HOME HARRY

Dear Jack:
Your column on Hospital Harry was delightful. In your usual form, your writing followed a natural flow of thought - nothing "Contrived" with great tag lines as real as rain. Thank you for the cheer it brought us and I'm happy to report that you can change the banner to "Home Harry." With the kindest regards to Bea of your hive, I am,
Sincerely,
Kay

papers about an honour concert, or even hear a whisper of same, drop everything and go, for the gratification one gets and gives is worth more than words can tell.

Last week saw a really friendly and Hamish Bar Mitzvah, with all of the 200 and more guests present, enjoying to the full, the joy derived from Bobby (Robert) and his family Bea and Mike Katz. The buffet, handled by the Dvoraks, was excellent, the singing, led by the Rabbi was out of this world, and the overall feeling was one of complete satisfaction. The hall was bedecked with traditional blue and white, and the place wore a festive and happy air. Many years of Nachus and joy to you all, and let me have the pleasure of helping again when the next one come around.

At time of writing the Bar Mitzvah of Barry Katz has taken place, and an elegant affair it proved to be. Barry is to be commended from all points, he rendered his Maf-tir, and portion of the Scrolls admirably, and there were few dry eyes when he was addressed both by his father, Lloyd, and his grandfather, now in his 87th year, God Bless him. May the Katz's

Born in 1943 in New York City, Marilyn is the daughter of Fraydele Oysher and the niece of the late Cantor Moishe Oysher, two of the Yiddish theater's greatest stars. Marilyn has appeared frequently on network shows but the big push is now on.

EDDIE CANTOR'S Beverly Hills home has been sold for $112,000. Cantor died Oct. 10 leaving his property, not fully appraised, to his four daughters.

LOOK FOR a new B'nai B'rith Lodge here to be named the Eddie Cantor Lodge.

HAVE YOU recovered as yet from the television showing of the English version of "Oliver Twist" with Alec Guinness playing one of the most damaging Fagan's ever seen anywhere? And thank heaven for the innocent Fagan played by Clive Merrill in the musical "Oliver!"

live together to share many more years of joy and Nachus. Truly this month will be a joyful one, for this coming weekend, Belah Locka, the attractive teacher from the Temple, will take her Marriage vows to Stan Sperling, brother of Edythe Katz, and mother of Barry.

Sisterhood are also well under way with their plans for their donors, and if I know Ruth Speiser, and her committee, it will be well worth working for.

Valentines Day this year, was a happy occasion for the members of the Archie Grant Senior Citizens group, for the B'nai B'rith and the National Council of Jewish Women feted them to a Valentines Party. To say that the old folk send their thanks is only conveying mildly their feelings, but it is a simcha and a Mitzvah to be allowed to work with them, and the council of service leagues that are on this project, headed by our won Eileen Brookman.

Grandpa Dase back in the field, and he couldn't even wait the full time of vacation, rushed back early, so as to be able to enjoy the Bar Mitzvah of Barry Katz, and the swing of his own family brood, seems that the noise of home, is sweeter than the call of the grandchildren, however much one loves them. Welcome back Pop, we missed you.

So very sorry to hear of the untimely passing of the tiny grandson of Mr. & Mrs. Barney Ostrofsky. May God grant you and yours no more tragedy in your lives, and may His hand stretch out to you in your sorrow.

Sam Dvorak is no longer at Food Fair (Market Town) and wishes to thank all his many friends and customers for their patronage in the past. He still will continue to cater for Bar Mitzvahs and other affairs, both at the Temple, and outside. We have not lost him-for he will be with the Las Vegas community for many many years to come.

Had the good fortune of sitting in on the Rabbi's address to the B.B.G. girls and the A.Z.A. group this past Wednesday, his topic was "Inter-dating", a more than appropriate subject. The reaction of the youngsters was rewarding, for their questions were of the brightest, and the answers were as wise. The subject matter is something that should be an open discussion from the time a child is permissible and at what age. I personally would suggest that if any parents are in doubt as to what is the correct approach on this matter, and how they can get closer with their offspring, they could get some great tips from Rabbi Gold.

Barney Glazer's Hollywood

Hollywood, Calif. - Mrs. Joseph Schildkraut presented to the library of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences all the historical material in her possession concerning both her late husband and his father, Rudolf. The voluminous files include an incomparable record of more than 60 years of theatrical and motion picture experience.

Recently, Mrs. Schildkraut donated to the New York City Museum the original costumes worn by her late husband in his stage success "Lillom" in which he starred on Broadway in 1921.

The late Mr. Schildkraut may be seen in his final role in George Stevens' "The Greatest Story Ever Told," previewed here this week for the press.

Not once does the film mention the word "Jew" and it comfortably evades any scene that might lend itself to deicide. However, it takes such license with the New Testament that a Catholic news correspondent seated next to me finally leaned over and said, "Well, it looks like Hollywood has written its own script again."

He groaned audibly with each change noted, especially when Judas accepted the silver pieces and said, "But I don't want them" and when a member of the cast said he had seen Jesus walk upon the water and when Jesus himself made claims of his own deity. Aside from such criticism, the film does have considerable merit for viewing including magnificent color, direction, its portrayals and its musical score. It does not, however, add anything to the religious scene that has not been observed dozens of times previously in other films made about the same subject.

SAY HELLO to Larry Cohen, who at 28 is now one of the most wanted writers in the teevee industry. According to Hank Grant, of the Hollywood Reporter, Cohen wrote his first teevee play, "Night Cry" for Kraft Theater at 22. It served incidentally as the television debut of another Jewish artist, Peter Falk.

Cohen wrote "Branded," Chuck Connor's new series and, with Herbert Brodtkin, has written "Coronet Blue," firmed for a fall '65 start by CBS-TV, said Grant.

He also has two other series creations with excellent network consideration, namely "The Invaders," first science-fiction series with a running theme and continuing star, and "The Survivor," western allegory.
