threats of violence to another person or has threatened suicide. If there have been episodes of violence in the relationship previously, or if there is alcohol or drug abuse, these threats should be taken seriously."

Heikkinen agreed that threats of violence should never be shrugged off, especially if the person who makes such threats is a loner, a person who is very dependent on the relationship.

Dean of Students staff and university counselors also offer support in times of crisis. Less than three hours after Sunday night's shooting, half a dozen university counselors and Dean of Students staff members were on campus offering comfort to those affected.

"People who are close to something like this may have many kinds of reactions," Miezio said. "We went out on Sunday night because we believe it's important to tell people who are affected by tragedy that we are sorry and let them know that we want to help."

UW-Madison student Julie A. Charlip was shot outside a private residence hall as she fled from an ex-boyfriend. Counselors immediately went to the young woman's residence hall, her sorority and the hospital.
