

Talk

from pg. 9
progress offensively and on the transition game. Bayno has said that this team is not bad offensively, but must turn their game around on the defensive side.

It has been tough for the Rebels to start practicing with a level of consistency when proposed starters fall to injuries. Players like sophomore center Eric Lee, Jermaine Smith and Damian Smith are all either out with injuries or playing through them.

Lee saw some time at center during the scrimmage and put away four points before coming out early in the first half when the back started to hinder him. Jermaine Smith has been playing through a knee injury and Damian Smith recently had arthroscopic knee surgery to take out some cartilage. Doctors also found a chipped bone.

For Damian Smith, this is his fourth year as a Rebel, and was slated as the starting guard for the Rebels.

"This puts a big damper on this season for me," Smith said while sitting back with a large ice pack on his knee. "But I'll just take it one game at a time. I should be ready in a couple weeks. By the Loyola (Marymount) for sure."

UNLV opens its preseason against Marathon on Thursday at the Thomas & Mack Center at 8:05 p.m., and Bayno still has concerns over how well this team will do.

"We could be in trouble," Bayno said.

Where are they now

Have you ever wondered what former Rebel athletes have been doing? Well, there is a way to find out. Sports Writer Ray Brewer will dedicate his spot in every Thursday issue to that Rebel you admire in his new column, "Where are they now?"

The athlete can be male or female, doesn't have to be in the record books, and may have played any sport at UNLV. The only restriction is the athlete cannot be a current athlete, we are looking for past athletes.

Please send us suggestions on which ex-Rebels you want to read about:
