

Three punks bring their Youth Brigade to town

by Tricia Romano

Punk is alive and well, and it descends upon the Calle 8 Club tonight when national artists Youth Brigade and locals MJ-12, A Lesser Dog and Vermin from Venus hit the stage.

Youth Brigade, consisting of the family trio, Shawn, Mark and Adam Stern, are not new to this highly overflooded "alternative" scene. They first formed in 1980, and have since emerged from the L.A. punk scene with yet another record out on their own independent record label, Better Youth Organization.

They have returned after a six-year absence from the band, amidst the formation of The Royal Crown Revue by Shawn and Mark. As the story goes, after one drunken night in a bar in Hamburg, Germany, Mark and Adam convinced their brother to join them once again in making their chaotic noise. The Stern brothers are now out and about on a continuing tour that will take them throughout Europe, including Germany, Sweden, France, Spain and Italy.

Tonight, they land in the plain ol' US of A at the Calle 8.
