for the money because some 22,000 ballots were erroneously printed. A motion for a $1,610 phone line from the Sam Boyd Silver Bowl to the KUNV office drew fire from some senators. The phone line is a project in which student journalists would be allowed to work in the broadcast booth and gain on-air experience at football and basketball games. Sen. Ted Greenhalgh, Science and Mathematics, asked KUNV

Interim Director Suzanne Scott-Weiss, "Why can't you get this okay'ed through the Greenspun Communication School? I know Rob wanted total autonomy from the communications department, but they should cover it."

Sen. Scott Fisher, Business and Economics, added, "There is a commercial station that covers these games, so it's not as if students would not be able to listen to them. How many students benefit? Maybe if there were 100 or 200 students, but I don't think there's enough students for (that many) dollars."

Sen. James Yohe, Business and Economics, disagreed with other members of the Business and Economics delegation and spoke in favor of the appropriation, "I don't think we should micro-manage KUNV. It's not for snout-nose senators to make this choice. For us to do so would be a slap in the face." The motion passed with 11 in favor and five opposed.

Graduation Ceremonies take on a personal touch in '94

BY MELINDA MUIR
SPECIAL TO THE YELL

The May 1994 graduation will bring about some major changes in UNLV's UNLV's commencement exercises, according to Donald E. Schmiedel, chairman of the commencement committee.

Students will be able to attend both a mass university graduation and an individual college recognition ceremony.

On Friday evening, May 13, the commencement committee plans to hold a university convocation. This will include the distinguished Nevada awards, honor doctorates and a distinguished speaker. The degrees will be officially granted in mass, which means that each undergraduate will stand and be declared graduated.

The next day, each college will be responsible for an individual ceremony. Individuals will be recognized and march across the stage to get the diplomas. Each college is responsible for planning its individual ceremony, so activities will vary.

Schmiedel said that the purpose of the individual college ceremony is to have a more intimate observance. The old format was impersonal and not very interesting. He said that most colleges will follow their ceremony with a reception, which is an opportunity for people to talk and congratulate each other.

The commencement committee plans to assign the graduation locations by the college size. The Thomas and Mack Center will host the ceremonies for the four largest colleges: Education, Liberal Arts, Business and Economics, and Hotel. Health Sciences, Science and Math, Engineering and Communications will hold their ceremonies in Artemus Ham Hall. Human Performance and Development and Fine and Performing Arts will graduate in the Judy Bayley Theater. Each individual college ceremony will be staged at different times throughout the day.

"The problem is that we have outgrown the T & M as far as space on the floor and time available," said Schmiedel. "As of right now, it is anticipated that admission will be open without any restriction to all ceremonies. We are sure we will have enough room for all ceremonies without restricting attendance with tickets."

Schmiedel said there has been a lot of enthusiasm on the part of the faculty and students that he's talked to about this format. It is more personal and graduates get to be with their classmates.

"I think this is a good idea," said Nick Holmberg, a senior majoring in electrical engineering. "Basically, people don't want to go to hear names of people read that they don't know. Students can get more recognition within the department where they wouldn't have time for that in a regular graduation ceremony."

There are no immediate plans for a December graduation, according to Schmiedel. There will probably be one in the future. December graduates are invited to participate in next May's commencement exercises.

"Being a December graduate, I don't know if I'll be staying around until May," stated Julie Wolf, a senior communications major. "But I think this new process will be more efficient. In the past...everyone has complained about the length of the ceremony. I think this will be a much more private affair for each college..."

Schmiedel said that a hotel college recognition ceremony last May was a success, and it showed that this type of format could be done. The commencement format to be implemented is the one followed at the University of Idaho. He said that he wanted graduation to be thought of as commencement weekend, rather than everyone scattering immediately after the mass ceremony.

The commencement committee is made up of a coordinator from each college and the different areas around the university. The committee serves as the coordinator and facilitator for the mass university convocation.

To remove any organization, Marshall said, it only takes a motion from the board and two-thirds of the Organizations Board voting body, which is made up of one representative from each recognized student organization.

The movement to remove Campus Advance came after the group refused to speak on its own behalf when questions were raised at a Sept. 16 Organizations Board meeting.

The motion to remove, which was brought on by Sean Roach of American Marketing Association at that meeting, was introduced at the Sept. 30 meeting to be voted on in two weeks, Marshall said.

Campus Advance, originally named Upside Down Club, was recognized by CSUN in October 1992. At that time, the organization never included its affiliation with the Boston Church of Christ or any other national group in its constitution which is filed with Student Government, according to Marshall.

DOE Seeks Community Advisory Board Member Nominations

The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) is seeking nominees for membership to a Community Advisory Board. This board will provide recommendations and advice to DOE throughout the decision-making process relating to the environmental restoration and waste management program in Nevada. The board will be comprised of local citizens, government officials, Native Americans, and interest group and organization representatives.

A draft charter for this group has been developed by a working group of concerned citizens in cooperation with the state of Nevada and DOE. If you are interested in becoming a member, DOE must receive a completed application by November 3, 1993. For more information about the formal nomination process, please contact:
