

KUNV goes top forty; mindless disco to be the norm

By Joe Nun's Habit
ILL N' FEEBEL

KUNV, the city's only alternative radio station, has gone top forty, the station's general manager said yesterday.

"We figure, 'Look, why are we spending our time playing music that isn't making a profit, when we could feature mindless garbage and make money instead?'" he asked our smart alec reporter, who isn't bright enough to respond, anyhow.

Instead of featuring the Rock Avenue, Jazz Progressions, important social programs and specialty shows, the station will now broadcast only pretentious crapola pop music manufactured by mindless morons.

"Say 'sooo long sucker' to important bands like the Sugar Cubes, the Chills, the Pixies, Xymox and the Smiths," one of the program directors said. "And say 'hello' to Paula Abdul, Milli Vanill, George Michael, Tiffany, Bon Jovi and every mediocre hack that had a numero uno hit during the rancid 80s! Ah-ha-ha-ha!"

He then laughed so gleefully he dropped dead from exhaustion.

Not everyone, however, is taking the transition so happily.

"I think it sucks," one disk jockey said. "I mean, can you really listen to New Kids On the Block's 'Hangin' Tough' without tearing your hair out? And hey, I just got mine done."

"What's a station without industrial music containing German lyrics no one can understand?" another commented.

One of the station's first changes will be to lower the I.Q. level of each d.j., in accordance with incredible dense-ness of the music.

KUNV will also feature endless, insipid patter, more commercials than a listener can bear, egotistical introductions for d.j.'s and stupid morning shows.

"The more vulgar it is, the better we like it," the traffic manager said. "I can just see it now—'ALL HIT RADIO! ALL THE TIME! NO EXCUSES! NO CHOICE! WE HAVE COME FOR YOUR CHILDREN! Ah-ha-ha-ha!'"

Gamma Lambda Fraternity says, "No way, Jose"

By Stumphany ain't bald yet
ILL N' FEEBEL

UNLV fraternity Gamma Lambda's leaders took a vow of celibacy Wednesday, making their chapter the first on campus to swear off sex.

"I'm sick of it," said the fraternity president Nivir Toobee Leid-Agin. "Frankly, I see sex becoming passe' in the 90s. I wanted to create a trend for others to follow."

Other fraternity officers concurred.

"Sex sucks," said Simon Flyin' Solo, fraternity vice president. "I couldn't wait to burn all my unused condoms."

Current and future pledges of Gamma Lambda will be required to take the vow in order to become full actives in the fraternity.

"No future self-respecting Gamma Lambda would be true to their fraternity without a firm commitment to celibacy," Agin added. "The brothers are quite enthusiastic. They can't wait to delve into other means of pleasure."

Agin declined to elaborate on exactly what sort of means he referred to.

Gamma Lambda pledge brother Louie Lonesome said, "I couldn't wait to dedicate myself to celibacy. Quite honestly I was getting sick and tired of always having the girls I would sleep with tell me, 'Don't worry honey, it is not the size of the ship that counts but the motion of the ocean.' I ask, what the hell does that mean?"

To date no other UNLV fraternity or sorority has considered jumping on the celibacy bandwagon.

One woman who asked not to be identified commented, "I think it is a little peculiar, but I guess it is the safest sex of all."

UNLV priest Father Michael McMurphy said of the celibacy vow, "These boys are good souls, willing to sacrifice their own selfish needs toward a common goal. I commend them."

Gamma Lambda's celibacy clause will be amended into their constitution next week and brothers taking the vow now will swear off sex for their college career, though not all will become permanently dedicated to the celibate lifestyle for the rest of their days.

"I will have no more sex during my college days, but who knows for sure what the future brings or how I might feel after graduation," Agin said.

When asked how his fiancee Losee Lips responded when he told her the news Solo said she was very understanding, adding that she knew it was the life for him and then she said, "Let's just be friends."

Lips could not be reached for comment as she was busy interviewing new potential husband candidates. Anyone interested in contacting her can find her phone number on any number of men's rooms walls.

Gamma Lambda's fraternity a thirty foot replica of the Virgin house, 69 Sexless Lane, will be renovated to include only twin beds, discouraging any mutual sleeping arrangements. Also in the works is wearing a Tee Shirt with the Gamma Lambda Greek letters and the words, no sex in this house.

News in Briefs

37 drown in flush flood by Billy Bob Wiggins
Water swept through the round section of the UNLV library at 9:04 this morning leaving death and destruction in its path.
37 UNLV students majoring in Advance Insanity drowned when "the most water they ever saw" gushed into the library in what can only be explained as awesome.

Two people, Albert and Emily Airhead, were the only survivors of this bizarre incident. "It was as though a giant hand came down on the left side of the rectangular building and seemed to push on the corner of the building," said Albert Airhead. "I was in total shock as the top just lifted off the round building."

"Then all this water, logs and paper started pouring in and swirling, while strange sounds came from the walkway between the two buildings," Emily Airhead said. "People were holding onto the logs for dear life, while being swept into a hole that suddenly appeared on the ground floor in the middle. I was so frightened."

Two months ago of this class library officials the could lead a thing and he was on drugs; no red was last seen holding tightly to a large brown object, covered with what seemed to be tissue paper.

"He told them (library officials) the library buildings joined by a walkway looked just like a commode from the sky, and someday it might be flushed," said Ms. Shit-for Brains, fiancee of the late fortune teller. "No one would listen, no one believed him. He told them "stuff happens", and they called him an ass."
CSUN officials have a meeting April 32 with university Regents to discuss the cancellation of finals examinations due to the unavailability of material and a complete loss of interest by the students. One source, who asked to remain anonymous, described student reaction to this catastrophe as "positively crappy".
