

Sorority rush 1991

by Tricia Ciaravino

One hundred and fifty women were accepted into sororities this year, about eight percent more than last year. This year marks the largest sorority rush for UNLV.

The reasons for rushing varied. Participants decided to rush because of curiosity, the opportunity to make new friends and to become more involved with the campus.

"I thought it would be interesting to find out what (rush) is all about," said Stephanie Ganes, freshman.

"I thought it would be a good opportunity to meet people," said Erika Mathers, freshman.

One student's mother sent her to rush. "My mom used to be a member of Delta Zeta," said Jocelyn Pursell, freshman.

Randy Sue Smith, vice president of Panhellenic for Membership, said it is important to join a sorority because of the "leadership, academic and social opportunities available on campus. It's a developing and maturing process for young women on campus."

Members in the sororities insist that joining is not buying friends.

"I feel that you get out of it what you put into it," Smith said.

The sisters of UNLV's Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Members of UNLV's Sigma Kappa sorority.

ΣΚ

ZTA

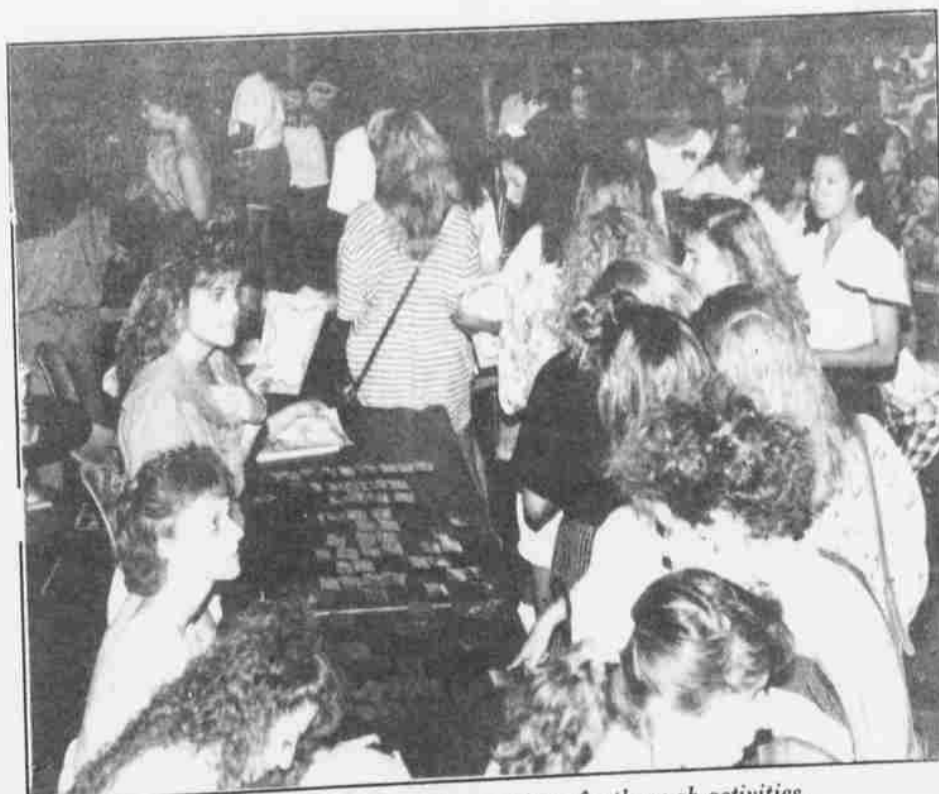

ΔΖ

JayDe Leonard, director of Student Activities (left), informs Dr. Robert Ackerman, vice president for student services, that he is not eligible to join a sorority.

ΑΔΠ

ΑΓΔ

Prospective sorority members register for the rush activities.