Ways & Means Not 'Hostile' to UNS Budget

by Darla Pierce

Monday the University of Nevada System presented their budget request to the State Assembly Ways and Means Committee. According to UNLV Faculty Senate Chairman Joseph Fry, "the presentation was well prepared and organized."

While reporting to the Faculty Senate, Fry said the Ways and Means Committee "wasn't necessarily hostile" in comparison with past budget presentations. "But I'm not overly optimistic" about this biennium request.

One of the problems the university system is faced with, according to Vice President for Academic Affairs, Dale Nitzschke, is expressing exactly what a university is all about and what a professor's job actually entails.

"Their notion is that we, the university, are doing a good job for less money," Fry said of the Ways and Means Committee. "They were not distressed over Nevada being 47th in the country for funding education."

Nevada educators are apprehensive about this low funding, especially since the U.S. Census Bureau expects Nevada to be the fastest growing state over the next 10 years.

Nitzschke said none of the categories in the budget presented by the university system were deemed excessive by the committee. "They think we're doing a good job now, with the support level we already have," Nitzschke said.

"UNLV has quality faculty and students, but there's just not enough faculty to go around," Nitzschke added.

Nitzschke cited an example of this problem when he overheard two students in an elevator. He said the students had just come out of a lecture hall in the Humanities building and were discussing the problem they had in talking to their professor.

According to Nitzschke, the students said the professor was surrounded by about four other students after class. Before he reached someone, the professor had to go to another class.

Nitzschke said the new budget proposed for higher education by Governor Robert List will mean a 10 percent decrease in services to students, while charging 25 percent more in tuition in fees. If List's proposed budget is approved, Nevada's in-state tuition would increase from $720 a year to $900.

"Students are just not getting enough services," Nitzschke explained.

Nitzschke is more optimistic about the future budget allocations than Fry is.

"I think the Ways and Means Committee really listened. Because of the good presentation, we may get a substantial amount of money we have requested," Nitzschke said.

Those representing the University of Nevada System included UNLV President Leonard Goodall, UNR President Joe Crowley, Chairman of the Board of Regents Bob Cashell, and political Science Professor Gary Jones. Nitzschke also attended the presentation.

UNLV Lacks Lobbyists

by Perri Jean Schlosser

Students may actually be to blame for a future increase in tuition fees, although originally proposed by Gov. Robert List, due to a lack of lobbying.

An up dated list, the Lobbyist Registration, is posted every Monday morning at the Legislative Building in Carson City. Over 100 interest groups and their representatives are listed. Although it includes agencies ranging from the American Society of Composers to the U.S. Brewer's Association, there is no listing whatsoever for the University of Nevada System.

Besides limited efforts from the system's administration, state legislators remain basically unaware of student sentiment. According to some legislators, if no influence is exercised concerning a particular issue, such as the tuition hikes, there is little reason not to approve the original proposal.

Majority Leader John Vergies said it is the constituents obligation to contact their representatives if they want their message known. Legislators are not in the position to contact everyone of their constituents. It is merely the legislators responsibility to be available.

Influencing state legislators may be achieved in a number of ways without acting as an official lobbyist. In a statewide report, Vergies made the following suggestions:

1. Face-to-face contact is the best. Follow-up with a personal letter.

2. Telephone calls are effective-follow up with a personal letter.

3. Use a letter, a postcard or telegram-sign your name and give your address.

a. Use your own words. A form letter is not as effective.

b. Limit your letter to one issue if possible, and identify it by popular name or bill number.

c. Be brief, but state the reasons you are for or against the issue. If you are in opposition, offer a positive alternative when practical.

d. Be courteous. A rude letter neither makes friends nor influences, and rudeness may totally alienate a person.

Suggest or recommend. Never demand. Timing is important. Send your letter when it will count most. A letter sent too early is as ineffective as one sent too late; both lose their impact.

f. Be sure to express your appreciation for a good speech or a favorable vote. Candidates are human beings and appreciate laudatory comments.

4. Another effective means of "getting the ear" of both incumbents and candidates alike is to write "letters to the editors" of the newspapers published in the districts of the various elected officials. Such letters often stimulate other constituents (whom cannot be contacted directly) to write letters. Every legislator and candidate is very responsive to what is said in the newspapers of the district in which he or she is running!

Vergies also stated it's important to let all legislators know what you think on any matter of interest. He said a group of dedicated people who have not used their individual and collective talents to influence legislators positively "can hardly be taken seriously by anyone."

Byrns Fights Retirement

by Susan DiBella

Long-time UNLV English professor and University College Counselor Richard Byrns may be forced to retire by the University in July 1981, but he won't go without a fight.

Although the tenured professor has been recommended for a post-sixty-five appointment by both Dean of Arts and Letters John Uruse and English Department Chairman John Trefeld, he has received little favorable response from the UNLV administration since he began exploring his options in March 1979.

UNLV Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dale Nitzschke said the university's policy for retirement was established in compliance with the Federal Mandatory Retirement Act, and therefore, probably will not change. Yet, Byrns will appeal the decision to the Board of Regents on Feb. 27 for a final ruling on UNLV's stance on the issue.

Since the Federal Mandatory Retirement Act specifies that tenured professors must retire from their teaching positions upon reaching age 65, Byrns said he realized his chances of receiving a tenure extension were slight. This realization led him to seek to continue on at UNLV only in a counseling capacity.

Director of the Psychological Counseling and Evaluation Center Richard Carhart, has already requested that Byrns be assigned to the Center if the retirement issue is settled in Byrns' favor.

However, according to Nitzschke, Byrns' potential change in position won't have any impact on the Board of Regents' decision on his retirement.

"When you retire from the university system, it doesn't matter what your title is," Nitzschke said, explaining that regardless of what position Byrns would like to continue in, the retirement policy remains the same.

Nitzschke acknowledged that the policy is somewhat unfair. He said a blanket retirement policy used to rid the university of older tenured professors is "an artificial means when a genuine means, such as a separate evaluation of each professor, would be more appropriate."

Byrns agrees that each retirement case should be handled separately. He said he feels that his counseling experience is sufficiently different and unusual that it cannot be found in the present employment market.

"My knowledge of the University, the community, and the students arises from years of experience that is almost impossible to duplicate," he said. "And besides, I'm not ready for the pasture yet," he laughed.

Byrns said he will file a discrimination suit if the Board of Regents does not rule in his favor.

Lady Mud Wrestling

by Mary Beth Nitzschke

Male strippers and wot T-shirt contests have appeared on campus before, but what's new?

This Friday night, Feb. 13, students will be able to observe Lady Mud Wrestling in the Meyer Student Union Ballroom.

Despite the fact that wrestling takes place in the Student Union 6, it is not sponsored by either CSUN, or the Meyer Student Union Activity Board. It will be sponsored by both Sigma Chi and O.J.'s Diners.

There was some debate as to whether or not this event should be allowed to take place, according to Bill Botes, Chairman of the Union Board. "Some of the main objections to the event were possible structural damage to the ballroom, and safety," explained Botes. He added "it was also presented to us on very short notice."

An emergency meeting of the Union Board was conducted Mon., Feb. 9, by Sigma Chi representative Jim Kuro for a decision on the issue.

A discussion followed, producing a program for the mud wrestling that wasn't quite sufficient. As a result Bill Botes, Bart Tom, Thomas Conner, Director of Student Services, and Deb Carrot, Assistant Director of the Union Board, came up with a list of rules O.J.'s Diners and Sigma Chi must abide by if they are to have this event.

1. There will be maximum security as per chief of university police.

2. The performing area for this event is restricted to stage area only.

3. The entire stage area should be covered by heavy duty waterproof sheeting.

4. No hoses or water will be used to clean the performers off. Wrestlers must exit and enter on north side of stage where bathrooms can be used for cleaning them off.

UNLV student Jim Neipris was hospitalized for smoke inhalation after he participated in rescue operations at the Hilton Hotel Tuesday night.

Upon hearing about the fire, Neipris, an emergency medical technician, went immediately to the fire location to see how he could help. The 19 year old hotel major, who is expected to be released from the hospital sometime Wednesday night, spent two and a half hours carrying oxygen bottles to firemen, checking rooms for hotel guests and carrying people down who needed assistance.

Neipris said he did not realize that he himself was in any physical danger while he was helping.

Working his way up the stair case in a final evacuation effort, Neipris and several other roommates reached the roof of the hotel where they were transported by an Air Force helicopter to the Convention Center for treatment. At that time, student personnel assessed his physical condition and advised him not to return to the fire. Neipris was then transported to Valley Hospital.

When he is released from the hospital, Neipris plans to return to the Convention Center to continue helping

Hilton: Another Tragedy

At least eight people are confirmed dead and nearly 800 people were injured as a result of a major fire at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel, located at Borewick Road just off the Las Vegas Strip.

This was the second major fire to involve Las Vegas high-rise hotels. On the morning of November 31, 84 people perished when the MGM Grand Hotel went up in a blaze.

But the Hilton blaze, officials say, is not as bad as the MGM fire.

The Hilton, the largest hotel in the United States, caught fire at about 9 p.m. Tuesday night.

A Hilton representative in Los Angeles said the hotel was fully booked with two large conventions, a show fair, and a savings and loan group, meeting in the Convention Center.

