Homecoming on the way

In order to make this one of the best Homecoming events ever, CSUN has named a special Homecoming Committee in an effort to optimize communication between all parties involved in planning the event.

The UNLV Homecoming Committee will be chaired by the Dean of Student Services, Dr. Robert Ackerman.

Members include representatives from CSUN, the Alumni Association, and the Athletic Department.

"The object is to get some communication going between us all," said Jimenez, Co-director, Entertainment and Programming. "We've already met about four times last summer and once early this semester and we've come up with a pretty good idea of what we want," he said.

Homecoming will be held November 4-7.

Various activities will be scheduled throughout the week which will include entertainment, bands, food and beverage (sold at cost), contests, tournaments and pep rallies.

The program will conclude with a float parade around the Silver Bowl prior to this year's game against Long Beach State. Homecoming queen finalists will be escorted around the stadium in classic convertibles and election results will be announced at halftime.

A first-time-ever tailgate party will be held before the game in the Silver Bowl parking lot at 4pm. The pre-game pep rally will be held on Friday, November 6, at 12:30pm in the MSU courtyard.

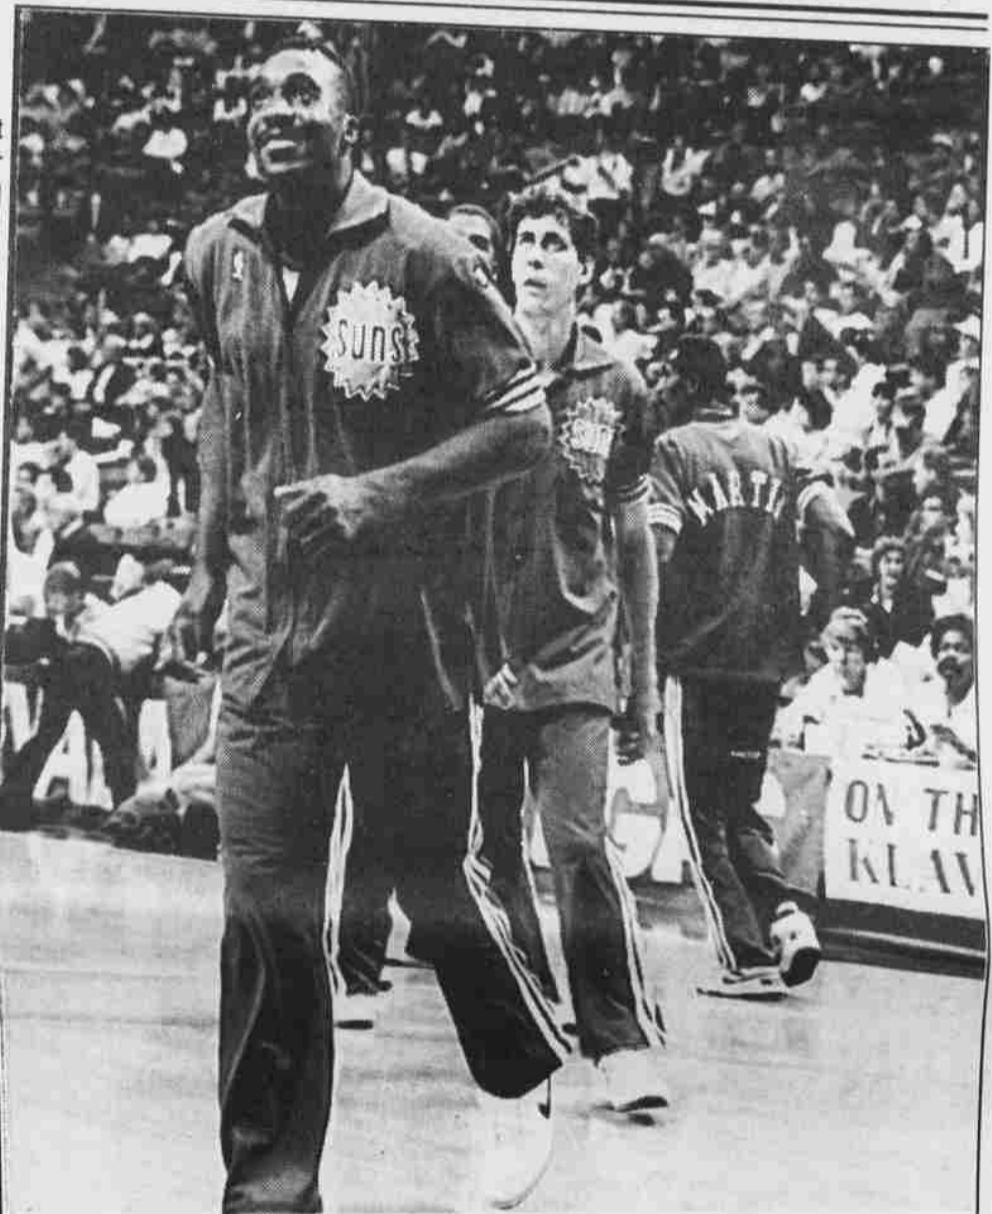

When homecoming was first held during football season, it was celebrated on the football field of Las Vegas High School.

"The difference in Homecoming this year is the organization," Jimenez said. "There's no reason why more people within CSUN cannot get involved in this event, for example, intramurals will be involved this year and will have their own sponsored events."

Jimenez, who also helped organize the recent Oktoberfest celebration, said that event also enabled CSUN to raise sufficient funds to help make Homecoming a success. "It is unfortunate to have violence at any event, but Oktoberfest was a highly successful, synergistic event for the students and overall, people were satisfied and things were positive," he said.

"So far, we've generated about $5,000 from CSUN — sponsored events this year. That, plus the $15,000 in our entertainment budget should help make homecoming really memorable," he said. "We're really working together with everyone else this year to make this happen and to encourage unity. I think it will be a great event."

Gore Sr. talks about son

