Part Of What Makes UNLV A National Flagship University

Higher Learning

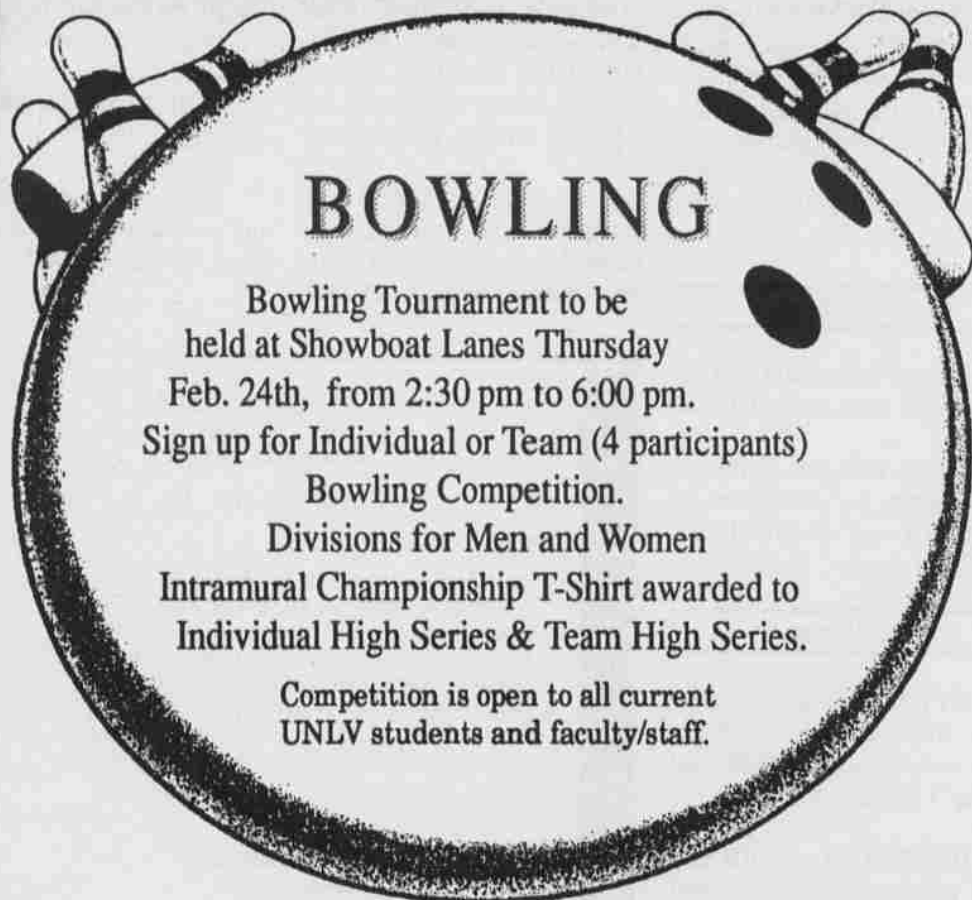

Graduate education at UNLV is the next logical step for people who have earned bachelor's degrees. It is taking a good thing and making it better. It is education at a higher level. One out of five students at UNLV — 3,700 in all — is enrolled in one of the university's 90 master's or 10 doctoral programs in such areas as business, education, the arts and sciences, hotel administration, engineering, and the humanities. At UNLV, graduate education and research go hand in hand. They provide the arena for discovery and the enhancement of knowledge. In fact, research by graduate students and faculty contribute to the quality of the social, economic, cultural, and ecological life of Nevada, the United States, and the world. The Graduate College. One reason UNLV is a National Flagship University. For more information, call 895-3011 or 800-334-UNLV.