Norman Weiss, who was staying on the 15th floor of the Hilton, said that he was awakened by what he thought was cigarette smoke. "I walked 30 or 40 minutes, until I heard someone knocking at my door. It was a fireman helping me out."

did not turn out as badly." Neipris also assisted rescue teams at the MGM tragedy last November.

Because of the government's order that Nevada's fire departments be equipped with fire trucks, the MGM fire, started with fire in the kitchen. When the rooms fire alarm went off, many of the 10000 guests were waiting near the Hilton and so many as two to three of them were Air Force chaplains, Sgt. Willie Air Force Base, Bureau of postman and Byrns were brought to the Las Vegas Convention Center, where many of them were being evacuated.

The Convention Center, many thousands of people would instead have been evacuated, the MGM fire, started with fire in the kitchen. When the rooms fire alarm went off, many of the 10000 guests were waiting near the Hilton and so many as two to three of them were Air Force chaplains, Sgt. Willie Air Force Base, Bureau of postman and Byrns were brought to the Las Vegas Convention Center, where many of them were being evacuated.

Veteran Chief of Firemen, U.A., was watching "M.S.M." on television when he noticed smoke. This was his only warning of the spreading flames. He said, "I was an experienced fireman and had no idea."

UNLV Nursing Program Reaccredited

The baccalaureate nursing program at UNLV was recently reaccredited until 1986 by the National League for Nursing's Board of Review.

The Nursing Board of Review sent a 15 member team to UNLV last October to take a first hand look at the nursing program. Based on the written observations of the evaluators and the 600 page self-evaluation report prepared by the nursing faculty, the program was granted a six year accreditation.

Although national approval is not mandatory, it is both prestigious and practical, according to nursing department chairperson Rosemary Witt.

Many graduate nursing programs will only accept students with degrees from nationally accredited schools, so national approval really benefits the students," Witt explained.

National endorsement also means UNLV's nursing department can write federal grants for various research projects and special programs. The nursing department faculty are currently writing such a grant, with the intention of establishing a master's degree program in nursing.

Some of the areas which the site visitors commended the UNLV program on included the quality of administrative support given the nursing program; new techniques and approaches developed by students and faculty in the health care field; community support from local hospitals and medical facilities; and financial support in the way of scholarships from organizations such as Sunrise and Desert Springs Auxiliaries and several other community organizations.

Enrollment has more than tripled in UNLV's baccalaureate nursing program over the past five years. Local demand for qualified nurses is intense, and many UNLV nursing graduates and students have been placed in local hospitals.

Faculty Workshop Aims to Improve Student Writing

College English teachers aren't the only ones complaining about student writing these days. More and more biology professors, engineers, history professors and faculty across the curriculum are finding their students unable to write clearly.

So, 34 University of Nevada, Las Vegas faculty members, representing 18 departments, recently got together for a two-day writing workshop aimed at helping them teach their students to become better writers.

The workshop—a first at UNLV—was directed by Dr. Richard Adler of the University of Montana. Adler was assisted by Leon Coburn, director of freshman composition at UNLV, who also initiated and organized the workshop after a number of instructors approached him last fall, complaining of poor student writing. But they wanted to do more than just complain. According to Coburn, they wanted concrete techniques for helping students in all disciplines improve writing skills.

Coburn sought the help of Adler, whom he had met during a seminar last summer for writing teachers.

During the workshop at UNLV, participants graded several student papers, discussed standards for evaluating student writing and shared ideas for giving clear writing assignments.

Coburn says research indicates that many students turn in poorly written papers because the assignments are vague.

"This problem can be corrected by giving students specific criteria, like the rubric they should play, the audience they should write for, the format of the assignment and a specific topic," he explained.

UNLV engineering professor John Tryon says that approach was one of the most valuable things he learned during the writing workshop. "Writing reports is an important aspect of engineering," Tryon said. "The workshop gave me the techniques I needed to help my students approach that aspect of their jobs much more professionally."

Tryon also praised other facets of the workshop, like the suggestion for having students edit each other's papers, and specific criteria for writing in different disciplines. Participants also learned several methods of proofreading, and the value of using a journal to review disciplines.

Coburn added, "The most valuable part of the experience was the chance for faculty in every area, from sociology to engineering, to share ideas and thoughts with colleagues who experience similar problems with student writing."

Encouraged by the support he received from the faculty, Coburn says another workshop may be organized sometime next fall year.

Faculty Evaluation Not Mandatory at UNLV

by Ken Shope

Eighty percent of UNLV's departments have some method of student evaluation of instructors. In many departments, these evaluations are used in determining whether an instructor receives tenure or a promotion.

Most of the evaluation forms ask typical questions such as: "Is the instructor's lectures comprehensive?" "Was this instructor tolerant of other opinions?" "Was he or she easily available outside of class?" and "How does this class compare with other you've had at UNLV?"

Chairman of Educational Foundations and Counseling Frederick Kirschner said, "You can't use the same form for all classes, as any two classes could be entirely different from one another."

"If an instructor receives a poor evaluation, I call him in for a discussion. Usually, if you tell him what's wrong, and ask him to improve, he will," Kirschner continues.

Theatre Arts Chairman Jerry Crawford claimed his department has a good evaluation procedure. "We have seven instructors. Every semester we have four student representatives who conduct the evaluations. They compile the information and I look it over with the instructor."

In Philosophy, the student evaluations of instructors are not mandatory. Philosophy Chairman Cyril Pastork commented, "If an instructor refuses to let his/her peers look over his/her evaluations, then we wonder if he/she has something to hide."

Equipment Missing

by Genie Garner

CSUN equipment, valued at approximately $2,800, was unaccounted for during their 1981 inventory. Apparently, six typewriters were merely overlooked although a 35mm Vivitar camera is still missing.

The typewriters, purchased by CSUN for student use, were placed in the library, according to CSUN Vice President Susanna Reyes.

While the new library addition was being constructed, the typewriters were moved from the third floor of the original building due to lack of space.

According to Hal Erickson, the library director, any typewriters that were originally on the third floor are now back in storage areas on the third floor.

Chester Davis, Assistant to the Director of the Library, said although the specific location of the typewriters is unknown, they are thought to be in eight to ten various storage rooms on the third floor of the library.

Davis said he would be happy to open the storage areas so that personnel from purchasing could go back through and recheck for these typewriters so that CSUN's inventory record could be cleared.

Purchasing has not yet confirmed that these typewriters are on the third floor, but they will be looking into it sometime soon.

The missing camera was originally purchased for use by the Epitaph. The last time the camera was seen was in the 1979-80 school year when Melodie Buskley was the editor for the Yearbook and Photography Editor of the YELL. No other information has been found on the camera.

Chairman John Buyer, "There are problems in getting students to fill out the evaluation forms. To many students the evaluation is just another form they have to fill out at the university. We have an open spot on the back of the form where they are supposed to make comments. Many times they just won't complete it."

In addition to student evaluations, many departments have peer evaluations. If an instructor constantly receives poor evaluations, his/her tenure could be revoked. Termination may also occur, as happened once in the nursing department.

Public Administration Chairman

Steven Parker said student evaluations were mandatory in his department. He also said if an instructor is tenured, the only alternative is to ask him/her to "please" do better.

Some departments do not have formal evaluations. Secondary Education Chairman Thomas Kirkpatrick said, "The instructors are allowed any type of student evaluation they prefer for their own use. I use them in my classes, but it is not mandatory in my department."

In Hotel Administration, Chairman Jerome Valien said he could get feedback on instructors by simply talking to students. "Since we are a very flat department (small, with a very common curriculum), I personally see many students and can obtain information at that time."

In most cases, the instructor is out of the room when student evaluations are being conducted. He/she is not allowed to see them until the following semester.

Menage a Trois Expelled

Campus Digest News Service

Two males and a female have been accused of participating in a one-night sex-party in a naval academy dormitory, and have been ordered expelled from the academy at Annapolis.

Six midshipmen allegedly participated in the activities, and one even shot movies of the event.

However, the two males who were ordered expelled were granted federal court orders delaying their expulsion until a court hears their case.

The students' case claims that the uneven discipline dealt out to the six participants of the party was unfair, and violates their constitutional equal protection law.

Due process was also allegedly violated when the two were denied representation by a lawyer at their hearings.

The female agreed to resign from the academy after saying that she was not forced to participate in the sexual activity, and encouraged it.

Because she had previously filed for a medical disability before the incident, she will not be required to serve as an enlisted sailor.

However, the two males, who are both seniors, could be required to serve three years as enlisted men in the Navy.

Filming the party was a prank, according to academy officials, who have the film. One of the six midshipmen turned the footage over to officials, who said they would not develop the film unless ordered by higher-ups.

The six midshipmen all pleaded guilty to "conduct unbecoming an officer."

In view of the isolation navy men face when at sea, and now on land, navy recruiting may not get a boost as a result of this crackdown.

Registration Continues

Anti-draft Groups Confident Movement 'Growing'

(CPS)—Widespread but small protests greeted the January beginning of the Selective Service System's continuous registration program, but anti-draft organizations are undaunted, confident the movement is "growing" in spite of the seemingly more bellicose mood in the country since the release from Iran of the 52 American hostages.

Aida Bound, associate director at the national headquarters of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft (CARD), acknowledges that the hostage release has provoked a renewed willingness in Americans to do what their country asks of them, including register for the draft.

Skull, Bound says her organization and others like it are pleased with the reactions of 18 and 19-year-olds to the draft, and indicates that the various protests staged in January are just the beginning of "a solid, organized and growing movement."

