1991. "For the 1992 fall semester, we had a 47 percent increase in applications for admissions," Bowles said.

GSA awards $10,000 in research grants each year, although requests for grants totaled $18,000 this year.

"We would close our office and lab to be able to award grants," said Pro. "If we don't have research, it's basically a vocational university."

could swing radically by Congressional election time and this is a major factor the Democrats must consider when voting on the economic plan.

"There is a tremendous wariness (among Democrats) of going for this package," Roberts said. "They are not sure of the philosophy of the package."

But the economic plan could hurt Clinton the most.

"If the package comes to be perceived as another big hunk of government spending and not a big hunk of cuts, this will hurt Clinton," Roberts said.

In addition, the Democrats

In the 1992 fall semester, 32 people shared $5,000 in grants.

Bowles believes university administration, regents and the Legislature need to become aware of GSA's needs. "They need to realize that we're no longer just a baccalaureate-granting institution," she said. "We have 59 degree programs, but we haven't focused on how to provide adequate service for them."

GSA awards four $500 scholarships each year. "There are no state-supported scholarships for graduate students. None. Zero," Bowles said.

must not alienate the middle class, she said. "It took a new kind of Democrat to win the election and the Democrats must keep talking about welfare reform, crime, and the failure of schools to educate."

"Most people don't trust the government to spend money wisely," Roberts said. "And that belief has a strong root in the electorate."

"There is a tremendous distrust of government in general and of the Democratic party in particular—they must overcome this."

Roberts said voters have given the Democrats a shot, although hesitantly and nervously.

"As a country, the people said 'go for it,'" she said. "Now they must come through. They will find out how much they like (accountability) and we will find out how much we like it."

Roberts reports on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," "Nightline," "Good Morning America" and "ABC's World News Tonight." She was the first broadcast journalist to win the highly prestigious Everett McKinley Dirksen Award.

She has been a Congressional correspondent with National Public Radio since 1978 and has been heard on the news magazine "Morning Edition" as well as on "All Things Considered" and "Weekend Edition."
