Administration cancels Spring Break

In an unprecedented move, the UNLV administration led by Dr. Robert Maxson has cancelled Spring Break.

The break, during which students and faculty enjoy a much needed mid-semester rest was cancelled because administration members believe the semesters are not long enough now.

"We decided to cancel the break and extend the semester another month," one administration insider said. "Mainly because we felt like it, and if the students don't like it, well that is just too bad."

Student reaction is mixed, but tends towards apathy.

"So what," one student said.

"Who cares?" said another.

"Why do you bother?"

said one more adding, "you people really don't care either, it just means you have to put out two extra newspapers."

Editor Kurt Hildebrand answered this accusation, saying, "Who says we have to put out two extra issues? I'm going home and having a Break all by my lonesome, so there."

The reaction among faculty is far more vehement than among the students.

"I'm going to string every last one of them up by their gonads and set fire to their blank, then I'm going to blankety blank blank them and blank blank their blank blank blanks."

Needless to say this was an English professor.

A professor in the science department basically said, "we never take breaks anyway, we are attempting to catch up with the Japanese and rebuild the American lead in science and technology over other nations. People who are engaged in rebuilding America's industry cannot afford to take breaks. What?!? You aren't going to use my name with this? Well, who cares about the American lead in technology, I need a tan, and there is too much technology out there anyway. I'm going to the beach and I don't care what anyone says, I'll just call in sick."

As one administrator put it, "Break, we don't need no stinkin' break."

"We get paid whether we're here or not, and I would like to add, that we have to be here while you little helions are out terrorizing small coastal and desert towns. Yeh, that's right! We have to stay here while you rodents are galavanting about the countryside, drinking yellow Mexican beers, pillaging villiages and gang raping coeds in the back or jacked up pick-up trucks paid for by your parents. And I, for one, am sick and tired of it. Watching these kids on the news overturning police cars and all. Well, this year you are going to have to stay here, in school, in class, behaving like human beings. You are going to have to stay here and live out the same old grind, just like us administrators. Yeah, just like the old men. Yeah, we'll see how you like it."

Said administrator will be fine after he gets out of the hospital brain strain ward. He will be in there during what was to be our spring break.

Certain student organizations are banding together to provide students with alternatives to Spring Break next week.

The International Society of Mistits of Science are hosting a mixer during which they will invite a girl and talk to her, anyone interested should find something else to do.

The Psychology Club plans to burn the CSUN Senate in effigy.

The Anarchist's club plans to burn the administration in reality.

And the ROTC crew is going to burn down their own building in celebration of being burned down

FOR THOSE OF YOU WHO ARE STICKING AROUND — Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha. For those of you who are leaving for break, later days amigios.

By the way this is a picture of the First Interstate building Parking lot.

20 years prior somewhere else in the country, where they have a ROTC building.

We have other plans though, the Yellin' Rebel staff plans on going on Spring Break, heh, heh, heh.

Aliens steal Flashlight

by kial kifburger

Witnesses report seeing a large glowing ball lower itself over the flashlight and remove it from the UNLV campus.

University police are puzzled by the theft, claiming the Flashlight never really worked, and that it wouldn't do much good if it did, because you have to be 40 foot tall or larger in order to use it. They announce that no parking citation was issued since the ship never actually landed on university property, and was gone by the time police arrived.

A spokesman for the aliens said they were holding the flashlight for ransom, saying they would exchange it for the clock tower. There has been no official reaction.
