

Professor's art exhibit opens on campus

The UNLV Marjorie Barrick Museum of Natural History presents new works by art department professor Bill Leaf, also known as Yehp Yueon Gayh. A public reception from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. kicks off the exhibit's Oct. 13 opening.

In creating this series of work, Gayh has synthesized Chinese magic diagrams into a contemporary art context. Some of these diagrams date back 3,500 years.

"The black on black calligraphy is synonymous with stream of consciousness automatic writing. Many of the symbols portrayed are universal to all cultures such as the circle, spirit, and infinity sign. In that respect, although the work is ethically derived, the visual content may be interpreted by all," Gayh said, describing one of his works.

Gayh is interested in Taoist alchemy. As an example, he is fascinated with the Taoist interest in creating the elixir of immortality, or turning base metal into gold which predates the western mediaeval alchemists by about 1,000 years.

The scrolls, some of which measure 18 feet long, are horizontal with two to five inset paintings.

"The juxtaposition of these images creates a curious and fascinating dialogue. There definitely is a visible yin and yang dynamism," Gayh explained.

Born in Guangdong Province in China, Gayh came to the U.S. in 1948. He received his M.F.A. degree from the University of California, Davis and has been a professor at UNLV since 1973.

The museum is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m., and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Admission is free. For more information, call 895-3381.

work and feature films, he is confident that he could complete the film independently for under $10,000. With the help of students and other faculty members, Barnas has hopes of getting it underway next summer. A low-budget production of the screenplay might add to its B-movie charm.

Geared mainly to the college crowd, The Monster Movie is a comedy as black as night. "Monty Python-like humor," as Barnas likes to call it, rolls through the script.

It's bloody, funny and looks promising enough to be worthy of the price of admission, once it is produced.

Pauly, Sammy Shore to perform at Riviera

Father and son comedians Pauly and Sammy Shore will perform Oct. 6-8 at the Riviera Comedy Club.

The three-night engagement in Las Vegas coincides with Pauly Shore's home video release of Jury Duty, and the January, 1996 release of Biodome, costarring Kylie Minogue. His most recent hits include Encino Man, Son in Law and In the Army Now.

Pauly Shore's career started in the early '90s when he starred in such cable shows as MTV's Totally Pauly and HBO's one-hour special, Pauly Does Dallas.

He is also known for his performance albums, The Future of America, which earned him the 1991 College Music Journalists Best Comedy Album, and Scraps from the Future, which was nominated for the Best Sellers Award by the National Association of Record Merchandisers.

His father, Sammy, is a veteran in the comedy business.

Tickets for the performances are $25 plus taxes. The show is restricted to persons 18 years and older. For more information or reservations, call the Riviera box office at 794-9433.