For the most part, demonstrations held during the January 5-11 registration period were organized at a local level, with direction from national groups "when it was requested."

Reports indicate that most groups chose to picket the post offices where registration was taking place. Bound says the demonstrations were often held solely for the purpose of disseminating literature, rather than dissuading potential registrants.

One of the largest protests took place January 5 at Boston's Main Post Office, the site of 40 arrests at a similar demonstration last summer. The Boston Alliance Against Registration and the Draft, sponsors of the protest, said the atmosphere was somewhat quieter this time. Another demonstration was held the following day in Cambridge.

Similarly, protests in Davis, California and Austin, Texas drew crowds of about 100 to post offices. There, student organizations provided counseling and literature to young men entering the buildings to register.

Not infrequently, protests were sponsored by religious groups, as at Iowa State, where the Ames Ministerial Fellowship set up a legal fund to aid "in the defense of anyone arrested for refusing to register."

Similarly, the American Friends Service Committee, a national Quaker organization, distributed thousands of letters protesting the draft "as un-American and pacifist beliefs." Last summer the Denver branch alone sent 80,000 such mailings to a list of potential registrants compiled from state driver's license records. Mardis McCreary, a member of the Denver branch, emphasizes that her group stresses moral and ethical, rather than religious, reasons for opposing registration.

While CARD headquarters insists that there were "too many protests to keep track of" in January, the overall reaction to the registration procedure was decidedly low-key.

Often, literature will alienate the reader by being "too extreme—either left-wing or right-wing," Bound explains. In fact, a counselor at the University of Illinois' Draft Counseling Center complains that "people just aren't taking it seriously."

"We're opposed to the draft but we're trying to keep the center as apolitical as possible," counselor Alice Ordoval told the Daily Illini. "If people have trouble articulating beliefs we can help them...Nobody is pushing people not to register here."

Indeed, confusion seems to be the most common reaction to the registration process. Larry Speers, director of the Youth and Conscientious Objection Campaign, notes that the registration forms provide no place for a man to indicate his objection. Speers advises that registrants make their feelings known somewhere on the form, either by writing "Co.O." or "I protest" at the top of the page.

"We've heard of many instances where the government videotapes demonstrations and people who refuse to register," says Susan Benda of the Campaign for Political Rights. But Benda stresses that, although it is illegal to refuse to register, no action has been taken by the Justice Department in the six months since registration began against ignoring the government's request.

Selective Service spokeswoman Joan Lamb confirms that no legal action has been taken yet against non-registrants, noting that young men are still registering late "at a rate of about 5000 a week."

At present the Carter Administration policy of allowing people to register late without penalty is still in effect, though Lamb says "The Reagan people are examining (the policy) as they examine any issue."

Benda added that it is certainly not illegal to register as a conscientious objector, in any case.

As groups continue to advise and inform, Bound says the movement "keeps getting stronger."

"Every day small groups are working in the high schools and colleges, trying to tell people there is more than one side to the issue," she says. "Church, women's, and student organizations are with us, and more are becoming involved every day."

Bound looks toward the National Anti-draft Conference, to be held February 13-16 in Detroit, as the opportunity for all groups to "rejoin" and form cohesive plans for the spring. She says the groundwork for long-term projects will be laid at that time.

The national anti-draft movement has a "solid base," she states, and she expects the base to expand as continuous registration proceeds.

'Kent State' Script Reveals Errors

(CPS)—Sticklers for accuracy should have a field day dissecting the docudrama "Kent State," which NBC aired February 8. Although InterPlanetary Productions, which produced the show, went to the trouble of annotating the script—apparently in anticipation of heavy criticism—some of the citations didn't check out.

A thorough reading of the script uncovered some 38 factual errors, though 14 were eventually edited out of the version televised in the United States. A four-hour version, which was also screened for American tv critics in Los Angeles, will be shown in foreign countries, presumably with all the errors included.

Most of the errors in recounting the events before and on May 4, 1970, when Ohio National Guardsmen killed four and wounded nine other people gathered at Kent State University to protest the American invasion of Cambodia, were fairly minor.

They range from the concoction of a kind of pre-massacre Saddle Hawkins Day in which a romance between two of the subsequent victims—Jeff Miller and Sandy Scheuer—is implied to the improbably quiet interlude of an on-duty Guardsman playing a guitar.

The needs of dramatic license provided the most entertaining fictions in the presentation. The four-hour version, for example, showed a dorm counselor's wife at the height of the demonstrations asking her husband, "Can't you forget the revolution for an hour? Please, home for lunch. I'll make you the chili. I'll make you the chili." More serious was the surviving fictions that could fundamentally alter the public's perception of what took place that weekend in Kent.

The script, for instance, show six "radicals" setting fire to the campus ROTC building, thus providing Ohio officials with a motive for using force against the demonstrating students.

In fact, no one has ever been able to establish who set the fire. The campus "radicals" themselves contend they have no idea who the arsonists were, and others have suggested the fire was deliberately set by someone anxious to provide a pretext for using force against the protesters.

The script also showed Guardsmen huddling before they fired into the crowd of demonstrators on May 4. The writers consequently imply some 200 men were involved in plotting the shooting, something even the most avid conspiracy theorists wouldn't allege.

The dramatic conveniences of having the victims meet the Guardsmen who later would kill them, and of suggesting the Guardsmen staring down their sights at the protesters were actually angry also distort the nature of the tragedy.

The film, moreover, understated the mood and size of the student crowd. The number of demonstrators shown in the movie was significantly lower than the number who actually confronted the National Guard in 1970.

The movie also showed a crowd that was considerably less provocative than the real one had been. According to the show, the demonstrators didn't throw many rocks at the Guardsmen. In reality, there were a lot of rocks pitched at them.

Yet it was not the producer's fault that the scenery didn't always look convincing. Kent State President Brage Golding refused to let the crew film on his campus.

Even if he had, things might have looked different. Kent State has since built a new gymnasium on the site of the killings.

After the screening in Los Angeles, Executive Producer Max Keller appeared for interviews, during which he defended the film's authenticity. He dismissed most criticisms by saying that what really counted was that the show illustrated that innocent kids had been killed.

Computer Diplomacy

(NORTHFIELD, Minn. (CH)—Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Algerian intermediaries weren't the only ones negotiating for the release of the American hostages.

Thousands of miles away, a group of Carleton College students were also trying to use diplomacy to free the 52 Americans held hostage in Iran. Instead of dealing with the Iranians, however, the 30 students of Hartley Clark's diplomacy class dealt with a computer.

Clark had programmed into the computer a "briefing" of actual events taking place in Iran, a list of ransom demands, and a series of options. Depending on which option was chosen, the program continued, giving other compromise choices until freedom was obtained, or it ended, with the hostages going on trial as spies.

At the conclusion, the students' success was measured by several different factors, each with an assigned point value. Protecting U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf and avoiding war earned the most points, while protecting the hostages' security and maintaining public approval also built high totals.

According to Clark, the exercise helped his students develop a broader perspective, by looking at the problem from all sides. He hopes they now understand the difference between foreign policy and diplomacy, a lesson even the new Reagan administration should take to heart, he says. "In foreign policy, we define our country's goals, while in diplomacy we interact with other countries, each with their own goals," explains Clark, a 30-year international relations veteran.

Students Oppose Reagan

(CH)—They weren't in the Washington limelight, but that doesn't mean campus progressive and radical groups let the coming of Ronald Reagan pass them by.

In Berkeley, Calif., where liberals have not-so-fond memories of Reagan as governor, a University of California group announced the city's secession from the United States in response to Reagan's ascendancy to the White House. Leaders of the Berkeley Committee for Public Safety read the Declaration of Secession in the student government chambers. It warned that in the past, Reagan "crushed the free discourse in ideas and philosophies and the legitimate aspirations of Third World peoples."

On a distant coast, another campus group is determined to stay in the United States but waste Reagan out. The Committee to Impeach Reagan now, founded at the Camden Campus of Rutgers University, says it will serve as a watchdog on the newly elected president. The organization was founded on Nov. 5, 1980, and its organizers are hoping to start chapters on other campuses.

At several other schools, such as Indiana University and the University of Wisconsin-Madison, alternative inaugural events were held to "celebrate" Reagan's inauguration. But now that those festivities are over, higher education officials are getting down to the serious business of trying to forestall expected budget cuts.

Kent State Stats

VIOLENCE IS NOT AS RAMPANT on the Kent State U. campus in Ohio as reports have indicated, say KSIU polls. The FBI recently rated KSU as one of the 10 most violent universities in the country, due to an error that classified 35 "simple assaults" as "aggravated assaults." The FBI has been contacted with the correct figures, which will be reflected in next year's crime statistics, but the negative publicity the story initially attracted can't be retraced.

Cheating

TO CURB CHEATING, the U. of Maryland filed a second-year law student to act as a prosecutor and investigator in cheating cases. Previously, a student who witnessed a cheating incident had to contact the advisor directly, but under the new program a complainant can call a special hotline to report the infraction.

Hustlin' Rebs Try To Repeat Last Year's Performance

Richie Davis

UNLV Hustlin' Rebel baseball coach Fred Dallimore will try to act something like a producer making a sequel after a successful movie. But Dallimore's act could be much tougher to follow. Last year's baseball team went 3-13-1 on the year and made it to the finals of the Midwest Regionals.

