Confessions

from pg. 7

There are so many good stories people tell that don't come in the form of a book weighing ten pounds, or don't cost $7.50 and appear on a big screen. Some of the best stories cost about $2.00 and can be read in about 15 minutes and be put in your desk drawer when you're done, to be taken out later and re-examined.

Maybe someday they'll be used to keep your kids quiet during a night out.

Everything shouldn't be about money, and I have to admit comics are part of the set including "everything." Some things should be appreciated for what they are, no more and no less.

The most important part of comics collecting is that the only truly valuable book is one that is read.

Now, where is that price guide? I have to see how my Superman #51 is doing.
