

College of Education salaries revisited

The Rebel Yell

Due to an editing error, the faculty salaries from the College of Education were not completed earlier in the semester. Today, the college's entire salary list will be printed.

As with the entire faculty salary series, the listed salary is the professor's regular salary for the 1997-98 academic year. Other forms of compensation, such as bonuses and grants, and non-cash compensation are not included in the listed salary. Also, some salaries may be different than what is listed, because they were not in their listed position for the entire year.

Final Exam

After you graduate from college do you...

- hang out with cool people?
- look for a way to use your personal skills?
- start a serious career?
- work someplace that's actually fun?

e. All of the above

MacRorie also said that he was happy that tickets weren't required this year to attend the ceremony.

"I like the open seating policy," he said. "I remember when a buddy of mine graduated in the past and he only got about four tickets, so you had to do a lot of bartering for tickets back then."

Understandably, MacRorie is looking forward to the ceremony.

"I'm really excited about graduating. It has been along and arduous journey."

Another soon-to-be graduate, psychology major Lori Klabacha, said that she is still getting used to the idea of being a college graduate, a goal she was never sure she would accomplish.

"Personally, I never thought that I would get to this point," she said. "So, I am really thrilled."

Klabacha added that she especially liked the idea of the two separate graduation ceremonies.

"It is so everyone won't be crowded in together."

During the ceremony, the Distinguished Nevadan Award will be presented. This year's recipients will be community activist Ruby Duncan; local businessman Wing Fong and his wife, former Regent Lily Fong; Nevada First Lady Sandy Miller; Vega Enterprise owner Ray Vega; and Melvin Wolzinger, president of and CEO of Alstate Enterprises.

The president and CEO of the Howard Hughes Corporation, John Goolsby, will receive an honorary doctor of law degree. Architectural designers Robert Venturi and Denise Scott Brown will receive honorary doctors of letters degrees, while prominent local businesswoman and leading UNLV supporter Kitty Rodman will be honored with the President's Medal.