But after losing Dan Murphy (.364, 18 HR's, 64 RBI's), Ken Elise (15-1, 1.90 ERA), Doug Smith (.370), Ed Crow (.363, 27 SB's) and Stan Hawkins (1-1, 3.98 ERA), a sequel to last year could make the mentor a little cautious. And with the budget cuts and the cut in scholarships, Dallimore remains even more cautious about this year's Rebels.

"Those guys are hard to replace," admits Dallimore - who has guided the Rebs to 241 wins, 170 losses and one tie in seven years at the helm. "Without them," he adds, "This year's team won't have solid frontline players at every position and good depth, and will not be as strong in overall team speed, balanced hitting, frontline pitching, and relief pitching.

But, Dallimore isn't ready to quit. Not just yet. "One positive thing," he continues, "is that we have a good nucleus of returning people."

A couple of those players that might make Hustlin' Rebel followers forget the above mentioned are Randy Ward, a Sporting News First Team All-America selection, and Richie Davis, who finished the year with one of the lowest earned run averages in the nation with 1.02 ERA. Ward, a first baseman, was given the All-America spot as the designated hitter as he hit 22 home runs (18th in the nation) and had 77 RBI's. He also led the team in doubles with 21. The Fresno native also owned a .374 batting average last season. Davis is a fireballing left-hander from Hawthorne,

Bill Max

Nevada. He has an 11-5 record in his three years at UNLV.

Seeing action in the infield along with Ward will be Bill Max, a Second Team District VII honoree; Dave Kinsel, a three year starter and Tom Luna, a part-time second baseman last season. Max, a 6-2, 200 pound senior, hit .319 and hit 19 home runs last year. Kinsel, a 6-0, 174 pound senior, hit .294 and had 28 RBI's on the year. Luna, a 5-8, 150 pound senior, hit .324 last season.

The outfield will be the home of Dick Luna, Tom's brother, Bill Nader and newcomer Chris Smith. Luna, a 5-10, 150 pound sophomore, hit .327 in a reserve role and had 12 runs batted in last season. Nader, a 6-1, 176 pound senior, hit .368 in a reserve role with 36 runs batted in. Smith, who transferred to UNLV from Arizona Western, has been impressive in the pre-season exhibition games and will be starting when the Rebs take on Brigham Young this Friday. Smith originally went to baseball power Arizona State and was named the Outstanding hitter on the ASU jayvee squad.

Behind the plate for the Rebels this year will be Frank DeSantis, a 5-10, 196 pound junior, who hit .272 last season after batting .345 in the 1979 season.

"With Ward, Max, and DeSantis, we should be just as strong, power-hitting wise, as we were last year," says Dallimore. "Even Nader has been known to hit the long ball."

On the mound, the Reb veterans are a pair of starters 6-0, 170 pound, right-handed senior, Kurt Mattson, and 6-2, 198 pound, left-handed sophomore, Chris Hopper. Mattson was 12-5 last season with 111 strikeouts and a 3.09 earned run average. Meanwhile, Hopper was 5-2 on the season and had a 4.36 ERA.

Davis leads the relievers on the staff with seven saves. Following Davis will be Jeff Wolff, a 6-1, 177 pound, right-handed senior and Willy Finnegan, a 6-1, 183 pound, right-handed senior. Wolff was 1-0 last season with a 4.82 ERA while Finnegan had one save.

Finnegan and Davis will move into the starting rotation this season following the loss of Elise and Hawkins. Joining Wolff in the bullpen are newcomers Mike Hall, a 5-0, 170 pound, left-handed sophomore; 5-11, 166 pound right-handed freshman, Rich Taylor, and 6-3, 185 pound, left-handed junior Mark Bloomfield, who performed for the Rebels in 1978 and 1979.

Tony Scott, a 6-1, 186 pound freshman infielder, appears to be the designated hitter.

Michael Martin, a 5-8, 154 pound freshman, should back up DeSantis at the catcher's spot, while Scott and 6-11, 188 pound junior John Rice, another transfer from Arizona Western spell the infielders. In the outfield, the reserves are 6-3, 210 pound sophomore Bubba Mattinson, who played linebacker for the UNLV football team, and Pat Ireland, a 5-10, 150 pound sophomore.

To make their third post-season appearance in four years, Dallimore feels that the Rebels have to post nearly 40 wins on the 87-game regular season schedule.

"It will be tough," confesses the head man, "because we're playing so many good Division I teams."

Some of those squads include Cal State, Fullerton (49-18-1 in 1980), Nebraska (49-25), Fresno State (42-12), Oklahoma State (43-10), BYU (41-18), New Mexico (41-23), Arizona State (38-25-1), U.C. Irvine (37-25-1) and Nevada-Reno (38-23-1).

"The joy of our season will be keeping the frontline people healthy," concludes Dallimore. "If everyone stays healthy, and we have decent pitching, we will survive."

Rebels Open Season With BYU

Pencilning in a starting lineup for the Brigham Young Cougars won't be an easy task in 1981.

The 1980 season, which saw the Cougars at 41-18 and in their second consecutive NCAA Regional Tournament, was a rebuilding year. What will the Cougars manage to do this Spring? Talent, experience, enthusiasm and depth will, as always, be necessary for the Cougars to conquer their tough Western Athletic Conference foe for league laurels. A blend of running speed, hitting defense, and pitching will be in the Cougar tradition with solid playing talent at each position.

At first base, junior Kurt Lee, freshman Wally Joyner and senior Mark Hildebrand battle for the starting spot. Flitting could be the route to take here with the designated hitter slot always well in sight. Joyner had a super fall while Lee is coming off shoulder surgery and Hildebrand has always been a steady hitter.

At second base, Mark Adamiak will start for the third consecutive season. He batted .318 last season with five home runs.

Leon Baham, a junior college transfer, will start at shortstop for the Cougars in place of the departed Pat Hickey. Looking for a similar role, Baham will be Scott Pappas and Rich Aguilera, both freshmen.

All-WAC performer Kenny Clayton will start at third base. He moves from the first base position, where he had a .684 fielding average last season.

The Cougars are also solid in the outfield. Returnee Steve Campbell will spend most of his time in right field while Scott DeLong, an All-League performer in junior college, battles Leif Olson, all region in junior college, for the centerfield work. Ralph Baldenegro and Peter Kendrick will battle it out for the left field position.

Sophomore David Eldredge and JC transfer Kally Shepherd will do equal time in the catching spot. Both have been sharp in pre-season and give BYU coaches a reason to smile.

In the pitching department, George Govland returns from an excellent season with an 8-2 record and a 3.78 ERA, lowest of the staff. Dave Beck won nine games last season and had a 3.87 ERA.

UC Irvine Visits UNLV

First-year head coach Mike Gerlach will enjoy the return of 12 letterman from last year's UC Irvine baseball team, which posted a 37-23-1 record overall and finished second in the Southern California Baseball Association (SCBA) with a 19-9 record, just one game behind Cal State Fullerton.

One area where the Anteaters do have strength and depth is in the infield. All-SCBA performers Mark Morrison and Mike Nagle are back at third and second as a shortstop Carron Carroll. Morrison was the leading hitter on the squad last year (.360) while Nagle brings a career average of .333 into his senior year. Carroll (.330) has surprising power for a middle infielder (five HR's, 8 doubles and 4 triples last year) and has excellent speed (17 stolen bases).

The one newcomer in the starting infield in junior college transfer Dave Glick, who was amidst infielder at Orange Coast College. He will be at first base this year. He hit .366 for last year's state champions and was selected second team all-state.

"Pitching and defense will be the keys to our success this year," says Gerlach. "I really believe that our infield this year is one of the best in the country. In the pitching department, we really have only two starters that have proved they can pitch at this level. But if they have as good a year as last season and our newcomers come through with our usual excellent staff."

The two starters Gerlach is referring to are center right-handers Andy Bizar and Dirk Wisetock. Both were named to the All-SCBA team last year. Bizar had a 7-6 record in 1980 with a 3.61 ERA, while Wisetock was 6-4 with a 3.78 ERA.

The top man out of the bullpen looks to be Orange Coast College's Larry Hicks, who was undefeated last year (8-0) but more importantly had 17 saves with a 0.99 ERA in short relief.

Left-handers Dave Woodhead from Saddleback posted a 7-2 record a year ago and had a 3.97 ERA. Randall from Corvallis College was 5-4 with a 3.25 ERA last season.

In the outfield, the Anteaters have two starters back. Matt Stowell, a senior from Saddleback, hit .306 last season after a very slow start and is expected to help the squad again as is right fielder Dave Gillies, who hit .291 in 1980 and led the team with nine doubles.

"If we stay together as a team and our pitching staff comes through, we should be in the SCBA race all the way until the end."

Rebels Take Three of Four From Dodger Rookies

by Charles Moore

The UNLV Rebel baseball team took three of four games from a team of Los Angeles Dodger Rookies last weekend at Roger Sherman Memorial Field.

In the first game, played on Saturday, the Dodger rookies came from behind to beat the Hustlin' Rebels 13-11 in ten innings. The Rebels took an early 2-0 lead in the second inning when Bill Nader tripled and Tony Scott hit a double to rightfield to drive in Nader.

Scott cashed home on a grounder to first baseman Carron Carroll.

The Rebels added another run in the third when Chris Smith tripled to left. A sacrifice fly by Dave Kinsel made the score 3-0 UNLV.

