

Barney Glazer's "HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE"

Things we learned from David Ewen's "America's Popular Songs: From the Revolutionary War to the Present" (Random House): Irving Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band" is a march tune, not ragtime... Barney Rapp renamed Doris Kappeloff after she auditioned for his band by singing "Day after Day," thus, Doris Day... Fanny Rose Shore renamed herself Dinah Shore after singing "Dinah" in her first radio appearance in Nashville, Tenn.

Lyricist Gus Kahn wrote "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby" while watching Eddie Cantor's five-year-old Margie playing with a mechanical pig toy. Said Kahn later, "Imagine a Jewish boy writing a hit tune's lyrics about a trayfeh pig."

JACK BENNY objects to the word "specials" for his television shows. "To me," said Jack, "a special is when coffee goes from 89 to 59 cents a pound."

ISRAEL'S most successful movie? "Sallah." To date, it has sold enough tickets to equal half of Israel's population... Joey Bishop tuned up for his ABC-TV late show debut in April with this comment, "I alone am responsible for Sammy Davis, Jr.'s conversion to Judaism. Now, Sammy wants me to turn colored."

Continued Bishop, "When Sammy first attended schul, he listened to the cantor sing and then jumped up and shouted, 'One more time!' ... Sammy told me 'Joey, I have to run along. I'll see you in the synagogue Friday night. I'll be in the third row.'" Bishop replied, "Anytime I can't see you in a synagogue!"

REPORTS that L.A.'s Jewish population is slowly creeping up on N.Y. are unfounded, according to Thomas H. Johnson's "The Oxford Companion to American History" (Oxford University Press.) As of 1965, L.A. has 435,000, far behind N.Y.'s 1,836,000. Then, Philadelphia, 330,000; Chicago, 285,000; Boston, 160,000, Newark, 100,000.

The same volume credits Carl Laemmle with the 1907 creation of Hollywood's star system, now almost defunct, and Louis B. Mayer with the conversion of show business to big business.

WRITER Milt Josefsberg once wrote a situation into a Lucy television show, explaining that Lucille Ball was fired from her book department show because she sold a copy of "How to Be a Jewish Mother" to a nun. Milt revealed that he later deleted the line, fearing it would draw adverse criticism from both Catholics and Jews.

BILLY ROSE'S body still lies in a vault in Westchester Hills (N.Y.) Cemetery since his Feb. 10, 1966 death at his Montego Bay, Jamaica, West Indies estate. Family suits over Billy's will have delayed his interment.

Billy was born Rosenbloom on N.Y.'s East Side. The man whose family was so poor that frequently he and his two younger sisters often went to bed without dinner, singlehandedly fought his way into the multi-millionaire class.

TONY MARTIN, JR. will always remember his bar mitzvah party. His celebrated father took Junior and six buddies to Reno, Nevada, to celebrate his today-I-am-a-man party.

MARTY INGELS will never forget the time he received a rave review for his summer theater appearance in "Guys and Dolls." Said Marty, "The review appeared in The Christian Science Monitor. What more could a Jewish boy ask?"

WHATEVER happened to all those movies Eddie Fisher announced he would produce? Nothing!... And why hasn't Molly Picon carried out her plans to star in a television series as a shah-ken, our traditional marriage broker?... Promises, promises!

Letter from Joey Bishop, who starts his own late show on ABC-TV in April in competition with Johnny Carson, "Happy Hanukkah. P.S. If Hanukkah isn't spelled right, try to understand. My secretary is Italian". Mickey Katz 55, mighty mite of show-business at 5' 4" and 140 pounds, is celebrating his 41st year in showbiz.
