TV ads cause controversy

steve hong

staff writer

Recently, there has been much controversy over the airing of condom commercials on television. It is controversial because condom ads have never been on television and the networks are afraid of hostile reactions from the public.

Condom is the only known device that can save a life from AIDS, as well as preventing other sexually transmitted diseases. Here at UNLV, Student Health Services is currently talking with the administration about distributing condoms on campus, free of charge, to students. Although nothing is yet definite, it remains a possibility.

Condoms have been around as early as the Roman Empire era, and condoms from 1646 England exist today. These were found in Dudley Castel in Warwickshire by a team of archaeologists.

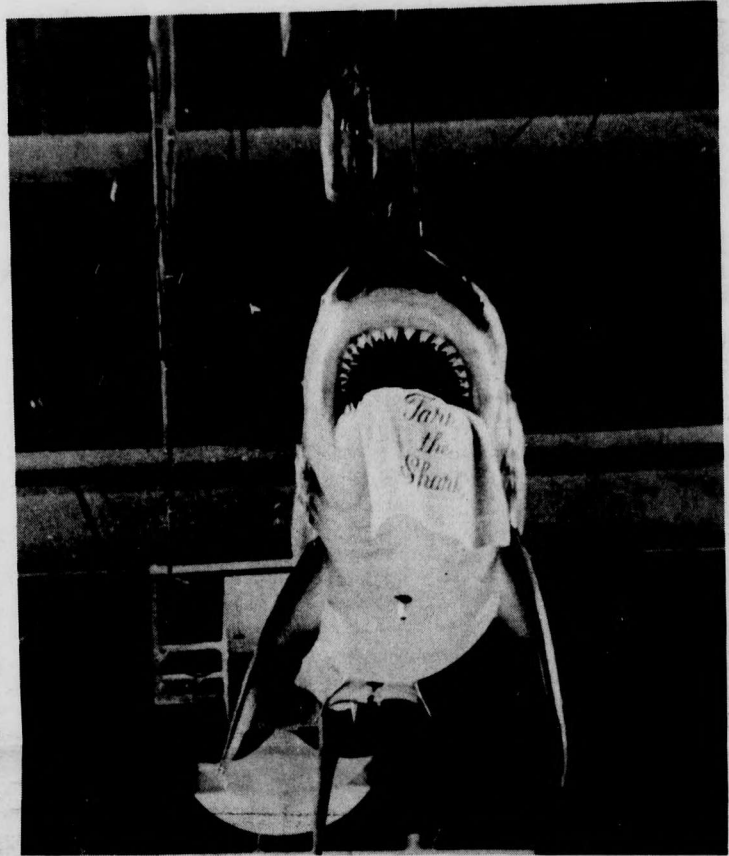

Though the use of condoms is certainly not new, it continues to draw controversy over its use. Asked whether or not condoms should be passed out on campus, one student said, "It will be good to pass them out because it prevents certain diseases. On the other hand, if condoms are passed out free, some people may take that as pushing sex." said Joe Bosse. Another student disagrees.

"No, I don't think they should be passed out because passing them out is not socially acceptable. Urging their use is another matter. Condoms are a private matter and it should stay that way." According to Rebecca Kinn of Student Health Services, who is also a member of the Campus Committee on AIDS, said the issue is being discussed because anybody and everybody who gets AIDS dies, and condoms can prevent death through AIDS. She also said that if they are distributed, possibly by the end of the school year, they will be distributed to anyone that wants them. Machines may also be installed in the restrooms because some people are afraid or embarrassed to ask for them.

Lanny Leroy of CSUN said that while he understands all the preventions condoms do, he would not like the student government directly involved because "I don't really think the student body in general would approve of the student government buying [condoms], because I don't really see that as the role of the student government." He also said that he would not like to see money go to waste because "Some students are not mature enough to handle that."

This issue may never come to pass, but each student should think about it, as the point of the whole project is to serve the students of UNLV.

