was only able to muster up 81 yards in 40 carries against the Wyoming defense. The Cowboys used an even-balanced attack led by the rushing of Mendel Robinson and the passing of Phil Davis. Robinson rushed for 68 yards on 13 carries while Davis passed for 80 yards and ran for 49 yards.

Wyoming took a 14-0 lead at the half and led 21-7 after three quarters. The Utah tried a comeback in the fourth quarter, but they fell short after they had scored two touchdowns.

The Utah are now 2-1 in the conference and 4-3 overall, while the Cowboys are 2-3 in the WAC and 4-3 overall.

The Lobos of New Mexico did everything to the University of Hawaii except score more points. The Lobos had more first downs than the Warriors (26-9), more total yards (489-318) and run more plays than the Rainbow Warriors (26-28). But the final score was Hawaii 31 and New Mexico 14.

Senior Lobo running back Jimmy Sayers ran for 181 yards on 18 carries to lead both teams in rushing. Warrior running back Gary Allen carried the pigskin 15 times and rushed for 77 yards.

Lobo quarterback Robin Gariel threw for 180 yards including 16 of 33 passes but was intercepted three times.

Defense was the key word for the Warriors, and they found the big play. Fourteen of the Warriors' 31 points were on defense. Linebacker Doug Kyle ran an interception back 27 yards for Hawaii's first score. The Rainbow Warriors also blocked a kick, and Marcus Tarver returned the ball 54 yards for another score. Allen recovered a teammate's fumble and ran it in from 10 yards out for another score.

Hawaii is now 1-3 in the WAC and 4-2 overall, while the Lobos are 2-3 after getting off to a 3-0 start in the WAC and are 2-4 overall.

Even though the Green Wave of Tulane is not a WAC member, their game against the Air Force Academy was a designated conference game. And the Green Wave took it to Falcons 28-7 in New Orleans.

The Air Force had three more first downs than the Wave did (21-18) but just did not have the yards to contain the Wave. The Falcons were held scoreless for three quarters until Marty Louthan scored from three yards out.

The Falcons are now 0-4 in the WAC and 1-5 overall and the Green Wave is now 4-3. Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon threw for 485 yards and six touchdowns to lead the Cougars to a 70-46 win over Utah State in a non-conference game Saturday afternoon. McMahon completed 21 of 38 passes and also ran for one touchdown.

Altogether, BYU's offense gained 710 total yards to 450 yards for Utah State. Clay Brown and Scott Phillips caught two touchdowns passes each and Eric Lane caught five McMahon aerials for 163 yards.

The Cougars, who were taught to be out of the WAC race when they lost to New Mexico earlier in the year, are now in second place sporting a 2-1 conference record and an overall record of 5-1. Utah State is now 2-4.

It was Cerebral Play Night at the Las Vegas Silver Bowl last Saturday night, but ask anyone there and they would say that it was a "Record Setting Night". Quarterback Jerry Gentry broke the record for most touchdown passes in a season with 17 breaking Glen Carano's mark of 13. Gentry passes for five touchdowns to lead the Rebs to a 53-14 win over Texas-El Paso.

Sam Green also set a record for most touchdown catches in a season with 19. He had five catches against the Minors for 60 yards and now has 27 on the season. He also caught two TD passes.

The Rebels had 629 yards total offense on the night but had four turnovers that will prove dangerous when they take on Oregon next week. The Rebs are now 6-1 overall and if they were in the WAC, they would be 3-1 and in second place. The Minors are now 1-6 on the season and 1-1 in the WAC.

In next weeks game, Brigham Young will travel to Hawaii, Colorado State will take on Utah, Texas-El Paso will host New Mexico, San Diego State will play Wyoming, and UNLV will travel to Oregon.

Players Of The Week

Senior right tackle Art Plumbett has been selected by the offensive staff as the offensive player-of-the-week, junior right tackle Bruce Sears has been picked as the defensive player-of-the-week by the defensive coaching staff and special teams player-of-the-week senior defensive back Bob Lowry as picked by the Rebel special teams coach.

