Rodriguez said that there are now condoms on the market that are lubricated with spermicides.

"It is advised that women should use spermicide even if the condom has it," he said.

Spermicide users should not panic because unless there is a history of UTIs in one's family the risk is low.

Hooton advises switching birth control and seeing a doctor for any of the following symptoms: burning or irritation, frequent urination, pain in the lower abdomen or blood in the urine.

One of the best ways to avoid UTIs is to go to the bathroom when there is the need—keeping the bladder empty does a world of good.
