UNLV Contributes to 150th Celebration of New York Life

Students honored for their music

The New York Life Insurance Company has contributed $10,000 to the UNLV music department for its assistance in developing a musical piece for the company's 150th anniversary celebration this year. Two UNLV music students were awarded prizes for their compositions in the musical competition.

Jie Bu, a graduate student in composition, won $1,000 and a trip to the celebration in New York for his contribution to "Sesquicentennial Suite," an original musical composition consisting of eight movements, each representing a New York Life value. He based his movement on the New York Life's value of personal and professional growth. Eric Whitacre, a senior music major, won the $500 second place. The July celebration will culminate in a star-studded gala at Madison Square Garden for its agents and employees. The suite, prepared by eight leading music schools, will be performed by a live orchestra during the festivities.

Other schools that contributed to the music for the suite include UCLA, the Juilliard School, the Royal Academy of Music in London, Middle Tennessee State University at Murfreesboro, the University of Indiana, Carnegie Mellon University and the Manhattan School of Music.