UNLV assistant coach Scott Schabman, who handles the Rebel offensive line and is the head junior varsity coach, commented, "Art has played well for the first half of the season, and against UTEP he had his best game so far. He graded out at 97 percent which is excellent in our grade system. We will need this kind of performance from Art and the rest of the offensive line for the offense to have success in the stretch run this season."

Sears came to UNLV this past spring from Mesa Community College in Arizona and has been battling against teammate Julius Funches for the starting position all season long. He came off the bench against UTEP to earn the honor this week. He had four tackles, two quarterback sacks and one fumble recovery for the game.

Defensive line coach Doug Johnson remarked, "Bruce worked very hard during the week, and kept his intensity up throughout the game. He is very coachable, and is an excellent football player. He was consistently in the UTEP quarterback's face and was a big reason they completed only eight of 34 passes. Bruce teams up with right end Todd Liebenstein to give us a solid pass rush on our right side and an effective force against the run as well."

For the season, Sears now has 11 tackles, 11 assists, one tackle for a loss, two quarterback sacks, one pass break-up and two fumble recoveries.

Rebel special teams coach Jim Maxfield about the performance of Lowry, "Consistency in playing well above average is numerous special teams positions is Bob's forte. In the UTEP game he excelled in making three tackles on the field coverage team, blocked and covered well on our punt team, and recovered the inside trick kick when needed in our third touchdown. Overall, I would have to say that he had an outstanding effort."

Lowry is a three-year Rebel letterman who came to UNLV as a quarterback but also switched over to defense where he has started several games as strong safety for the Big Red Rebel "D".

Volleyball

Bad Luck Strikes Lady Rebs

By Larry Hamilton

The Lady Rebel's Volleyball team has been plagued by bad luck in these past few weeks. The record of this once awesome team has dwindled from that of a winning one, to that of a losing one. The now 6-7-1 Lady Rebel's had such great hopes for this season. They started off like a great race horse coming out of the stall by amassing six victories out of their first eight matches, and vying for one tie. This kind of consistency was like the brand that true champions reflect, but their winning trend was a passing one. The Lady Reb's started to show their consistency in another fashion, the loss column. This team, spoken so highly of at the beginning of the season, has lost their past five matches. The latest defeats have come at the hands of Utah College and Loyola Marymount University. Biola swept past UNLV with scores of 15-3, 15-3, and 15-4. Loyola Marymount gained six victories with scores of 15-0, 15-4, and 16-4.

The individual stars throughout the season have continued to play good ball. These noteworthy players are Margie Himmelsberg (15 service aces, 163 kills), Julie Diggins (11 service aces, 88 digs), and Erin Hill (15 service aces, 830 assists). After returning home from this week's away trip to Cedar City, Utah, the Women's Volleyball team will come home to the UNLV South gym to host the team from the Southern Utah State College on Nov. 9.

Rebs Win On Road

The UNLV Soccer team finally tasted victory this past weekend, and what a taste! The Rebels defeated Long Beach State 4-0.

"We really needed that win down in Long Beach," explained soccer coach Vince Hart. "It was a big morale booster to finally win a game. Now that we've got it going, our goal is to win the last three games and end the year with four wins in a row."

Dave Cohen, Steve Kakin, Tony Kurcz and Dale Taylor added goals for the Rebels as goalkeeper Jerry Gamble had seven saves.

Cohen, who has been out the past few weeks, scored his eighth goal of the season to lead the team.

The Rebs don't have an easy task ahead. They will face Boise State this Saturday, October 25, at 2:00pm on the UNLV Campus pitch in an attempt to string two victories together for the first time this season.

The Rebels, now 4-11, have had a relative amount of success against the Eagles over the past three years. In 1977, the Rebels held the 9-1 line overtime before heading back to 9-1 line. Last year, it was freshman goalkeeper Steve Richter who turned in an outstanding performance in shutting out the Eagles 2-0 in Lakeland, CA.