Former Tennessee Senator Albert Gore Sr., 79, is back on the campaign trail, this time promoting his son's bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Speaking at a reception sponsored by the UNLV Young Democrats, Saturday, the former senator said "he was ready to jump for hallelujah" when his son, Albert Gore Jr., told him he was going to run for president.

Gore told the full house in the MSU fireside lounge that politics and campaigning have changed a great deal since he entered Congress in 1939.

"When I started out, a senator needed $50,000 to campaign, now he needs $5 million," he said.

Then he turned political. "Now more than any time in history, America needs a Democrat," he said, a comment that triggered a standing ovation.

Gore said his son thought that selling 400 TOW missiles to the Ayatollah was a "stupid and horrible thing." Because of Watergate and Vietnam, his son lost interest in politics, Gore said.

Gore Jr. entered divinity school "to get some answers to troublesome questions because of the destruction of life he saw in Vietnam, Gore Sr. said, but after a year of divinity school, Gore Jr. became an investigative reporter for the Tennessean, uncovering political corruption in Nashville he got back into politics to effect change. Gore Jr. was elected to the House of Representatives in 1976 and to the Senate in 1984.

Thefts strike student services

The Office of Student Services was broken into for the second time in six months, according to Dean of Student Services, Robert Ackerman.

The break-in, which occurred over the weekend, resulted in the loss of about $4,000 worth of computer equipment, Ackerman said.

Director of Public Safety David Hollenbeck said he could not be sure if this break-in was related to the rash of break-ins which took place in April, but he did say it was possible.

"Both times it happened, they knew where they were going," Hollenbeck said. "Right now we're trying to narrow down when it could not have happened so that we'll have a pretty good idea of when it did take place."

Hollenbeck said there were apparently two individuals and they did leave some evidence behind. However, he would not comment on the nature of the evidence.

According to Hollenbeck, the burglars forced the lock on the glass doors of the Financial Aid office to gain access to the workroom. Once inside, they pushed away the ceiling tiles, climbed up into the area above the tiles, then made their way to Ackerman's office.
