performances and have to pay the $2 to park after they've already paid for four years of college.

The change shows some flexibility in the system, that everything's not etched in stone. I think that's healthy."

Dr. Robert Ackerman, vice president for student services, said, "Clearly, we don't yet have a cost-effective way to collect a parking fee at night. We are looking into ways to do that, but until we develop an appropriate system, we will defer enforcement of the parking fee at night and on the weekends."

Jennifer Cambel, a marketing associate for Bally Gaming, is affected by this decision.

"I love to attend many of the events the campus hosts. It will be nice to park my car there, free of hassle for a change."

President Harter said, "It is in the evenings and on the weekends that the university's friends in the community come to the campus to enjoy music, theater, and dance performances, or to attend lectures and meetings. We believe these modifications in the new parking fee policy will address the concerns of those who wish to take advantage of our many public cultural and educational programs."

Parking permit theft on the rise

BY BROOK BRAYMAN
STAFF WRITER

During the first two weeks of school 14 UNLV parking permits were stolen from vehicles parked on campus.

The Public Safety Department is taking the matter seriously. "We're going to nail these guys," said Kelly Stuehling, management assistant at Public Safety.

The overwhelming majority of stolen permits are taken from vehicles that are unlocked or have their windows rolled down. According to Stuehling, there doesn't seem to be any organized group that is responsible for the thefts.

"The permits are usually stolen by the average person who sees an easy opportunity and thinks, 'If I take that, I won't have to pay for parking,'" Stuehling said. A person caught stealing a permit is subject to criminal prosecution, a parking citation and could have their vehicle towed at the owner's expense. Thieves are also subject to a possession of stolen property charge.

Public Safety urges students and faculty to report stolen permits immediately. The sooner the department places the permit on its list of stolen permits, the sooner they can be on the lookout for the permit.

The replacement fee for a stolen permit is $5, which covers the administrative and printing costs to reissue a permit.

For questions about reporting a theft, obtaining a replacement permit or reporting someone who is in possession of a stolen permit call the Public Safety Department at 895-3668.

enforced at all hours, seven days a week.

Metered parking for visitors is available at several locations on campus, in addition to a pay lot in front of the Richard Tam Alumni Center on Maryland Parkway. The Green Lot of the Thomas and Mack Center has spaces available where visitors can park free of charge at all times.

News Briefs

Poetry contest announced

A deadline of Sept. 30 has been set for this year's North American Poetry Contest, with cash prizes totalling $24,000 to be awarded to more than 250 poets.

There is no entry fee for the contest, and each poem has a chance to be published in a hardbound anthology. Poems may be on any subject and in any style, and should be no more than 20 lines. The poet's name should appear at the top of the submission.

To enter, send one original poem to The National Library of Poetry, 11419 Cronridge Dr., P.O. Box 704-1985, Owings Mills, MD, 21117. Entries must be postmarked by Sept. 30. A new contest will open on Oct. 1.

The National Library of Poetry, founded in 1982, is the largest poetry organization in the world.

Architecture symposium at UNLV

UNLV will hold a week-long free architecture symposium on the university campus and other Southern Nevada locations beginning Sept. 30.

The symposium, titled "Urban Theatre: A New Urban Paradigm Rising in Las Vegas?", will gather together architects, artists, politicians, educators and others to discuss emerging trends in the architecture and marketing of Las Vegas resorts.

The event will be an opportunity for Las Vegas architecture to be considered as a model for other cities, according to symposium organizers and UNLV architecture professors Richard Beckman and Eric Strain.

"The urban scene here is changing. Many attractions are moving outside," Beckman said, citing the Treasure Island's pirate battle attraction.

Presenters will include Steven Izenour, co-author of "Learning from Las Vegas"; Joel Bergman, an architect behind a number of Las Vegas resorts; and Alan Hess, architect and author of "Viva Las Vegas".

Architecture students who have participated in a design-studio project will attend the symposium.

Reservations are required and seating is limited. Preference will be given to those who purchase $50 tickets for an Oct. 1 banquet. The symposium will be presented by UNLV College of Architecture, Construction Management and Planning.

The event is sponsored by the Nevada State Council on The Arts, the Las Vegas and Reno chapters of the American Institute of Architects and the City of Las Vegas.

For more information and reservations, call 895-3031.

Interactive video presentation

A presentation on interactive video teaching will be held from 1-2:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in the Classroom Building Complex, Room C145.

"Distance Education and Interactive Video Classes," taught by Dean Guy Bailey, will include how to plan interactive-video classes and how to prepare students for interactive-video discussions.

For more information, call 895-1021.

an inspirational person.

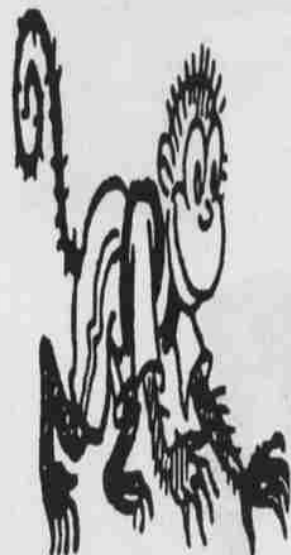

"He was an all-around good guy," Gulbransen said. "He was a very intelligent person and knew exactly what he wanted to do. He had a knack for the media relations business and people gravitated towards him because of his personality."

Gulbransen said that if he was having a bad day, Brewer would help cheer him up.

"He was always smiling," Gulbransen said. "If I ever had a problem he was always eager to help."

A memorial service is scheduled for Friday in Denver, according to Mark Wallington, football sports information director.
