

Golf gets top ranking in polls

Second time in two years

After winning the William H. Tucker New Mexico State Golf Tournament, the UNLV golf team found themselves on top of the college golf polls.

The Rebels were ranked No. 1 Tuesday, by the Men's Rolex Team Rankings. It is the second time in UNLV golf history that the Rebels grabbed the top notch. The last time the Rebels were ranked No. 1 was Oct. 3, 1993, when the team was led by Ed Fryatt.

UNLV started the week ranked No. 2, behind Oklahoma State University. They finished second in the Ping/Golfweek Preview tournament on Sept. 15., a match the Rebels played without Chris Riley. They won the William H. Tucker tournament, played last weekend, by 20 strokes.

Two points separated the top three teams in the poll, with the Rebels getting 73 votes, Texas was second with 72 and last season's NCAA Champion Oklahoma State received 71 first place votes. The Rebels were ranked second by Golfweek in last week's rankings. The next poll will be released on Oct. 18.

In the competition to determine the nation's best individual golfer, Chris Riley is second to Tiger Woods of Stanford. Both golfers were on the Walker Cup team that travelled to Wales for a two-week stint in early September.

The Rolex rankings are based on results from the Rolex Collegiate Tour and are administered by the College Golf Foundation. The foundation is a non-profit organization founded with the corporate support of Rolex Watch U.S., and works for the growth and promotion of collegiate golf.

Gilmore

The game day experience and the love of football are the driving forces behind Gilmore.

"I love the game of football," he said. "On game day I get really pumped up, especially in an atmosphere like we were in Saturday at ISU. It gets me fired up inside-I want to go out there and help the team any way I can."

Horton points to Gilmore's work ethic as the key to his success.

"His attitude and desire are among the best on the team," Horton said. "He shows that if you work hard enough you will make it. He will have a chance to be productive at receiver this season."
