Get the facts right

This is in response to the article you printed in the Oct. 20 issue entitled: "Players Arrested." We felt that your facts were far from the truth.

get your facts straight.

Lisa McCormick Raquel Boguill

From a personal point of view, and being close friends with the people involved, we know that gang activity had nothing to do with the arrest.

Sports Editor Andrea Reitan replies: "I appreciate your response to the article. However, I did not feel that I was making accusations, but instead questioning those made against the players.

The true fact was a case of being at the wrong place at the wrong time.

What they do on their own time is their business, but they also have to remember that those actions are a reflection on UNLV. That was the main point I was trying to make in the article."

Whether or not they were 6'1" or 6'8" is irrelevant. The next time you decide to print something that could hurt an individual, you should

Abortion must remain an option

I am very upset about your editorial about abortion. As an older woman myself, I was surprised that you students, who presumably are younger, do not realize how much you have to lose if abortion is restricted by the states.

Instead of coming out for a woman's right to control her own body, you took a very cynical stand when you said that people are going to have to get used to the fact that each state will be having its own restrictions on abortions. How cynical can you be?

It's you college students who have the most to lose. Think about it. You are in your reproductive years right now. You may be able to bear children for another 30 years (if you are 20 now). Will you want yourself, your girlfriend, or your sister to be turned down for an abortion? You'll have the next 30 years to worry about unplanned pregnancies and the consequences!

I read your paper every week, as I am a part-time student. I think you should tell the truth about abortion. It will hurt young people like yourselves more than the old men in the Senate and Congress (not to mention President Bush) who are voting against a woman's right to choose.