This season, under the guidance of coach Tim Conrad, Biola has vastly improved on last year's 10-10-3 record. The Eagles are led offensively by junior striker Barry Drake, who is the third leading scorer in Biola history. Defensively, Mike Sutherland will be one to contend with. Sutherland was voted to the All-NWIA District 3 first team last season, his first in collegiate soccer.

The Rebels will have to generate more offense than they've showed through 16 games thus far this season. Sutherland, they will have to beat another great goalkeeper in John Wenzler, a 6-8, 180 pound junior who allowed only 40 goals in 24 games for an amazing 1.75 goals against average and four shutouts.

Cohen leads the team in scoring with eight while Eric Smith has 5 goals and Dave Rich Taylor. Senior Taylor had four goals and Steve Kakin has three goals on the season.

Cohen leads the team in assists with four. Tim Davis has three assists and Kakin has contributed two assists.

Jerry Gamble had 27 saves on the season, while Gamble has 21 and Steve Richter has 19 saves to his credit.

Rebel Defense

Improving Every Game

The UNLV Football team is 5-1 so far this season and a big reason for the record is the ever-improving play of the Rebel defensive unit. After the first six games of the 1980 season, UNLV is giving up just 298.3 yards per game in total offense, which includes 153.8 yards per game through the air and just 112.3 on the ground. The rushing defensive average is the 19th best in all of college football this season. The Rebels allow just 19.0 points per game.

Defensive co-ordinator Tom Cruikshank continues to enjoy great success defensively in just his first season in his present position. The Big Red has given up just eight touchdowns rushing and only four passes through six games.

The Big Red "D" appears to have good talent, line depth, and great team play. The Rebels have already intercepted 14 passes, which is two more than in all of 1979 when UNLV finished with 9-2 record.

The Rebels are averaging 5.5

quarterback sacks per game, 6.3 pass break-ups and the defensive unit has blocked two punts and scored two touchdowns on defensive plays, one on a punt interception and one on a punt return. The hard-charging Rebel defense has also come up with two assists so far this year.

Individually, junior first-year middle linebacker Mike Walker continues his rampage of opponent offenses. Walker (6-5, 230, Lamson, CA) led the defense in total hits with 67 as he has 37 tackles for a loss, two quarterback sacks, one pass break-up, two hits which have caused fumbles and one fumble recovery.

Junior outside linebacker Mike Johnson, last season's leading hitter as a sophomore playing middle linebacker, is keeping pace with Walker. Johnson (6-1, 218, Pittsburg, CA) has 49 total hits thus far, with 25 tackles and 34 assists along with a team-leading six tackles for a loss, two quarterback sacks, and three pass break-ups. Despite missing last week's game against UTEP with a minor leg injury, junior left end Bob Barver continues to lead the Rebel down line in total hits. Barver (6-4, 240, Clinman, UT) has 28 hits, on 14 tackles, 14 assists, one tackle for a loss and one quarterback sack in five games.

Junior Phil O'Neill is second among the linemen with 24 hits as he has 16 tackles, eight assists, six quarterback sacks and two pass break-ups while appearing in all six games.

Junior free safety Charles Jarvis is leading the secondary personnel total hits with 26 on 15 tackles, 10 assists and he has a team-leading three interceptions (one which he returned for a touchdown) and two pass break-ups.

Junior tight end Todd Liebenstein (6-7, 246, Las Vegas) leads the Big Red "D" in QB sacks with seven so far, and senior RB Richard Jackson has the most pass break-ups with eight.

Philadelphia - A Town Of Winners (Phils and Eagles)

The World Series is over. Finally, the baseball season is over and the Philadelphia Phillies are the World Champions.

The Kansas City Royals did not give up that easily. The Royals, who won the American League West Division, had star outfielder Willie Wilson at the plate with two outs in the top of the ninth, but Wilson, who had his problems in the series, struck out and the Phils won the game, 4-1, and the series, 4 games to 2.

