

Fine & Performing Arts Center: Expanding, developing, cultivating

By Angela Desmoni

A large and growing part of UNLV is its Performing Arts Center. The theatrical students and staff have put together a bodacious selection of entertainment.

The Performing Arts Center (PAC) has been in effect since early summer for the '90-'91 school year. There are many plays, art shows, concerts, and dance presentations prepared for audiences of all tastes.

For example, whatever the music preference (classical, opera, jazz, or community concerts), the PAC is the place to consult.

On September 14, the Las Vegas Symphony presents "The Desert Chorale." This will be appearing in the Artemus Ham Concert Hall (HCH) at 8 p.m.

At the UNLV Mall, "Picnic Pops I" can be seen on Sept. 16, followed by "Picnic Pops II" on Sept. 30.

The Music Department is presenting "Men, Music and Muscle" on Sept. 15, then "Sweet Adelines" on Oct. 6. Both will be shown at the HCH.

There are lecture series planned as well. The Barrick Lecture Series will host Ed Bradley on Sept. 13. Three weeks later, on Oct. 2, the Eugene Warner Lecture Series will present a political figure, Edward Koch.

The University Theatre offers much in the way of entertainment. There will be six showings of "Great Expectations" between Sept. 20-Sept. 30 at the Judy Baley Theatre, an original adaptation of the Charles Dickens novel. Check the calendar for specific dates and times. Also, "Toys in the Attic," will show throughout the month of October.

An art exhibit is planned in the Beam Fine Art Gallery, Oct. 8-Nov. 9. Architecture Colloquia V will be displayed by the Art Department on Oct. 12.

Students and senior citizens receive a discounted price on all admissions.

Chen Shu-Gi Tung - A UNLV artist-in-residence is the founding member, choreographer and principle dancer for Cloud Gate Taipei Contemporary Dance Theater in Taiwan. Her background includes over 400 performances and numerous tours in the U.S., Europe and Asia.
