Fellowship aid available for American Indians

The American Indian Graduate Center (AIGC) of Albuquerque, New Mexico, has announced that applications for fellowship grants for the 1991-92 year are now available for American Indian and Alaska native graduate students in all fields of graduate study at the master's, doctorate and professional degree level. To be eligible, a student must be from a federally-recognized tribe, attending an accredited graduate school, and be enrolled as a full-time graduate student.

AIGC fellowship awards are based on a student's unmet need after they have applied for aid at campus financial aid offices. The deadline for the 1991-92 year is June 3. Eligible students must request application packets individually by contacting American Indian Graduate Center, 4520 Montgomery Blvd. NE, Suite 1-B, Albuquerque, NM 87109, (505) 881-4584.

New education secretary

(CPS) - Lamar Alexander Jr., President Bush's nominee for education secretary, finished hearings in front of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Feb. 6, and seemed on his way to approval for the position in the cabinet.

The committee still has to vote to confirm Alexander before the matter goes to the full Senate.

Alexander was governor of Tennessee from 1979 to 1987, and is now president of the University of Tennessee.

If he is confirmed, Alexander will become the fifth head of the 12-year-old U.S. Dept. of Education, which oversees most federal college programs.

At the hearings, Alexander waylaid most of Congress' biggest concerns, saying he intended to rethink the administration's policy condemning minority scholarships as examples of reverse discrimination.

About the only hint of controversy concerned Alexander's ties to Whittle Communications, a Knoxville, Tenn., firm that specializes in selling advertising to firms interested in reaching students.

Most recently Whittle started "Channel One," an educational news program broadcast in schools. Scores of school districts have refused to take the free TV equipment Whittle offered them to run the show, complaining it forces students to watch the commercial embedded in the news programs shown in high school classrooms.

Alexander is currently on the advisory board of the firm, which also packages and sells the "Good Stuff" boxes of product samples left in students' dorm rooms and publishes the Wall Poster Journal tacked up on many campuses.

As governor of Tennessee, Alexander made education a major policy thrust. His "Better Schools" program, outlined in 1983, gave teachers higher pay based on their education levels and performance, expanded basic education curriculum, put computers in junior high schools and added more math and science teachers.
