Skirmish allegedly erupts in dorm

by Tricia Ciaravino

Two female students were allegedly assaulted in Residential Life South Building D on Sept. 12. One received visible physical injuries—she reported her head had been slammed into a wall by one of two male suspects.

"Why they got injured we don't positively know yet," said Detective Sgt. Lonnie Barrett.

Barrett said officers encountered a group of students surrounding the scene where the alleged assaults occurred. Barrett said witnesses pointed out two males in the group whom they said were allegedly responsible.

When questioned, Kevin Schanda, 20, former student, and student Lee Azurin, 23, became combative and were arrested for accessory (being in the group) to battery with a deadly weapon (the wall) and obstructing a police officer.

Schanda was also arrested for battery on a police officer. No other members of the group have been arrested as of yet.

"These were incidental charges, because of their attitude," Barrett said. "The two suspects (for the alleged assault) are still outstanding. We have identified three suspects and will be interviewing them. Charges are pending."

Liz Baldizan, assistant to the vice president for Student Services and special assistant for Judicial Affairs, is also investigating the case. However, Baldizan said her main concern is with the female students.

Residential Life Director Terry Piper said he is also conducting an investigation but refused to comment further.

Russell fills Ham Hall with laughter

by Donna Bates

Political satirist, Mark Russell received a standing ovation from a crowd of over 2,000 Tuesday at the Artemus Ham Concert Hall.

Russell performed as he always does, standing at a piano and making light of current political events by telling jokes and singing songs that lampoon the American political scene.

Aware of last year's controversy, Russell came out on stage biting a towel, mimicking former basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian.

Russell dived his barbs between both the presidential contenders, highlighting the foibles of each candidate in turn.

"President Bush said 'read my lips, no new taxes,' he didn't tell us that he would raise the old ones," Russell said.

At one point Russell wondered why Bush didn't kill Saddam when he had the chance. He came to the conclusion that Bush was saving Saddam to help his election effort.

Russell went after the Democrat presidential candidate by pointing out that Bill Clinton's problem wasn't sending troops into combat, just going there himself.

Even the non-candidate Ross Perot was the target of Russell's wit.

Russell said the reason people had put such blind faith in Perot was "because Jim and Tammy Baker are out of work."

Russell ended the show by taking a poll, asking the audience if the election were held tomorrow who they would vote for. The applause was overwhelmingly in Clinton's favor.

Student allegedly kidnapped at gunpoint

by Tricia Ciaravino

On Sept. 11, a male student was allegedly kidnapped at gunpoint near the Sports Pub on Maryland Parkway by two unidentified males who knocked him down, took his money and demanded he take them to his room in Kitty Rodman Residence Hall. The incident occurred at approximately 9:30 p.m.

The assailants stole his roommates' computer and television set, wrapped them in a blanket and left the building.

The attackers struck the victim giving him a head wound.

University Police are investigating the case. Students who have information, or who may have seen two males leaving the building with what Detective Sgt. Lonnie Barrett called "a noticeably weighted blanket," should contact University Police immediately at 739-3668.

Court," Swetnam said. "Normally the Senate approves it. But they have the power to refuse as well."

The information item was shelved and will be brought up at the next meeting as an action item.

Also discussed at yesterday's meeting:

•A resolution supporting University President Robert Maxson's "Year of the Library." The Senate passed the motion with no one against or abstaining.

•A sense of the Senate motion to support a "creativity award." The award would reward outstanding achievements in music, drama and creative writing. It passed with no one against and no abstentions.

•A sense of the Senate motion supporting the Board of Regents' executive committee motion to not issue more rolling contracts to non-tenure professors. The contracts affect some coaches and some part-time teachers mostly at UNR and the community colleges.