The score stayed that way until the Dodgers scored three runs in the fifth inning off of center Steve Mattinson. The big hero of the inning was when Pat Hickey doubled in two runs for the Dodger rookies.

The Rebels also scored three runs in the fifth when Randy Ward hit his third home run of the exhibition season with two men on. This made the score 6-3, UNLV. Tom Luna and Smith hit doubles in the sixth inning to increase the Rebel lead to 7-5.

The Rebels added two more in the seventh when Nader doubled and came in on a single from Dick Luna. He then scored when his brother, Tom Luna, sacrificed to infield. The score then stood 9-3 UNLV and a win seemed near.

But the Dodgers scored three runs on only two hits in the eighth inning as relief pitcher Mike Hall gave up five walks in the eighth and ninth innings to tie the game up at 10-10.

Jeff Wolff then came in and pitched the final inning as he was tagged for three unearned runs. Of the Dodger 18 runs, only 9 were earned thanks in part, by 3 Rebel fielding errors.

The second game of the afternoon was a showcase for senior left-hander Richie Davis. The 6-0, 200 pound fireballer allowed only seven hits in seven innings as he went the distance and the Rebs won 6-3 in this shortened second game of the exhibition.

UNLV scored four runs in the first inning on hits by Kinsel and Frank DeSantis and Scott drove in Nader, who had walked earlier in the inning.

The Rebels scored again in the fourth inning when Scott walked and was driven in by a walk to John Rice. That left the score at 4-0 UNLV.

The Dodgers only scored in the game came on two home runs by shortstop

Javier Fierro, who is head on the Chicago Cubs 40-man roster. His first homer came in the fifth inning to make the score 4-1.

UNLV scored twice more in the fifth when DeSantis singled and was driven in by a walk to Dick Luna. Tom Luna, then walked to drive in Nader to finish the Rebel scoring for the day. Fierro hit his second homer in the seventh with

Altered States...Consciousness Studied

Michael O'Shea

For centuries, man has had his own two eyes to explore the wonders of the universe. As he peered into the dark, the most slowly changing of them disappeared. Presently, the scientist goes back in time, but if he can't see what he would find? And how far back could he go? In 1964, John Lilly, a mathematician and psychologist who specializes in neurophysiology, biofeedback and bioelectricity, began experiments in what is now known as an isolation tank. It consists of blood-warm salt water, and the subject for a subject stands in fluid in total darkness, completely oblivious to the outside world.

To add a bit more spice to the experiment, Lilly had taken a dose of LSD, obtained under the grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

"It wasn't hard to think that I heard," he wrote. "It was getting into space in which I could lose control and from which I could perhaps not be able to come back."

Although Lilly had convictions about surviving the LSD tank experiments intact, he took enormous risks—physically, emotionally and professionally. "I moved into universities containing beings much larger than myself," he wrote. "The first time I entered these spaces, I was swept, pushed, carried, whirled and in general, beat around by processes which I could not understand, processes of immense energy, of fantastic light, and of terrifying power."

By this time, he had devoted himself to exploring a variety of states of consciousness that the scientific community had deemed unuseful.

Lilly was the first to do these experiments under such conditions, but William James, a British psychiatrist, was actually the first scientist to undertake the study of spiritual reality.

He worked with Nitrous oxide and psilocybin in 1898 and reported that "our normal waking consciousness, whilst all about it, parted from it by the finest of spaces, there is potential forms of consciousness entirely different."

Further exploration of other forms of consciousness got its biggest push when Aldous Huxley consumed mescaline pills and described the experience in The Doors of Perception (1954). The proof to him that the mundane world could be transcended and what appears to be reality is not necessarily important.

In 1965, Robert Gordon Wasson and his wife, Valentina, made their way into Central Mexico and under the guidance of a curandera became the first white persons in modern times to take part in the sacred mushroom ceremony. After the mushrooms were eaten, the candle in the room was put out and the visions began in total darkness. "I was seeing the archetypes," Wasson said. "The Platonic ideas that underlie the imperfect images of everyday life."

Altered states of consciousness can result from hypnosis, sleep, anesthesia, biofeedback, seizures, fasting, drugs, meditation, ceremony, sex, dancing, tank isolation or weightlessness.

In 1978, Author Paddy Chayefsky assimilated this vast body of knowledge and took the experiment to its next fascinating and frightening stage. He took the reader not only into the mental hallucination of a man under the conditions in an isolation tank, but proceeded to have physical changes take place also.

Now in 1981, director Ken Russell takes the movie audiences into the experiment in "Altered States". Russell uses new innovations in film techniques that actually propel film viewers into what has been described as the closest thing to an LSD trip, without actually taking the drug. At one time, scientists focused their energies on reaching for the heavens, and outer space. Now, thanks to a few dedicated scientists, the heavens are reaching out for us. But how far will it go? Isolation tanks can be rented out for $30 an hour in many parts of the country. Soon they will be as big as hot tubs. Then what? Are we ready for it? Can we handle it? Altered States is now playing at the CineDome Six theaters.

Master Series... 'The Pirates of Penzance'

by Geraldine Sawyer

The more members of the same Gilbert and Sullivan musical evokes smiles from opera and music lovers. And Las Vegas Master Series patrons had something to smile about Feb. 8, when Opera A La Carte presented the Gilbert and Sullivan classic "The Pirates of Penzance."

Based in Los Angeles and headed by Richard Sheldon, the Gilbert and Sullivan specialists of the England, the troupe has enjoyed a reputation to have.

As for "The Pirates of Penzance," it is considered one of the dynamic musical team's most familiar and popular comic operas. Written in 1879 by Sir William Gilbert, with music composed by Sir Arthur Sullivan, its wit and humor are still well appreciated today. There was a welcome absence of modern plot lines, a quality required for the longevity and the ability to let the Gilbert and Sullivan parody stand on its own merits.

transforming it into self-conscious burlesque.

Richard Sheldon headed the cast as the very model of a modern Major-General. Barbara Michael Gallup played out the virtues of being a Pirate King, and Nina D'Amico brought romance to the character of Mabel, one of the Major-General's daughters, when she fell in love with Frederic, a pirate apprentice, portrayed by tenor Don Haskins.

As you may remember "The Pirates of Penzance" as the production Linda Houston performed in last summer.

Opera A La Carte was signed just three weeks ago, when Master Series director Charles Vanda was notified that the Spanish government would not allow the National Ballet of Spain, which was scheduled to perform here, to leave the country. Vanda managed to catch the opportunity to bring the Gilbert and Sullivan parody to the stage perfectly.

book review...

Kurt Vonnegut's Bestselling 'Jailbird'

by Arthur B. Boggs

"Jailbird," a bestselling novel by Kurt Vonnegut, reduces the epic of an old man's life as he would have lived it to be. The main character, Walter F. Starbuck, fully recalls past events while writing outside the jail he was recently released from.

Here is the story of a man who never lost his faith. This loose, fictional biography is colored from the point of view of a class of '31 Harvard Liberal Arts graduates, a fraternal socialist. He considers himself the ideal bureaucrat, but gets caught between the wheels of America's great society and is repeatedly crushed, only to rise again from the remains, like the legendary Phoenix.

The heroism and martyrdom of the labor movement, proletarianism remain prominent in the background theme of the entire book. This movement of the 1930's, branded as conspiracy by the greedy pre-union industrial moguls, played a significant part in Starbuck's teenage years.

Starbuck's life is one disaster after another. His mentor cuts off his stipend when he is discovered to be a socialist. After the War, in 1963, he testifies at a congressional session, incriminates Le land Clewes, his only friend, and loses his job as a result.

For fifteen years he is unemployed but then, as a political favor, President Richard Nixon hires him as a staff member. His office is in the sub-basement of the White House, right below the office where the Watergate break-ins were plotted.

Starbuck's honesty leads to his demise when $1 million cash, actually "unreported campaign contributions," is discovered in his office. Walter becomes the Jailbird.

Walter returns to New York City from prison to search for past acquaintances. He runs into Leland Clewes on a street corner in downtown Manhattan. Their subdued reunion takes place and Clewes forgives Walter for sending him to prison.

Walter is then accosted by a grimy old shopping bag lady, Mary Kathleen, an old lover from his college days, now heiress to a fortune from a conglomerate called RAMJAC. She has lowered herself to her present state to stay ahead of the wicked, greedy people after her money. She magically propels Walter to the top, as a vice-president of one of RAMJAC's companies.

Mary is hit by a cab and dies in Walter's arms. He hides her will, which requires RAMJAC to be given to the American people. This deception works for two years.

The book closes with a going away party for Walter. He must return to prison for "repudiating Mary Kathleen's will. The party is given by Clewes and his wife Sarah. To honor him, a record of his testimony before Congress is played. Nixon, then a Congressman, is interrogating him. His friends politely applaud as the record ends.

The book's conclusion brings readers back to reality, where criminals even in the highest levels of government and business are ultimately discovered. Vonnegut's curious blend of satire and deadly serious rhetoric creates a novel with his individual trademark. Readers will want to return time and time again to his material for entertainment and insight into the human condition.

Campus Stealing

Dear Editor: Ladies, hang on to your purses. And gentlemen, you had better keep a watchful eye on anything you might have hanging loose.

Apparently stealing is running rampant on the UNLV campus. Purses, plants, jewelry, books and coats appear to be some of the more popular articles disappearing at random.

Much as I despise repeating old adages, in this particular circumstance, an ounce of precaution could save you some bucks. As far as I'm concerned, I'd rather spend my hard earned student loan money on beer than replacing stolen necessities.

