'Misanthrope' opens tonight at Judy Bayley

Moliere's "The Misanthrope" opens University Theatre's 95-96 theater season tonight at 8 p.m. in the Judy Bayley Theatre.

Directed by Michael Luger, this classic 17th century French comedy is a piece that portrays French society of the period as extremely elegant, formal, and mannered. The superficial elegance of the verse reflects the contrived manners of society: One that is polished, artificial, and ritualistic.

Alceste, the hero of the play, is disgusted with society, corruption, and his two-faced friends. Celimene, whom Alceste loves, is the epitome of all that disgusts him, but her smiles and praises, (two-faced as they are) entrance him.

A love triangle evolves as Alceste falls in love with Celimene, the one who is not interested in being faithful to him, yet shuns Eliante, a woman that would be better suited for him.

Joel Babbitt plays Alceste and Curtis C. performs the role of his friend Philinte. The role of Celimene is played by Michell Caudel and Eliante is performed by Kelly Roth.

Addition cast members include Jason Johnson, Kathryn Ambler, Michael Serna, Glenn Peters, Greg Gaskill, Alister Logan, and Brian Anderson.

The set is designed by Kris Van Riper and costumes are by Gail Lehtinen with lights by Brackley Frayer.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Sept. 28-30, and Oct. 4-7, with matinees at 2 p.m. Oct. 1 and 8. General admission is eight dollars. There are special discounts for students, seniors, handicapped, and military personnel.

For more information, call the Performing Arts box office at 895-3801.

SNOOZE

You slept through morning classes. And now you're gonna blow off the afternoon. The sad thing is, your parents have no clue. They think you're working hard. They're convinced you're busting your butt. They're so damn proud. If only they could see you now. Lying there like a lump. Suddenly guilt sets in. You feel so low. Quickly, you reach for the phone and surprise the folks with a call. Abahh, now you can sleep in peace.
