enrollment and a weak economy makes the future appear bleak, Maxson was optimistic.

"The recession is going to end," Maxson said. "I fully expect the state to treat UNLV well."

Maxson also said the drops, as well as projections the university has done for future enrollment, are signs that the school is maturing.

"When you're small the numbers don't have to increase much to look dramatic," said Maxson. "We've grown so rapidly that we've stayed behind in buildings and faculty."

"We've done some projections and enrollment will go up, but not like it has for the last years," Maxson said.

new classrooms, and offices for the marching band.

The theatre arts department gained a new rehearsal hall as well as a 499 seat theater. The addition will be dedicated to Paul Harris, a recently retired professor.

The visual arts department will take over 90 percent of Grant Hall, which formerly housed the dance and theatre arts departments.

Construction began in January on the $4 million, 30,000 square-foot upgrade of the Marjorie Barrick Museum of Natural History. This project is slated for completion in April 1993.

Senator Harry Reid was responsible for raising $3 million in funding for the museum from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Only $1 million of the money needed for the project was supplied by the university.

Dr. Donald Baepler, director of the museum, said the addition will include a four-story addition to be named the Harry Reid Center for Environmental Studies. Offices and research laboratories for archeology, microbiology, analytical chemistry, statistics and modeling will each claim one floor of the building.

On the east side of the museum a separate 160-seat auditorium will be built which will serve as a conference center for the university.

The museum itself will be expanded allowing room for a new animal exhibit, a gift shop, as well as a spacious lobby. A second floor will be added to the existing museum to house offices and meeting rooms.

Dr. Baepler said the next project for the museum will upgrade the existing exhibits.

written recommendation. The MGM will be present at UNLV's Career Day in February for initial interviews.

As for Treasure Island and the Luxor, both currently sponsor internships from the hotel college.

Mirage Resorts Inc., the backing for Treasure Island, will host a interviewing and recruiting session for their management training program on Oct. 22, according to Eileen McGarry, director of Career Planning and Placement. They will be hiring for all three of the Mirage Resort properties, and anyone interested should register with the Career Planning and Placement Office.

Linda Dennis, manager of sales for Circus Circus Inc., the backing behind the Luxor, explained that employment and internship programs will not be in place until approximately six months prior to the Luxor's opening. At that time, the hotel will be in contact with the Career Planning and Placing Office for the Luxor, Circus Circus and the Grand Slam water theme park.
