

Officials consider Ole Miss banning club for hazing

(CPS)—A hazing incident that injured two varsity sports letter winners at the University of Mississippi has caused officials to consider disbanding the club until further notice.

Under investigation is the M Club, a social group of 100 varsity letter winners in the eight male intercollegiate sports offered at Ole Miss.

Junior John Gourley of Philadelphia and sophomore Donovan Bassett of Jackson, Miss., were treated at a local emergency room after being blindfolded with tape while an unidentified liquid was poured over their heads.

Gourley suffered burns on his left ear and cheek, and Bassett suffered second-degree burns on 80 percent of his face.

According to a statement released by the university, 25 of 100 members were involved in the incident.

Officials say the M Club has been repeatedly told that hazing is against school policy and Mississippi law.

"The University of Mississippi is probably more vigilant than most institutions about preventing hazing incidents and works hard to stop them," said Thomas J. Reardon, associate dean of students.

After Reardon's investigation, he recommended the club be banned from the campus.

"We want to send a strong message to all student groups that we won't tolerate hazing on this campus," he said. "I have sent my recommendation to the vice chancellor, and he has taken it into consideration."

Under a 1990 law, first-degree hazing, in which injuries are incurred, is a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail and a $2,000 fine.
