PROFILES

by Percy Villa

No "Profile" column today.

Percy is in Washington D.C. to attend Histradut's affair honoring U.S. Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

On his way back Percy will stop off to visit families of his two married children. In Cleveland Percy will stay with his son Herbert, a prominent attorney, and his daughter - in - law Susan. We probably will hear a full report on Percy's granddaughter Gina.

His next stop will be with his daughter Carol and son-in-law Jerry Sellinger in Carbondale. Percy will return tomorrow (Saturday).

(Editor's note: We hope Percy does not act like a silly granddad and tell us all about Gina) In case he does, we now render a full report on Michele, J.T.)

Michele Tell, who is 10 weeks, 4 days old today (Friday, May 12) is tipping the scales at 11 pounds, 14 ounces, which means she is picking up about a 1/2 pound a week.

Let's face it. The brat is a blubber. She'll eat anything, especially the licorice stick and chocolate bar we let her suck on when mama Reta and Grandma Bea were not looking.

Next to eating, Michele likes her bath up to her neck in the warm water she smiles and coos, while kicking her feet to stay afloat. Next week she goes into her own crib in a room with sister Bonnie.

We know our readers can't hold their breath to hear the next episode in the life of Michele, but they'll have to wait.

7. Attend services on High Holydays, are listed in that order.

They are traditions of our Faith and should be observed when circumstances make it possible. Being Kosher and marrying a Jew are part of our heritage and will resolve themselves from the extent of the basic background instilled by our parents. Attending services once a year is not nearly as important as visiting the synagogue as often as possible during the other 52 weeks.

9. Gain respect of Christian neighbors is reputable providing it is not done with loss of respect from your fellow Jews.

12. Work for civil rights. As members of a minority, we sympathize with all others who seek equal status as a human being. Judaism is a religion of brotherhood to all mankind.