Career day aids job search

by kurt hildebrand

managing editor

Seniors looking forward to graduation have something a little more ominous to look forward to, searching for a job.

UNLV's Alumni Association, in conjunction with CSUN and the Moyer Student Union Board and the Career Placement Office, is sponsoring Career Day on March 11, on the second floor of the Student Union.

Some of the events planned include interviews with companies, a luncheon and a series of lectures to upper-division classes by UNLV alumni working in the fields lectured on.

According to Fred Albrecht, Executive Director of Alumni Relations, the company interviews will be open to all students, not just Seniors. "The companies will be set up all morning long," he said. "Any student can talk to these companies."

"These companies will provide career information and explain career opportunities, not just at the time, but also a few years down the road when the people who are not graduating right away."

The luncheon is at 12:15 and features Verne Winchell, the founder of Winchell's Donuts.

Albrecht said tickets for the luncheon will be available in CSUN and the MSU Board offices on a first come, first serve basis.

"If there are any vacancies, students will be allowed into the luncheon on a space-available basis."

Winchell is scheduled to speak on using personal insight in setting self-goals.

Many UNLV graduates will lecture on subjects relating to their fields in front of upper-division classes from March 9-11.

"The speakers will answer questions students may have about all different areas."

While interviews are open during the morning and for two hours in the afternoon, there are some scheduled through the Career Placement Office.

Among the companies participating in the Career Day interviews are Citibank, EG&G, E.F. Hutton, Las Vegas Metro, Nevada Power, and the U.S. Army.

See Tuesday's Yellin' Rebel for a complete listing of the companies who will participate.

Two protesters describe their experiences at the test site

by karen splawn

staff writer

February 5 a protest against nuclear testing was held at the Nevada Test Site. Among those who were there were Jerry Olivarez and Jose Olvera. In this interview, they talked about that days events and their feelings about other issues regarding the peace movement.

Olvera said: "We started out late. We were riding out there; we saw this balloon. We had to go around this patrol block. Just as we were walking up [to the area where the protest was held], four people got arrested. But the authorities let them go.

We filed in with everybody else. People were making speeches ... there was a sagebrush here, a tumbleweed there; kind of a desert motif. Some pretty distinguished people were there—congressmen and women, actors. It was pretty much a media event."

Olivarez said: "A majority of the people who were there were kind of in a time tunnel—deadheads, so to speak. We're not worried about fighting against our image; it's the issue at hand. The general population should take more concern about the issue than the image. If they're worried about what we look like, they don't have a clue.

"We needed to be represented. I not only represent myself, I represent people who couldn't be there. We represented all those people who think we're goofballs. My friend pointed out yesterday that the communist party was there, but there was all kinds of elements there—the CIA, the military, all kinds."

Olvera said: "I consider them [those who oppose peace groups] very ignorant for not wanting a better world, at least for their family. I've actually believed in the peace movement for a long time."

Olivarez said: "If you look at it chronologically, I'm at that age of total annihilation, as opposed to just a [conventional] war. The turning point for me would be displacement in the 80's."

Olvera said: "I just heard that they're taking away the parking permits. We never had them anyway!"

Olivarez said: "If 1500 people went of their way on Thursday to get to the Test Site, 500 people would surely walk three or four miles to get there.

The very first concern of closing down the test site (if it were to happen), would be finding employment for the Test Site employees. The people (protesters) who show up there have concern. There's no reason that people who get paid to test nuclear bombs wouldn't mind getting paid to not test nuclear bombs. We don't plan on just closing the facility down, but putting the facility to a more positive utilization. If they have money to spend on testing, they have money to spend on something else."

Olvera said: "Instead of digging nuke holes, they gotta flip hamburgers! My heart bleeds. They're tempted by the buck."

Olivarez said: "As far as we can tell, the Soviets have held up their end of the bargain (the 18-month moratorium on underground testing.) It's we who haven't abided by it."