As usual in the series, Pichers Tug McGraw saved the game and Super Steve Carlton won the game.

The Royals had a chance in the eighth inning with the bases loaded but could only score one run and the writing was on the wall as to who would win the series. The series win for the Phils is the first in their history, and it was only the second time in their history that they have appeared in a World Series, the other came in 1950.

About now is when the Houston Astros can feel agony. Reportedly, after the fourth game of the National League championship series in Houston, when Pete Rose came in from third base to score the winning run, an umpire told Houston pitcher Vern Riffe that Rose had left the bag early and would have been called out if an appeal had been made. If he were out, Houston would have been in the series.

Believe it or not, football action took place this weekend and after seven weeks of the NFL, the Philadelphia Eagles and the New England Patriots are the winningest teams in pro football. The Eagles used a fourth quarter touchdown pass to beat the Dallas Cowboys 17-10, and the Patriots beat the Colts 37-21.

There is only one team in the NFL that has not won a game. The New Orleans Saints lost their seventh game this weekend when they fell to the Atlanta Falcons 41-14.

In the American Conference East, the Patriots are on top with the Buffalo Bills, 17-14, losers to the Dolphins in second place. The Colts are third, tied with the Dolphins, and the New York Jets, 27-17 losers to the Seattle Seahawks are in last place.

In the Central, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Houston are all tied for first place. The Steelers lost on Monday night to the Oakland Raiders, while Cleveland stuck it to Green Bay 28-21 and Houston beat Tampa Bay 20-14. Cincinnati is in last with a 3-4 record after beating Minnesota 14-0.

In the American West, the San Diego Chargers are holding the lead with a 5-2 record after demolishing the New York Giants 44-7. Seattle and Oakland are tied for second and Denver, a 23-17 loser to the Kansas City Chiefs, and the Chiefs are tied for third.

In the National Conference East, the Eagles are ahead of the Cowboys by one game, and St. Louis and Washington are tied for third. Te Redskins beat St. Louis 23-0 this past weekend. The Giants are last, with only one victory.

In the Central, Detroit is ahead by two games over Chicago. The Bears beat the Lions 24-7 this past weekend. Minnesota is third and the Green Bay Packers and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers are tied for last with a 2-4-1 record.

The Los Angeles Rams are a game ahead of the Atlanta Falcons after a 31-17 win over San Francisco this past weekend. The 49ers are third and New Orleans is fourth.

Already two weeks into the NBA season and there are only two undefeated teams left. The Los Angeles Lakers, led by Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul Jabbar continue to lead the West and Atlanta, led by Dan Roundfield and Tree Rollins, are undefeated in the Central.

The lowly Detroit Pistons have yet to win a game in the NBA this season.

The National Hockey League is in full swing and the New York Islanders and the Chicago Black Hawks lead the League in total points with 26.

In other sports, Cale Yarborough won the American 500 in Rockingham South Carolina with an average speed of 116.098 MPH. Harry Grant was second and Darrell Waltrip was third.

In major college football, the North Carolina Tar Heels lead the ACC with a 3-0 record. Oklahoma leads the Big Eight with a record of 2-0. The Sooners are tied with the Nebraska Cornhuskers and the Missouri Tigers. Ohio State, Michigan and Purdue are all tied for the lead in the Big Ten. Weber State leads in the Big Sky, Southern California leads in the Pac-10, Alabama, Georgia and LSU all tied for the lead in the Southeastern Conference, and Baylor leads in the Southwestern Conference.

Rebel Sport Briefs

A Sam King Report

UNLV Team Physician Dr. Gerald L. Higgins has released a report concerning the health status of rehabilitating quarterback Sam King.

Swim Team

The UNLV women's swim team will begin their season on November 15 with a dual meet against the University of Nevada, Reno at Reno.

During the season, the women's team will compete in the San Diego State Invitational on December 13-14, and in the U.C. San Diego Invitational on February 28 through March 1. They will host two invitational meets on January 31-February 1 and on February 14.

