Spray said. "A lot of people didn't answer the question. I think they didn't bother to read the second page of the survey where the information of Student Government was provided."

Spray was also concerned with the number of students who answered that they do not know who their advisers are on the survey.

"I don't know what we can do to improve the situation," she said, "but at least we know about it. It's important that Student Government find out the quality of education. UNLV is becoming more research oriented. We need to focus on academia."

In all, six votes were voided because the voters were either graduate students or could not be found in the computer list of students.