Olvera said: "I believe the United State's position is wrong—we're the bad guy in this. They (the Soviets) did the unilateral for a long time, but now the window's been closed, the door's been slammed. Olvera said: "Every stone thrown in the pond makes a ripple."

Without help, an eating disorder can consume your life.

For some people, especially young women, the pressures of living up to what they feel is expected of them can result in serious problems with eating disorders.

Anorexics consume little or no food. In the case of bulimics, rapid consumption of large amounts of food is frequently followed by purging through self-induced vomiting or taking laxatives or diuretics.

Left untreated, 20 percent of the victims of these illnesses will die, usually of cardiac arrest, suicide, infection or starvation. With treatment a complete and often permanent remission is possible.

If you, or someone you love, have an eating disorder, get help now, before it's too late. Call HCA Montevista Centre's Eating Disorders Program at 364-1111.

Tucked away in a corner of the Four Queens Hotel & Casino is the world-famous Ripley's Believe It or Not Museum, which opened here in October 1985.

Robert L. Ripley dedicated his life to collecting artifacts of curiosity from around the world. This latest museum in Las Vegas stands as a educational and entertaining monument to Ripley's work.

The museum features famous and infamous people represented by excellent, life-like wax figures.

Among the people you'll meet include the double-eyed man, the human lamp [A turn-of-the-century Chinese man who lived with a candle in his head], the boy who died of old age [An Englishboy who contacted the aging disease progeria and died in 1836], the human unicorn, the world's tallest man, the skeleton dude-the world's thinnest man and many others.

JUST HANGIN' AROUND—Mandian Indians used to stick hooks in their chests to show how tough they are [including the iron maiden], African and Indian customs [featuring the Okipa, an American Indian ceremony wherein a man would hang himself by leather thongs], and a miniature exhibit featuring eum for a change of pace. The museum is open Sunday through Thursday 9am to midnight and Friday and Saturday till 1am. Admission is $4.95 for adults and $2.50 for children.

Music Etc.

by romney j smith

What is the most successful L.V. concert in recent memory? Well the Beastie Boys of course. What are the chances of the boys returning to Vegas any time soon? Beats the tar out of me, but there is talk of the Beasties opening up for Janet Jackson (along with another as yet unnamed act) on her soon to be launched tour. Will Janet Jackson be performing in L.V.? I can't say, but if she does it looks like the boys will be back.

Bands coming to Las Vegas for sure include Journey, Billy Joel, and U2. Joel will be continuing his tour in support of his latest LP, the bridge appearing at Thomas and Mack in a special Easter Sunday show.

U2 will be appearing later this spring in support of their new album due out late this month. This will be the band's first appearance in Las Vegas. All three shows will be at Thomas and Mack.

On an unrelated note the biggest and funnest party I've been to in quite a while was held this past Saturday at "Head of Tangels". Hosted by the fabulous one.. "Z" the shabang featured just about every scene noteable in attendance (as every self respecting sha bang should.) Providing the music for the evening was the one and only Samson's Army. The band put on a grand show at usual in case you missed it don't dispare because this Saturday night Samson's army will be appearing along with Pablo and his band of madmen... "V.A."

Also on the same bill the return of Guy "Smiley and Triple Ripple" and as if that weren't enough "Abeyance" will also be appearing, four bands, count them will be this spring concert series so don't miss it.

Finally be on the look out for new stuff from the Cult, the Psychedlf Furs and the Quickness all to be reviewed next time around.

Multi-level guitarist comes to Alta Ham Fine Arts

Utah State University guitarist Micheal Christiansen will give a performance at UNLV's Alta Ham Fine Arts Building, Room 132, at 8p.m. March 18.

Christiansen, a long time music faculty member at USU, performs selections from classical, jazz, ragtime, folk and rock styles.

His March 18 guest faculty recital will feature a wide variety of works, including "Prelude In D" by Bach, "Coney Island Cakewalk" by Richard Saslow, "A Natural Thing" by Earl Klugh, and "Both Sides Now" by Joni Mitchell.

He has taught courses in guitar history and literature, guitar pedagogy, fingerboard theory, and all levels of guitar performance.