The team is relatively young. There are two freshmen, one sophomore and seven juniors. There are no seniors on the Jim Reits-coached team.

Rebs Host South Korea

The UNLV Rebels will host the South Korean basketball team on Nov. 25 at 8:00 pm in the Convention Center.

The Rebs were scheduled to play against the Russian National team, but when the Russians backed down from their 11 team US tour, they tried to get an exhibition game against the South Koreans.

Tickets for the game can be obtained at the University Rebels Club office or the UNLV Athletic Ticket office.

The Rebs open the season at the Convention Center against Pan American on Nov. 28.

the season and attempt to play next year.

"This twenty year old football player for the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, sustained an injury while in Spring practice of 1980, to the right thumb. He sustained a severely comminuted fracture of the radial collateral ligament.

The Patient underwent arthroscopy, repair of the radial collateral ligament and open reduction, internal fixation of the thumb on April 21, 1980. He was immobilized in plaster for approximately six weeks, following which he was started on an active therapy program.

Although he attempted to return to play, it was my recommendation that he sit out this year, because of inability to grasp with the passing hand, especially in the quarterback position, as well as some restriction to functional range of motion.

He did attempt to return to play, however, he was unable to grasp the ball or make a full fist because of the restriction and continued to have some discomfort. It is my recommendation that this young man sit out the remainder of the football season and not participate in intercollegiate activities.

I anticipate that he should be able to participate in full activities as of next year."

What all of this means is that King badly injured the thumb of his passing hand and was unable to grasp the ball properly to throw a pass.

King is currently working out to a limited extent, with the Rebels varsity while continuing his studies as a public relations major.

Rebel receiver Sam Green also set a record Saturday night when he caught his eighth and ninth touchdown passes of the season tying his own record. For the season, Greene has caught 27 passes for 576 yards for a 21.3 average. Robert Cobb has caught 11 passes for 167 yards and has also scored four touchdowns including two against UTEP.

Greene leads the team in scoring with 64 points, while Morton has 30, and kicker Keith Reardon has 28 points. Crouse and Cobb have each scored 24 points.

Keyvan Jenkins leads the team in kickoff returns with an average of 20.4 per return, while Cobb leads the team in punt returns with a 3.2 average for 13 returns. Bob Lowry returned a punt 32 yards for a touchdown in a game against San Diego State.

Cross Country

The women's cross country team placed first in the Biola Invitational tournament this past weekend. There was a field of eight teams in the meet.

"Our women have ran the best race they have ever run. They were packed close together, and they ran a very intelligent race," commented Bonnie Hannald, coach of the women's team.

Dottie Myers led the team with a time of 19:30 and finished in third place overall. Jenny Kraft finished in seventh with a time of 20:11 and Gwen Brauer took eighth with a time of 20:25. Gall Driscoll finished ninth with a time of 20:32.

The men's team, on the other hand, did not fair as well. The team did not place but were set by some outstanding performances. Melvin Thompeon, who is academically ineligible at UNLV, ran unattached and finished first with a time of 25:10. David Lynch finished seventh with a time of 26:08 and Steve Johnson took 20th with a time of 28:47.

The men's team will go to Phoenix, Arizona to participate in the North Bank 10-kilo run on November 1st. The women's team will participate in the WIAAW regionals. Time and place have not been set as of yet.

INTRAMURAL ROUNDUP

CSUN INTRAMURALS '80

Final Game Of The Season; Teams Prepare For Playoffs

It was the final week of regular season play in the Intramural Flag Football League, as all the teams are getting ready for the playoffs which begin next Saturday.

In the biggest played games of the week, Sigma Chi stayed unbeaten as they had an easy time defeating Hotel 28-6. Bob Moore scored twice for the winner, and Jim Luce tallied a two point conversion and an interception as he was awarded player of the game. Sigma Chi is now 5-0 and seated #1 as Hotel fell to 3-2.

