UNLV Debaters take first at Governor's Cup

by Paul Stuhff

As part of a rising tide of victories coming from the UNLV Debate and Forensics Program, debaters Jason Gordon and Jeff Bradley took first place in junior Bradley comments on the fiversity debate at a competition in nal round, Pepperdine was argu-Sacramento, California.

last weekend in the crusty confines of Sacramento County Community College (SCCC). The threeday tournament tried the patience of the Gordon-Bradley team, but, after six preliminary rounds and four out-rounds, their patience was rewarded.

After the preliminary rounds, the UNLV team rose through octafinals, quarterfinals and semifinals, taking on, in arduous seventy-minute long debates, Los Rios Community College, Utah

San Francisco State University.

The Gordon-Bradley Team took on Pepperdine University in emerged No. 1 on a 2-1 vote.

Bradley explained the the final round of competition and tension, "Pepperdine is a damn good team, they had some of the best demeanor I've seen in debaters outside of rounds, and we could tell ing two independent contentions: that we would have to watch ourselves and make sure that we win were discriminatory; second, that by a great enough margin that it doesn't become a dress-demeanor

Gordon noted that "he exected" Pepperdine opponent Dawn Stephan to take at least third place in speaker's points (speakes).

Only four days after Hussein invaded Kuwait, a military coup dismissed her government. A campaign of character assassination took place during which her husband was arrested. On Oct. 24, 1990, an election took place in Pakistan for which the people "turned out by tens of thousands" to support democracy.

However, the military-backed government handily won the election with the help of "six and a half million bogus votes." In spite of this fraud, Bhutto claimed that "the will of the people to achieve a lasting democracy remains

"I have been elected to lead the opposition. I do not know how long this will last," Bhutto said. She continued.

"My husband is to remain in prison so long as I speak out. I will continue to fight for democracy and the rule of law in Pakistan.

"In November 1988 we took two steps forward toward democracy. In 1989 we took one and a half steps back. We are still ahead," Bhutto said.

Bhutto continued and expressed her concerns with regard to Pakistan, South Asia and the world. These matters were political, economic and military and are of vital interest to us all. Her hopes were that these issues could be resolved peacefully through the United Nations.

She specifically indicated concern for the dilemma of the Palestinian people, the dilemma of the people of Kashmir and the dilemma faced by all the peoples of the world concerning nuclear proliferation.

"As a mother, I do not wish for my son to grow up with the threat of nuclear war," Bhutto