Also a composer and freelance musician, Christiansen produces and arranges radio jingles and music for television programs and educational films.

General admission to the UNLV recital is $3. Admission for UNLV students, with ID, is $1.

For more information, call the UNLV Music Department at 739-3332.

Student film awards

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced today that April 1, 1987 marks the deadline for the 14th annual Student Film Awards competition, open to all students at accredited U.S. colleges and universities, art and film schools.

The Student Film Awards Program, sponsored by the Academy, provides trophies and cash grants for outstanding filmmaking achievements in four categories: animation, documentary, dramatic and experimental.

Eligible films must be 16mm, 35mm, or 70mm, and have been completed after April 1, 1986 within the course curriculum of an accredited U.S. school.

After the judging in the regional semi-finals, the winning films are sent on to Los Angeles, where they are voted upon by the same active members of the Academy who select the "Oscar" winners at the Academy Awards.

The winning films will be honored by the Academy at a special ceremony June 7 in the Samuel Goldwyn Theater at the Academy's Beverly Hills headquarters.

For more information contact Richard Miller at the Academy Of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, 8949 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, California 90211. Ph. [213] 278-8990.

Rock and Roll on the road

by gary beaudry

Rock and roll on the road is one of the greatest pleasures known to man.

Whether you're cruising the boulevard on a Saturday night or trekking cross-country with nothing but a long, lonesome highway before you, there is a definite need for certain tunes to be coming out of your music box.

So here's a partial list of the greatest cruising songs ever made to take on the road with you.

To start you off, the all-time No.1 cruising song, "Born To Be Wild" by Steppenwolf is an absolute must.

Originally written about a teenager's first car, this 60's classic is so famous for its inclusion in the film Easy Rider that it is now associated with motorcycles.

Of course, most any Beach Boys song about cars will do. But "I Get Around" and "Fun, Fun, Fun" will get you in the mood every time.

If you're planning a road trip, besides the first

Soft rock on the rise

by gary beaudry

entertainment editor

Soft rock was the rage of the early 70's, and after the turbulence of the previous decade most music fans wanted something a little quieter.

Artists like James Taylor, The Carpenters, Paul Simon, The Eagles, Cat Stevens and others were examples of the sounds that ruled the airwaves before the onslaught of disco.

As the rock generation grows older, many stations in Las Vegas see the soft-rock format as a way of reaching the most listeners.

One of them is KLSQ 95.5, which came on the air in October 1986.

General manager Ken Brown says KLSQ is shooting for listeners in the 25-49 age range.

"These are songs that people grew up with," Brown said. But the station is also careful not to use songs that people may get tired of.

KLSQ was born out of research which shows Las Vegas wanted a station which "played good hits" and "wasn't filled with chatter", added Brown.

Brown would also like his station to develop on-air personalities who do not talk over the song.

Brown sees the audience for soft-rock growing, and Las Vegas is the perfect place for it.

"It has the potential to be a major market," he said.

KLSQ airs 24 hours a day and we should see more stations with this format arriving in town.

SAM "THE SCREAMER" KINISON— will perform at Artemus Ham Hall, Saturday, March 14, 7:30.

aid kit and toilet paper here's a list of other essentials to take along: For that free and easy feeling try "Ramblin' Man" by The Allman Brothers.

You could also include any song by The Eagles, especially "Take It Easy" and "Already Gone." John Denver's "Take Me Home, Country Roads" will blend in with the scenery while Willie Nelson's "On The Road Again" will make you feel like a trucker.

Or try "Hitchin' A Ride" by the British band Vanity

Faire, the Rascals immortal classic "Groovin'", and Sammy Johns' story about making put in a "Chevy Van." And finally, to get things alive and kicking, why not blast "We're An American Band" by one of the best bands of the 70's, Grand Funk Railroad.

This song is so charged and full of energy that it will make you break the speed limit time and again. So now that you're set, hit the road, Jack and have a good time.