In another big played game, it was all the H.C. Wildcats as they defeated previously unbeaten Bundy's Butchers 44-18. H.C. Wildcats, only playing with six men, completely dominated the entire game. Dennis Mestas led the winners as he scored twice, intercepted a pass, and received player of the game. Team Captain Chris Villareale, tallied a score and intercepted a pass, and Leon Vernon scored 10 points for the Wildcats. Jay Concannon led the losers with 12 points. Both teams are now 3-1.

Roger's Raiders stayed unbeaten as they destroyed the Ho's 28-0. Quarterback, Jeff Sage completed 8 of 11 passes, two of them for touchdowns to Scott Wicker. Sage also scored a touchdown. Wicker was named player of the game. The Raiders are now 4-0 as the Ho's slipped to 2-2.

In the Sweetheart Division, ATO Little Sisters upset Alpha Delta Pi 20-7 as Robin Moxley scored 14 points and was chosen player of the game. Lisa Miles added an interception and ATO for the winner's. ATO Little Sisters are now 2-1 and Alpha Delta Pi is 3-2.

In other games played Saturday, Kappa Sigma Squeezed by Sigma Nu 14-6, the Wall defeated Dorm 5 28-6, O.J.'s Diners crushed the Enforcers 38-8 as Mike Couch scored 3 touchdowns and intercepted 2 passes. Wizard's Lair upset the Mean Machine 7-6 in overtime. Rose's Raiders demolished the Warriors 44-0 as Al Williams scored 4 touchdowns and added an interception. The Dorm Girls defeated Little Sigmas by forfeit, Sigma Six defeated Tonopah Titans by forfeit and O.J.'s Dinettes shut out Hotel 6-0.

In an interesting note, ATO defeated Alpha Epsilon Pi 14-0. Our own Intramural Director Marty Flynn scored a touchdown and was awarded player of the game.

Exciting Theater Lineup for CCCC

Big Apple have a lot than neon lights and they've both got live it's on Cheyenne and the Little Theater at Community College upcoming season filled with theater performances. season line-up includes dramatics; a dynamic and the rock musical "Hair".

Kicking off the 80-81 schedule is the New York Drama Critics award winning play, "Streamers," Oct. 23-25, and Oct. 30-Nov. 1 at 8 pm, with an additional matinee performance on Nov. 1 at 2 pm. Also appearing this season is the dynamic musical, "Don't Bother Me, I Got Cope," directed by Steve McKenny, and "That Championship Season," a powerful drama directed by Charles Supin. The final production set for Spring will be "Hair" the musical that rocked Broadway, which will be played under th stars on the Cheyenne campus grounds. "Hair" will be directed by Bob Dunkerly, cultural arts specialist and drama instructor at CCCC. Dunkerly has an extensive background in theater in California, and his reputation as a director in Las Vegas has grown tremendously. A local drama critic just recently said, "when it comes to musicals, Bob Dunkerly's the best in town." "Hair" will be choreographed by Garold Gardner, and the music will be under the direction of Jack Guinn.

Performing the rock musical outdoors on campus is one of two innovative steps introduced this season. The other is taking place in the opening production, "Streamers." The CCCC Fine Arts department is presenting the play, while Theater Exposed, a local production company, is producing the show. The cooperative effort is a "first ever" in the history of CCCC theater and the purpose, Dunkerly explained, is to encourage the group to develop and to offer more opportunities to actors.

James Bennett, a recent graduate in Theatre Arts at UNLV and a member of Theater Exposed, is directing "Streamers." His acting credits include "Who Afraid of Virginia Woolf," "Jesus Christ Super Star," NS "The Runner Stumbles," at UNLV. Bennett has been active in the Las Vegas theater scene for over ten years and also appeared in "Cabaret" at the Meadows Playhouse and most recently portrayed King Arthur in the CCCC production "Camelot."

