Frankfurter

en, other members of the Supreme Court, leaders of both houses of Congress, and Zionist and other Jewish leaders in this country and abroad.

The son of a poor Jewish immigrant who descended from six generations of rabbis and scholars, young Felix grew up on the Lower East Side of New York. While attending public school, he helped the family by selling newspapers and doing odd jobs. He later graduated with honors from City College of New York at 19, and worked as a clerk for the New York Tenement House Commission, saving his income to be able to enroll in the Harvard Law School, from which he graduated in 1906 as an honor student and editor of the Law Review.

In 1914, he was appointed a member of the faculty of the Harvard Law School on the recommendation of Louis D. Brandeis, then an eminent attorney and later an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Frankfurter's record as a legal genius and later, as a great teacher, attracted the attention of President Taft and later of President Wilson. He was sent on important missions abroad by Wilson's Secretary of State Robert Lansing.

When the Versailles Peace Conference was held in 1919, Frankfurter was the legal adviser to the Zionist delegation there. He engaged in correspondence with Emir Feisal, who headed the Arab delegation at that Conference and later became the King of Iraq. This resulted in the writing by Feisal of an important letter to Frankfurter, on March 3, 1919, which became a historic document. The Arab ruler said in his letter to Mr. Frankfurter:

"We Arabs, especially the educated among us, look with the deepest sympathy on the Zionist movement. Our deputation here in Paris is fully acquainted with the proposals submitted by the Zionist Organization to the Peace Conference, and we regard them as moderate and proper. We will do our best, in so far as we are concerned, to help them through: we will wish the Jews a most hearty welcome home.

"With the chiefs of your movement, especially with Dr. Weizmann we have had and continue to have the closest relations. He has been a great helper of our cause, and I hope the Arabs may soon be in a position to make the Jews some return for their kindness. We are working together for a reformed and revived Near East, and our two movements complete one another. The Jewish movement is national and not imperialist. Our movement is national and not imperialist, and there is room in Syria for us

Protest Arms Stoppage

LONDON, (JTA) -- Fresh protests against West Germany's cancellation of arms shipments to Israel were voiced in various countries.

The Board of Deputies of British Jews adopted a resolution deploring the decision of the West German Government "to surrender to Nasser's terms and to terminate the agreement for security aid to Israel essential for the country's defense."

"For the Bonn authorities to be prepared to imperil the vital interests of Israel threatened with annihilation, and whose population includes many survivors of the Nazi holocaust---and for Israel to be treated as a mere pawn in the current policy of West and East Germany is an affront to the conscience of mankind," the resolution declared. It added that the Bonn policy, if carried out, "would be a breach of faith and a shortsighted act of appeasement, with possible serious consequences for the peace of the Middle East."

The resolution expressed the hope that "the democratic forces in Germany will induce their Government to reconsider the consequences of abject surrender to blackmail and of the precipitate action which has shocked the Jewish people and general public opinion in many parts of the world."

Israeli President Lauds Frankfurter

JERUSALEM, (JTA) --- President Zalman Shazar paid tribute this week to Felix Frankfurter, recalling the late former Supreme Court Justice's work for the Zionist movement and his "considerable political aid" to Israel in "its most difficult hour." President Shazar made the tribute at a farewell reception for Supreme Court Justice Yitzhak Olshan who has reached the ment age of 70. Justice Olshan recalled that in 1948, when the Israel Supreme Court issued its first ruling, Justice Frankfurter asked for the complete text of the judgment and later praised it as an example of jurisprudence.

both. Indeed I think that neither can be a real success without the other."

For nearly 45 years, the authenticity of that statement by Emir Feisal was disputed by Arab leaders. Two months ago, the original of that Feisal letter to Frankfurter was discovered in the files of the Jewish Agency offices in London. Frankfurter had been with the Brandeis-Mack leadership inside the Zionist Organization of America, although he resigned from that group later when he disagreed with some of the Brandeis-Mack policies.

Egypt on the arms to Israel suspension.