Favorite filching spots include the library and the Moyer Student Union Building. In the latter, even locked doors appear to have lost their preventive purpose.

Whatever perverse pleasure our campus kleptoes are deriving from their endeavors is beyond my imagination. However, from this particular victim's position, the tables have finally been reversed.

Prisoner Seeks Contact

Dear Editor: I'm writing to your college paper in the hopes that you may able to help me.

You see, I am a 33 year old inmate in the Arizona prison system and I've been here for 7 years now, but I may be getting out soon.
I'm looking for a university to go to if and when I am released, but I know that I will have to learn how to relate to people and things on the outside again, after all this time. I will need to correspond with honest, understanding people that will take time to write to someone in prison. People willing to ask questions as well as give some answers. This could be a learning experience for both parties.

I know it would help me greatly.
So, I was wondering if you could run a small ad in your paper, stating that I would welcome correspondence from any open-minded person that may be able to help me get back in touch with the real world.

Please let me know. Thank you and I hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

NCAA Plans To Govern Women's Sports

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI)—In the most forceful volley in what has become a war over who gets to govern college women's sports, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) convention here has decided to sponsor ten national women's athletic championships next year.

For the past few years, women's sports have been directed by the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW), which about a year ago was looking forward to unprecedented prosperity in the aftermath of new federal guidelines for women's sports.

She says the NCAA's inducement—its less stringent recruiting rules and its ability to pay the travel expenses of teams that participate in championships—can't be matched by the AIAW, and will probably draw most AIAW members to the older NCAA.

NCAA Executive Assistant Steve

Morgan says the NCAA moved into women's sports at the request of its member schools.

At last year's convention the NCAA, which has sponsored men's athletic competitions since 1906, decided to organize championships in five women's sports. This year's vote applies to all major sports.

At the meetings over the last few years it became apparent that it was necessary for college administrators to have the same rules for men and women," Morgan explains. "To do this, the NCAA had to sponsor women's competitions."

The NCAA's and AIAW's different rules were confusing for athletic directors, he contends. He expects that with "one set of rules" for both men's and women's sports there will be no need for schools to belong to the AIAW.

Lopiano, who is also women's athletic director at the University of Texas at Austin, says the NCAA's rules are easier, not less confusing.

"Their rules system is an embarrassment next to ours," she asserts.

She predicts that if a school wants to keep up with its competitors, it will forsake the AIAW for the NCAA's laxer rules in order to recruit more aggressively.

Teams participating in AIAW events, moreover, must pay their own way. The NCAA, Lopiano points out, provides funding for teams' transportation, usually out of television revenues. The AIAW has had trouble attracting television coverage.

Lopiano says she's more concerned about the future of women's sports under the aegis of the NCAA than she is about the demise of her organization.

"Everything that the AIAW has done in terms of organizing women's sports and instilling high principles into events will be lost," she grieves. "At AIAW, women were the focal point of an entire system especially designed for them. I doubt whether women's athletics will be anything more than minor sports in the NCAA."

"The NCAA will still concentrate on the men because they are the ones who bring in the money," she laments.

"What the NCAA is saying is that they're going to take care of women," Lopiano says. "Mark my word, they're going to take care of women, all right."

The NCAA's Morgan, however, is considerably less pessimistic.

He says women's programs will be administered within the NCAA by a special director with her own committee, and will enjoy the same benefits as the other NCAA members.

He foresees "no problems" for the new members.

NCAA Tries To Take Over Women's Sports

(UPI)—The furor that greeted the National Collegiate Athletic Association's (NCAA) recent decision to try to take over women's athletics has settled into a guarded caution as college athletic directors adopt a "wait and see" attitude about the NCAA's plan to sponsor national competitions for women.

Everybody's trying to get a sense of how everybody else feels about the NCAA's decision," says Judith Holland, women's athletic director at UCLA. "A lot of schools are calling me just wanting to know what I'm doing about it."

James Jarrett, athletic director at Old Dominion University, a powerhouse in women's basketball, says only that the NCAA will provide "additional opportunities for women's athletics." He adds that ODU has not decided yet whether to participate in the new NCAA competitions or in the championship tournament already offered by the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW), which ODU has won the last two years in a row.

For the last ten years, the AIAW has sponsored all 17 national championships for women. Under the NCAA's new program, officially adopted at the organization's convention in January, twelve of those competitions will also be sponsored separately by the NCAA, beginning next fall.

Holland suggests that larger schools will probably opt to retain membership in both organizations, which is allowable under the NCAA's new rules. She says that twelve of UCLA's teams will participate solely in the NCAA, while the five sports not included in the new program—including badminton, crew, and soccer—will remain with the AIAW.

Richard Perry, athletic director at University of Southern California, plans to operate his women's teams under AIAW rules, even if some of them compete in NCAA championships.

"The AIAW has a much more beneficial scholarship program," Perry notes, "but under the AIAW we cannot recruit. We'll retain membership in both until we decide whose rules are better for us."

Dennis Lopiano, president of the AIAW, feels that despite the initial caution, schools will make their decisions very quickly. She cited the NCAA's practice of providing transportation to tournament participants as a big factor in the minds of many athletic directors.

"Who can pass up economic advantages like that?" she asks.

But in opting for such monetary advantages, schools will not be doing women's athletics a favor, Lopiano contends.

"I doubt whether women will be anything more than minor sports in the NCAA," she conjectures. "Women have a lot to lose in all this."

Perry, a member of both organizations, disagrees.

"If the NCAA hadn't also passed a proposal to reorganize the governance structure and include women in making their own decisions, we wouldn't participate in the NCAA," he says. "But because of that reorganization, we think the NCAA championships themselves will offer more to women's participants."

Perry also speaks of the "excellent long-range possibilities for women's athletics" in the NCAA. With one organization sponsoring both men's and women's competitions, he dreams of merging the two.

For example, he foresees holding both men's and women's national basketball championships in the same location during the same weekend within a few years. This would give women much broader television coverage.

Perry, a member of the NCAA committee exploring such possibilities, also envisions a single championship in individual sports, such as swimming, tennis, and gymnastics. In such a program, individual events would be single sex, with the scores of both men and women tabulated together to achieve a team score.

"Hypothetically, we could someday determine not the best women's tennis team and the best men's tennis team, but the best tennis school," he says.

"Women are going to be hard-pressed to come into their own," Perry says, "unless they combine efforts with the men to get some of the national spotlight in these competitions."

INTRAMURALS REPORT '81

Hoop To Begin

Intramural basketball, one of the most popular programs offered to UNLV students, is slated to open this weekend. Games will be played on both Saturday and Sunday in the south gym of the McDermott Physical Education Complex.

The popularity of intramural "hoop" was evidenced last year by a record of 24 teams participating, and this year is off to an even better start, with 33 men's teams signed up, as well as nine women's teams. Both divisions will play a full slate of regular season games, as well as playoffs, to crown a women's champion, as well as men's "a" and

"b" division champions. The men's division will feature some exciting play, with Dean's Dancing Machine being the preseason favorite. The Machine is shooting for an unprecedented third straight "A" division title, but the competition is sure to make it rough for them, with the likes of the Liquidators II and the Eliminators ready to go for the title, also.

A mid-season highlight will be the annual free throw championship for both the men and women. Rob Starankovic will be out to defend his title from a year ago.

Basketball Officials Meet

With the basketball season starting this weekend, the Intramurals Department sponsored a clinic for its basketball officials. The clinic, held Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, was conducted by Bruce Bayne, a member of the Nevada Officiating Association.

The clinic covered items such as the fundamental rules, positioning the officials on the court, and some of the psychological aspects of officiating. According to Intramurals Director Marty Flynn, "The pressure on the student official is tremendous for two reasons. First, they are not professionals, so they learn as the season progresses. Second, and most importantly, they are officiating fellow students, and oftentimes their friends."

In its second full year of using only student officials, the Intramurals department has been able to save a great deal of money, which has enabled the program to grow, while at the same time, the quality of officiating is improving.

Brigham Young Pulls The Switch On UNLV

by Ken Wilson

Someone pulled a switch, a tricky one at that. One that worked so well it put one team in the W column while its opponent went down in the L column, again.

The switch pulled by the Cougars, who threw a different defense at the Rebels every time down the court, confused and bewildered their way to a 86-77 victory before a crowd of 23,841 at the Marriott Center as UNLV opened a two-game road swing. The early switching defenses bothered the Rebels a great deal as BYU opened up a 16-point lead before UNLV snapped out of a daze.

"Early in the game, they changed defense on us every time down the floor," Tarkanian said. "And we didn't handle it well."

"We don't handle a lot of things well. We have to have someone who can run the ball club. We don't have a floor leader," he added.

BYU head coach Frank Arnold said that the defensive switches did give his club an early lead, but he was not pleased that they did not put the game away.

"Several kinds of ball clubs have trouble figuring it out," Coach Arnold said of the switches. "And we thought it would work well tonight. But this club," Arnold added, "We got a big lead by running our break, and then we got cocky, start extending our shots and making foolish passes. This team heard my wrath for the first time this season."

Apparently Arnold was ticked off that his Cougars blew a 35-19 first half lead to hold only a six point edge at halftime, 37-31. UNLV, like so many times this season, found itself down early in the game. Before the crowd even settled in their seats, BYU's All-America guard Danny Ainge scored on a layup off the opening jump, shook free of his man for another hoop, drove the baseline for a layup, and then Greg Kite hit a jump hook for an 8-0 BYU lead.

