

COLD ATOMS TO BE LECTURE TOPIC

The Spring 1998 UNLV University Forum lecture series concludes this month with a presentation on developments in cold atom technology.

On April 27, "What's Hot with Cold Atoms" will be the UNLV physics professor Bernard Zygelman's topic of discussion as he reviews recent progress on efforts to produce ultra-cold atoms in the laboratory.

In a presentation geared to the layperson, Zygelman will demonstrate how current developments may play a role in spawning novel technology, such as the matter laser and quantum computers.

All University Forum lecture series are free and open to the public. The lecture is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of UNLV's Marjorie Barrick Museum of Natural History.

The University Forum lecture series is sponsored by the College of Liberal Arts and underwritten by the UNLV Foundation. For additional information on the series, call 895-3401.

1998 HONORS CONVOCATION TO BE HELD APRIL 28

Approximately 1,000 students and 40 faculty members will be recognized for their academic achievements during the 1998 Honors Convocation, to be held at 10 a.m. April 28 in the Artemus W. Ham Concert Hall.

The awards ceremony is expected to last about an hour and a half and will include an address by Martha Watson, dean of UNLV's Greenspun College of Urban Affairs. A reception honoring student and faculty award recipients, their families and scholarship donors will be held immediately after the convocation in the Performing Arts Center courtyard, just outside the concert hall.

For additional information, contact Andy Fry, executive assistant to the president and this year's convocation coordinator, at 895-3270.

ETHNIC STUDENT COUNCIL BANQUET SET FOR APRIL 29

The UNLV Ethnic Student Council will hold an installation and awards banquet April 29.

The event will take place at 6 p.m. in the Tam Alumni Grand Ballroom.

The council serves as an umbrella organization for other student organizations. Previously the student organizations that participated in Ethnic Student Council were those organizations that served traditionally underrepresented populations. This year the council has grown to include organizations that serve a more traditionally mainstream group of students. They are dedicated to creating just and inclusive environments.

Students who are not a part of an organization that falls under the umbrella of ESC are also encouraged to participate. They have general membership as well as organizational membership and all membership is open to everyone.

The newly elected leaders of the organizations will be recognized at the banquet. Additionally, student leaders from this year will be honored for their outstanding programming.

For more information, call Mateo Nares or Sherry Gilbert at 895-4165.

PANEL DISCUSSION ON ETHICAL ISSUES IN THE WORKPLACE COMES TO UNLV

Public relations and media professionals will meet to discuss ethics in the workplace at a panel discussion at UNLV on April 28.

The event, scheduled for 7-8:30 p.m. in the Moyer Student Ballroom, involves panel members fielding questions about ethical dilemmas based on hypothetical cases.

UNLV students and others who attend will learn about ethical issues encountered in the workplace and the major role ethics play in a daily business conduct.

The panel members include public affairs for Mirage Resorts; Brian Greenspun, president and editor of the Las Vegas Sun; Emily Neilson, news director for KLAS-TV 8; Jon Ralston, editor of The Ralston Report political newsletter; Charlie Zobell, managing editor of the Las Vegas Review-Journal and Linda Bell, an attorney with the public defenders office.

UNLV ethics and policy studies director Craig Walton will serve as moderator.

In the last half hour of the event, the panel members will field questions from the audience based on the issues being discussed.

The event, which is free and open to the public, has been organized by two UNLV communication students, Rebecca Cecil and Dalicia Ramey, and is sponsored by the Hank Greenspun School of Communication.

For additional information, call Cecil at 661-7125, Ramey at 678-3330 or associate professor Gage Chapel at 895-1333.