The production designer for "Streamers" is Jan Jjams, an instructor in Technical Theater and Technical Director for CCCC. Currently lighting designer and staff director for the Meadows Playhouse, Jjams has an extensive background in theater in Colorado, Kansas, Bermuda, New York and Tucson. The season line-up of choice plays has Bob Dunkerly excited and "looking forward to a season of expanding, not only the theater groups horizons, but the audiences horizons as well."

During this past weekend, October 18-19, the Artworks V Arts and Crafts Festival was featured at Lorenzi Park. Art festivals have a way of coming in abundance in autumn. It was no wonder why, when they've been stirred by all the Boulder City. The festival maintained its own distinct atmosphere and flavor which was enhanced by the fine entertainment that performed. On Sunday, Finegan's Wake provided the sparse audience with their own lively repertoire of Irish-American folk music. This local group was superb as usual, their music was universally appealing, and they were appreciated by all in attendance. The art show itself was a limited category event, intending to present viable original art and promote natural diversity among the art works shown. Some artists works were showcased, and their productions donated to the festival and were raffled off later. There was also films shown during the weekend.

If there is one message that came across during the festival, it is that Lorenzi Park and the Las Vegas Art Museum could and should be beautiful places for the benefit of all. It is necessary that people realize the need to improve and maintain public places of relaxation and leisure and with the resources that are present in Lorenzi Park, it would be criminal to do otherwise.

The festival was sponsored by the city of Las Vegas, the Las Vegas Artists' Cooperative and the Las Vegas Art Museum.

The free dance class for everyone is from 11:30-12:30am in the dance studio, it features a different teacher each week, so it will have a diversity of dance forms. Rae stresses that no experience in dance is necessary. Anyone will be taught to dance. She also said that they have found good, natural dancers that have gone on to be professional dancers in classes like this. It was formed to provide a place for anyone in the community and the university to have a place to dance. If you have ever had a secret desire to dance—now is your chance.

Sand And Sage

Clark County Community College is offering artists, poets, writers and photographers an opportunity to publish their work. Sand and Sage the literary magazine published by CCCC is now accepting submissions for their Spring 1981 edition. Submissions should fall into the categories of short story; poetry; photography; or art. Entries will be judged by professionals in each category and awards will be given to top winners at a banquet in the Fall. Editor for the Spring 1981 edition of Sand and Sage Tim McCoy, invites submissions from students as well as the community at large. For information on how to submit entries, contact student advisor, Jim Santor at 648-6080 ext. 436.

Pow-Wow

In the North hall of the Convention Center an arts and crafts exhibit will be taking place during the different events. Indian crafts, games food, and clothing will be on display and available for purchase. The heritage of the American Indians is one of diversity, spectacle, and mystery. This Pow-Wow is an event that can only be seen to be appreciated. Tickets are available at the Convention Center Box Office, $3.00 for Adults, $2.00 for Students and $1.50 for children under 12.

Theater Festival

Get ready for UNLV's entry in the American College Theatre Festival. The Robber Springroom is scheduled to open December 4 and will run through the 14th of December. The Theater Festival is a nationwide contest which brings together the art of acting with the talent of writing. The University will not only have an entry but all theatre, journalism and english students may exercise their critical abilities. The Third Annual Critics Institute Scholarship is being offered to all students whose school is a member of the ACTF and there will be 12 regional finalists. The winners may participate in the National Critics Workshop at the Kennedy Center, Washington, D.C. in April and May 1981. Ernie Schler, originator of the Critics Institute program and noted Drama Critic, will direct the workshop.

Theater festival productions will be reviewed and a National Critics Institute Scholarship will be awarded. The national winner will attend a playwright-critics seminar held in July and August, 1981. The world of theatre will be absorbed through writing and polishing reviews while working closely with professional critics and viewing productions. The scholarships are courtesy of the Folger Fund and Mrs. Katherine Folger. If the theatre holds you in awe and your writing hold the future, this is your chance. Anyone is welcome to participate in this critics competition. So grab your pen and notepad, then around December 4 head over to the Judy Bayley Theatre for UNLV's entry in the American College Theatre Festival.