Down but not out, UNLV started to rally when Michael Johnson tipped in his own errant shot with 5:06 left in the first half. Greg Goorjian flipped in a long jumper, John Copeland dropped in two free throws, Larry Anderson canned a jumper, and Sidney Green had a tip-in as the Rebels scored 10 straight points.

UNLV, after trading with BYU, held the ball the final minute of the half for the last shot, but Anderson was called for traveling with five seconds left. Early in the second half, UNLV pulled to within four points twice, but BYU answered the challenge, gaining a 10 point lead and upping it to 14 points on a breakaway layup by Greg Ballis.

UNLV had several opportunities with the most noticeable one coming after a drive by Burns that cut the BYU lead to 72-67 with 2:36 to play.

Then, after a Danny Ainge jumper, Bob Larry Anderson hit a 30-footer from the corner and a Sid Green Free-throw cut the BYU lead to four. After Richard Box' layup, UNLV was only down 74-71 with 1:42 left in the game.

But in the end, BYU's free throw ability and Rebel mistakes gave UNLV their seventh loss in their last nine games and ended their season record at 10-10.

"We battled back, but every time we battled back and needed a break, we didn't get it," Tarkanian said. "We really battled hard. I was surprised that we got back to within six points in the half but scouted. But we made so many errors at the most critical times. We just self-destructed ourselves."

Cougar coach, Frank Arnold said that the Rebels still might be a top team, and that UNLV isn't far away from being a good club.

"I think that if they had all their kids together all season, things would have been different. I'm not trying to say that they are not well coached because they are. Jerry is doing a great coaching job, but it's just that they haven't had time together to get into a group as a team," Arnold stated.

Utah Sends The Runnin' Rebels In The Loss Column

by Ken Wilson

No excuses, no flash; just the deal if you will. The bottom line—the party's over and the lights have all been turned out.

UNLV lost twice in a row, and all the disappointment and frustration of Rebel players came to an unhappy climax Saturday night in their 90-83 loss to seventh-ranked Utah. The loss was the second in as many nights as the Rebels lost to BYU on Friday night.

The beginning of the end came as the Rebels were holding a three point lead five minutes into the second half, when things fell completely apart. The show started when Sidney Green fell short on a jumper, and was fouled by UTE Danny Vranes before the shot. Green and Vranes exchanged words, then out of the blue, Pace Mannion, a former Las Vegas prepster, stepped in and said something to Green. In the ensuing altercation more words came from the opponents before Mannion turned and started to walk away when Green retaliated and slapped Mannion on the back of the head.

Both benches emptied as Green was held back by teammates and a referee, while Mannion was restrained by his former high school teammate Michael "Spiderman" Burns. After a time out, play resumed, but the incident only served as a fuel an already charging Utah squad.

According to UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, the story went something like this: "Sid said Mannion spit in his face." Green left the arena immediately following the game and could not be reached for a statement.

Utah coach Jerry Pimm seemed to think the incident did not affect his team's play. "I don't think that slowed us up," he said. "Sid said Pace spit in his face, but I can't believe Pace would do something like that. Pace is the cleanest basketball player I know.

According to Mannion, he had only pretended to spit in Green's face. "His (Green) was talking to Vranes and I told him to shut up," Mannion said. "I turned around and faked like I was gonna spit on him just to get him off me, and then when I turned around I felt him touch me on the head." When asked what Green had said to Vranes, Mannion simply replied, "You couldn't print that."

For UNLV, the loss was the fourth straight, dropping its Rebels below the .500 mark at 10-11, while the victory was Utah's 19th in a row and upped its record to 20-1 on the season.

"We played two opposite extremes," Tarkanian analyzed. "We played a great first half, but in the second half we would miss layups and they were hitting everything. And we lost our poise."

More like day and night as Utah fell behind the Rebels 63-44 at the half; in fact, a crowd of 14,812 even booed the utes as they headed for the locker room.

But UNLV, which had shot a sizzling 65 percent from the field in the first half, could only manage a dismal 43 percent in the second half. On the other hand, Utah hit just 42 percent in the first half, and put on a game pace for a 63 percent mark during the last 20 minutes. Utah also outscored UNLV 61-30 in the final half.

After the unfortunate spitting incident, Utah forward Danny Vranes tied the game at 64-all on a layup. Then, a jumper from the top of the key by Scott Martin plus two Vranes free throws gave the Utes a four-point game edge.

At the other end of the court, various Rebel miscues aided their demise; John Copeland turned the ball over when he stepped over the inbound line; Michael Johnson was assessed his fourth personal foul; Michael Burns also was called for charging, traveling and missed a forced shot.

Things don't get better! Larry

Anderson shot an air ball, missed a layup, and failed to convert a short jumper, and then Burns turned the ball over on a two-on-one fast break opportunity.

The Burns' turnover created the best play of the game for Utah. Vranes picked up the loose ball and dished off a behind-the-back pass to the streaking Tom Chambers, who slammed it home.

Yes, after all those mistakes, the Rebels lost. But then, UNLV found itself in the middle of a Ute barrage of slamdunks. Two by Chambers and one by Vranes, which was part of a three-point play.

"We didn't have anything left in our legs," Tarkanian explained. "We quit running and jumping. But, as I told the team after the game, if you have real tough kids mentally and you're used to working hard in practice, you play through this kind of stuff. I think our kids are getting frustrated."

Tarkanian added, "You'd be frustrated too if you'd gone through what Spider has gone through. He's been getting hammered every time down the court. Every key call goes against him."

Utah got a career high of 8 points from Karl Bankowski. Tom Chambers added 36 points, and All-American Danny Vranes had 20 points and 11 rebounds.

UNLV had balanced scoring with six players in double figures. But it didn't matter. Spiderman Burns was high with 18 points, Box and Anderson had 15 apiece, Johnson had 13, Green had 12 and Greg Goorjian tallied with 10.

Wrestlin' Rebels Win Second Match

The UNLV Wrestling team won their second dual match this year with a win over Northern Arizona University last weekend.

In the match that the Rebels won 9-10, Robert Stewart, Mark Tomlinson, Scott Ruppe, Tony Rowland, Eddie Carver and Russ Poland were victors. Roger DeSart, UNLV's nationally ranked wrestler, sat out of the meet with a rib injury.

So far this season; though, Rowland is the leading wrestler with 14 overall wins. He is 6-1-0 in dual meets and 14-2-0 in overall matches. Closely behind the 155 pounder is DeSart, who is 13-4-0 overall and has lost only twice out of seven times in dual meets.

Mark Tomlinson is 17-4-0 in overall meets and is 5-3-0 in dual matches.

Overall, UNLV wrestlers are 75-63-1 in overall matches and 30-49-1 in dual meets. The threesome of Rowland, Tomlinson and DeSart have 16 of the Rebels 30 dual wins.

In the sixth annual California Collegiate Championships held in San Francisco, the Rebels finished third of 14 teams and Tony Rowland was voted the Most Outstanding Wrestler of the tournament.

Baseball Clinic Set

UNLV's annual Youth Baseball Clinic will meet weekday afternoons Feb. 13-27 on the university campus.

According to coach Tom Crine, the clinic is geared for boys 7-13, especially for the younger ones with little or no previous experience. This clinic will give the youngsters exposure to all the playing positions and a chance to learn whether they would enjoy getting more active in baseball. Because of the low-pressure learning situation, boys should be able to succeed in learning various plays and skills.

Training will cover the overall concepts of the game, offensive and defensive strategies, key points for playing each position, and base coaching and signals.

For registration details, call the Classes for People program at UNLV, 738-3994.

Mr. Stat Man

After a disappointing trip to Utah, the UNLV basketball squad fell to a record of 10-11, but Sidney Green stayed atop the Mr. Stat Man ratings with 81 points. Green now owns a rating of 48 in the points per minute category and a 26 rating in rebounds per minute. He had a rating of 66 but lost six points because of turnovers.

Second on the list is Michael Johnson. After leading two weeks ago, the big guy dropped another point to 79 on the scale. He has a 53 PPM rating and a 31 RPM rating. Johnson's PPM rating fell four points from last weeks as he had a 35.

Michael Burns had an 86 total for this week but 12 points were taken off for turnovers as he now has 74 ratings points on the year. He has 24 ratings points in the assist per minute category.

Larry Anderson's rating also dropped a point from last week as he now has a 60 rating. He still has his high PPM rating of 47. Richard Box moves into this week's top five after upping his rating two points. He only had two points taken off for turnovers. Greg Goorjian falls in as the sixth man as he fell 12 points to 45 with a 38 rating in the PPM category and a 17 rating in the APM category. The first year Rebel has had the flu of late and that could have been the determining factor.

College Basketball Season Winding Down

The collegiate basketball season is winding down and only two undefeated teams remain at the top of the ratings. The Oregon State Beavers are number one in the U.P.I. poll and the Virginia Cavaliers are number one in the A.P. poll.

The Beaver defeated Cal-Berkeley 69-64 and Stanford 65-57 last week. The Steve Johnson-led Beavers are now 30-0. The Cavaliers are 30-0 after winning games against North Carolina, 80-79, in overtime, and beating Wagner 76-69.

