 organizations on this campus as of the end of the Spring semester. Five hundred dollars is given to each of these organizations. The Greeks get the same amount as the other organizations," said Cole. "(The) Ways and Means (Committee) oversees expenditures and makes the budget."

CSUN representatives maintain that they are acting in the best interest of the entire student body, despite the continuous controversy surrounding the issue of whether or not a Greek influence is present within the student government.

Says Joe Mills, "I feel that being Greek or being non-Greek is a personal choice. I feel that, being involved in student government, one should try their best to represent the constituents regardless of whether they're Greek or non-Greek."

"I believe in what CSUN stands for," Organization Board Director Toby Cole, said with confidence. "This office, this year, is the best team you will find."
