

THE NATIONAL COLLEGE NEWSPAPER

By presenting a wide range of opinions and ideas reprinted from hundreds of campus newspapers, we acknowledge the commitment of student journalists across the nation, supported by their media advisers to report the activities, issues and concerns of their fellow students.

CHAIRMAN AND EDITORIAL DIRECTOR
Gayle Morris Sweetland

PRESIDENT AND PUBLISHER
J. Scott Schmidt

MANAGING EDITOR
Mark C. Charnock

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Jacki Hampton

EDITORS ON FELLOWSHIP:
Valerie Loney, Campus Corner, Berry College
J.S. Newton, The Eastern Progress, Eastern Kentucky U.
Ty Wenger, The Lantern, Ohio State U.
Laurel Wissinger, The Breeze, James Madison U.

EDITORIAL ADVISORY COUNCIL

- | | |
|--------------------|--|
| Tom Rohnicki | Executive Director
Associated Collegiate Press |
| Lesley Marzello | College Media Advisers,
The Nicholls Watch , Nicholls State U. |
| Laura Widmer | College Media Advisers
Northwest Missouri State U. |
| Edmund Sullivan | Director, Columbia Scholastic
Press Association, Columbia U. |
| Dr. J. David Reed | Society for Collegiate Journalism
The Daily Eastern News , Eastern Illinois U. |
| Richard C. Lytle | WALPUM
The Daily Texan , U. of Texas, Austin |
| Mona Cravens | Director of Student Publications
Daily Trojan , U. of Southern California |
| Mark Goodman | Executive Director,
Student Press Law Center |
| Jane T. Childress | Director of Student Publications
University Daily , Texas Tech U. |
| Richard Sublette | General Manager
Florida Flambeau , Florida State U. |
| Dr. Les Hyder | Director, Student Media
SMU Daily Campus , Southern Methodist U. |
| Robert Bullard | General Manager
The State News , Michigan State U. |
| Kathy Lawrence | Media Adviser
The Crimson White , U. of Alabama |
| Eric Jacobs | General Manager
The Daily Pennsylvanian , U. of Pennsylvania |
| Dr. David S. Adams | General Manager
Indiana Daily Student , Indiana U. |

OPERATIONS DIRECTOR
Annalee Ryan
Assistant: Kara Keane

CIRCULATION MANAGER
Wendelyn Rea

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Rob Aronson

MARKETING MANAGER
Troy Renneberg

- SALES OFFICES
- CHICAGO: The Guenther Company (312) 670-6809
 - DALLAS: Tierney and Company (214) 960-2883
 - DETROIT: Norma Davis & Associates (313) 647-7911
 - LOS ANGELES: Scott, Marshall, McGinley & Doyle (213) 382-6346
 - NEW YORK: Deanna Cassin, Eastern Advertising Director (212) 980-2800
 - SAN FRANCISCO: Scott, Marshall, McGinley & Doyle (213) 415-421-7950

CLASSIFIED/SPECIAL SECTIONS
Jason Maier, Sam Hamadeh

VICE PRESIDENT/ADMINISTRATION
Darlene Simpkins

CONTROLLER
Virginia Rodriguez

FOUNDER
Albert T. Ehringer

U. is published 10 times a year by American Collegiate Network, 1800 Century Park East, Los Angeles, CA 90067. Tel. (213) 450-2921. Fax (213) 314-7016. Copyright 1991. All rights reserved. Subscriptions $18.

Read the writing on the Ivy-covered walls

By MARK BABINECK
The Daily Texan, U. of Texas

There was once a time when the reason to attend a college or university was clear: an education. Now, that picture has been fuzzed considerably, particularly where athletics are concerned.

When Harvard U. was established 350 years ago, the mission was simple: to educate. Since then, thousands of universities have sprouted up, and for some, their mission has been bastardized by TV revenue and gate receipts.

Yet Harvard and its Ivy League partners have stayed the course. To be on an athletic team, recruits must prove first they are capable of handling the schoolwork. And scholarships granted solely on the basis of athletic ability are non-existent.

The very fact that these schools do not reward athletes with scholarship money makes the feats of some Ivy League sports teams in recent times that much more remarkable. Coach Pete Carril's Princeton basketball team has had an extremely successful run over the past two years, and Harvard hockey coach Ronn Tomassoni led his charges to an unexpected national title in 1989.

While it is nothing more than folly to think that all schools will follow their lead, Ivy League schools should stand firm in this tradition.

But to say that athletic scholarships are evil or even wrong would also be misleading. Giving exceptional athletes the means to gain a higher education is an admirable goal, and many student-athletes succeed after college — and not just in the professional sports or broadcasting field, as is the stereotype.

But when high school students who can barely spell SAT repeatedly take the exam trying to break 700 — and you get 400 for merely signing your name — there is a problem. These students should not be denied a chance at college because their primary and secondary educations were subpar, but they should not be taking spots that otherwise may go to more academically

O. K., that's a parabola, and, by the way... Go get 'em in the second half!

JOE CEPEDA, UNION, CALIFORNIA STATE U., LONG BEACH

qualified applicants.

While the Ivy League provides one extreme with its no-athletic scholarship policy and other schools concentrate more on 40-yard dash times than grade point averages, there are some happy mediums. For example, Rice U. in Houston is the second-smallest Division-I school in the nation, yet the school has managed to compete — if not always win — with the big boys around it.

Listed as the best educational value in America by U.S. News & World Report two years running, Rice is no slouch on the academic side either. Yet the school, arguably the most prestigious academic institution in the Southwest, gives out athletic scholarships.

The difference between Rice and other colleges that offer athletic scholarships is that athletes at Rice must meet the same demanding admission standards as other students.

Seemingly, Rice has found a happy medium by not budging on the quality of its academic program while maintaining a competitive athletic program. The fact remains, however, that even studious Rice sees no problem with spending millions on scholarships for these smart students who also happen to be athletically inclined.

But the presidents of Ivy League institutions long ago decided that they would save the millions of dollars in merit-based awards that otherwise might be granted for touchdowns, home runs, vertical leaps or footspeed.

Rather, their admission policies continue to be based on such novel ideas as grades, test scores, extracurricular activities (including athletics) and just being an overall well-rounded person. And financial aid remains a program to help the economically needy and academically gifted.

As priorities in collegiate athletics continue to waver and change, the Ivy League seems to be a constant. Brown will never have a problem with athletes passing classes under questionable circumstances, Columbia will never be nailed for giving their star point guard a car, and football players at Yale will never be arrested for shooting their roommates.

Yes, the absence of athletic scholarships may be a bit extreme, but so what? No one whines about the millions of dollars allotted to athletics — money that could just as well go to an exceptionally bright writer, a proficient musician, or an eloquent public speaker.

In the Ivy League, it's nice to see schools whose standards remain defined by M.A.s and Ph.D.s, not NBC and ESPN.

U. VIEWS

1-800-662-5511

With AIDS spreading at an alarming rate and fear of the virus being transmitted from health care professionals to their patients, the question of mandatory AIDS testing for doctors and dentists is one frequently raised. Should the results of those tests be shared with patients? Give us a call, and tell us what you think:

Should it be mandatory for patients to be notified if their doctor or dentist tests positive for the HIV virus?

Call our toll-free number today to vote yes or no.

The tricks of treating.