The DePaul Blue Demons are number 8 in the ratings after defeating Detroit 69-58 and beating Alabama-Birmingham 77-66. The Ray Meyer-coached team is 30-1 on the year. LSU, an opponent of the Rebels earlier in the year, are number 4 in the nation after beating Vanderbilt 86-81 and Mississippi State 94-83. The Tiggers are 21-1 this season.

Number 5 in the nation is Arizona State of the Pac 10. With the win over Notre Dame, UCLA and Arizona State could join Oregon State in the top 10 of both polls. The Sun Devils are 17-2 this season after beating California in double overtime and Washington State this past week.

After beating the Rebels this past weekend, Utah and Brigham Young are assured to move up in the weekly polls. The Utes have lost once in 51 games and are ranked seventh in the nation. The Cougars are 17-4 this season and are ranked 19th in the nation.

In the pro ranks, the Philadelphia 76ers own the best record in the National Basketball Association with a 46-10 mark. Boston and New York are behind the 76ers in the Atlantic Division. Even though Boston has the second best record in the NBA, it is unfortunate that the 76ers are in the same division. The Knicks are 35-22 on the year.

Milwaukee is first in the Central Division with 49-15 record. Indiana and Chicago follow as the Pacers are nine games behind and the Bulls are 18 and 1/2 games behind the leading Bucks.

In the Midwest Division, San Antonio leads the Rockets of Houston by 10 1/2 games and the Kansas City Kings by 11 games.

The Phoenix Suns are 4 1/2 games over the Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division. The Suns are 44-19 while the Lakers, defending NBA champions, are 35-19.

The defending National Hockey League champion New York Islanders are again the top team in the league. With 77 points, they lead the Philadelphia Flyers in the Patrick Division race by eight points.

In the Smythe Division, St. Louis has an 18 point edge over the Vancouver Canucks as it seems obvious that the Blues will win the Smythe.

The Los Angeles Kings, with 73 points, lead the Norris Division by six points over Montreal.

The Buffalo Sabres lead the Adams Division by seven points over the Minnesota North Stars, who have 64 points.

In golf action this past weekend, the San Diego Open as well as the Miami LPGA went into sudden death playoffs. In the San Diego Open, Bruce Lietzke, Tom Jenkins and Raymond Floyd were tied after 72 holes of action. Lietzke retired with a pulled leg muscle. Also, in the Toronto Challenge Golf matches held this past weekend, Vase Gerulaitis beat John McEwen 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 to pick up the win in the $500,000 Tennis Challenge. Gerulaitis picked up $175,000 for his efforts.

In the Miami LPGA, Sally Little, Judy Rankin and JoAnne Carner finished 72 holes in a tie and Little won the event and the $18,750 purse on the third extra hole of competition.

Lady Rebs Lose To Cal

by Greg Goussak

The University of California at Berkeley defeated the UNLV Lady Rebels 95-86 in the championship game of the 2nd annual Desert Classic held this past weekend in the South Gym. During the first half of the ballgame both teams were in a running battle that would have reminded any Rebels fan of the old days.

As the buzzer went off ending the first half of play, UNLV had narrow 46-45 lead. The crowd of almost 300 loyal and rowdy fans were sensing a big victory over the prestigious opponent from the PAC-10. Kathie Calloway was having another big night by canning 11 points by intermission.

The second half action was a different story for the Lady Rebs. The Golden Bears came out of the locker room looking as if they were playing for the national AIAW championship. The two major problems the Lady Rebs ran into were: Lack of intensity and the 6'6" Cal center Sarah Thamer. UNLV's assistant womens basketball coach Jim Minello feels, "If our team would have sustained the intensity we started the game with, we would have beat them (Cal)".

UNLV's starting center Kathie Calloway said that Thamer was tough. Calloway said of the 6 inch taller Thamer, "She knew what she had to do." The Cal center did exactly that by frustrating UNLV in the final 20 minutes. Thamer hit an unusual 9 of 11 from the field while ripping down 18 boards.

UNLV's freshman 5'8" reserve guard Debbie Rohlman felt, "That in comparison to the players on their team and the players on our team, they match up." Rohlman felt that, "We didn't take out time running the offense". Observing the performance of the 2nd half, Rohlman's synopsis was more than accurate.

UNLV couldn't get back into the groove they had in the first half. In first round action of the classic, UC-Berkeley faced #11 rated Stephen F. Austin State University in a very hard fought and close ball game. The Golden Bears were able to pull out an 83-75 upset win over the Ladyjacks even though SFASU put on a late surge.

Other first round action pitted the host UNLV Lady Rebels against the Lobos from the University of New Mexico. The Lobos entered the tournament with a 5-15 record, a seemingly easy opponent for the talented Rebs, but foul trouble and concentration problems gave the crowd an eveningful of excitement. In the final outcome, UNLV pulled out a 75-69 win over UNM. The Lady Rebs were led by their senior captain Kathy Ricks with 19 points. Ricks was followed by Kathie Calloway who joined the elite 20 rebound club for the second time this season. Calloway was able to pull down 20 boards while scoring 16 points. Also showing her skills was junior guard Tina Glover, Glover who usually plays the wing, or scoring guard position, dished off a game high 10 assists in a very unselfish performance.

Although having a frustrating climax to the Desert Classic, UNLV was able to place two girls on the all-tournament team. Senior Captain Kathy Ricks was one of the players. Ricks finished the classic with 40 points, 17 rebounds, and 6 steals. UNLV's other member of the prestigious team was junior center Kathie Calloway. Calloway had a magnificent tournament scoring 36 points, pulling down 33 rebounds, and stealing the ball 5 time. Her performance in the classic was enough to earn her Rebel Athlete of the Week honors.

Air Force To Meet Rebs

Revenge may take place in the Las Vegas Convention Center when the Air Force Falcons come to town.

The Falcons upset UNLV 51-50 on Jan. 10. The Air Force defense leads the WAC, allowing only 55.8 points a contest. But the Falcons only score 51.8 a game. Their record stands at 6-13 after losses on the road to BYU and Utah.

Tom Harris, a 6-6 senior forward, leads the team in scoring with 16.6 points a game. Reggie Jones, a 6-7 center, scores 7.6 points a game but average 9.5 rebounds a contest. Rich Simmons, a 6-4 forward, averages 12.1 points a game and 4.9 rebounds a game.

Erwin Washington, a 6-2 sophomore, starts at guard. He averages 9.2 points a game. Bob Sallis, a 6-11 guard, or Max Duncan, a 6-6 forward, will be filling the fifth starting spot.

The Air Force, as a team, shoots 47 percent from the field and 61 percent from the charity stripe.

This is the Falcons first trip to Las Vegas.

nobody in line. The win for Davis was his second in exhibition play.

The UNLV Rebels, behind the strong pitching of Willy Farnsworth and Jack Ayers, beat a team of Los Angeles Dodgers rookies 9-4. Later the Rebs went on to win the nightcap holding the LA rookies down 4-1 in the second game as UNLV won 5-1.

The Rebels struck first by scoring three times in the third.

Central Nguyen, a left-handed Fresno State pitcher, was the first to be deposited in a Farnsworth hanging curve over the rightfield fence for LA's first run in the fourth inning.

UNLV came right back to score in the bottom half of the fifth.

L.A. scored once in the seventh inning, but Nguyen, who earlier honored, had a golden opportunity to at least tie the game but was called out on strikes.

UNLV, ahead 4-3 going into the seventh inning, scored two more runs on a leadoff walk to Dave Kinnel and a DeBontis line drive home run on the first pitch delivered by Farnsworth.

In the second game, Rich Nguyen picked up the win for the Rebs as he pitched four innings and allowed only two hits.

The Rebs picked up their runs in the third and fourth innings as Nader and DeBontis hit singles to score two runs and Pat Ireland scored on a triple by Nader in the fourth. Again, Ayers picked up the save for UNLV, his second in so many games.

The Rebels finished the exhibition season at 2-3 and open the regular season against Brigham Young on Feb. 13 and 14.

Calloway Named Athlete of the Week

For this week's Fidelity Union Athletic of the Week, Mr. Stat Man had to be used for the women's basketball team. It was between Kathy Ricks, the Lady Rebs leading scorer, and Kathie Calloway, the Lady Rebs leading rebounder. After Mr. Stat Man's answer finally came around, Calloway had 87 rating points for last week's tournament and Ricks had 79. A close race, but Calloway is the recipient of this week's Fidelity Union Athlete of the Week.

Calloway had 36 points and 33 rebounds for the two tournament games while Ricks had 40 points and 17 rebounds for the two games. Even though the Lady Rebs finished second in the tournament, these Lady Rebs didn't.

BYU Rejects Beer Scholarship

PROVO, Utah (CH)-Brigham Young University officials recently looked a gift horse in the mouth, smelled alcohol on its breath and turned it away.

Those principles have forced rejection of previous scholarship money. In 1978, BYU officials also rejected a donation in honor of Cam Killebrew by the American Tobacco Institute.

Officials of the school sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints rejected a $500 scholarship presented in the name of basketball player Danny Ainge by Anheuser Busch, Inc., the St. Louis-based brewery. Ainge was being honored for his selection as college basketball Player of the Week by Basketball Weekly magazine.

The money, if accepted, would have gone into BYU's general scholarship fund. In a statement released by the Office of Sports Information, however, BYU officials explained that certain religious tenets "make it inappropriate for us to accept the Anheuser Busch scholarship." Members of the church don't drink alcohol, take stimulants or smoke tobacco.
