AT FOX THEATRE
 "Two for the Road," the Stanley Donen production for 20th Century-Fox release, is set to open on Wednesday at the Fox Theatre. Two of the screen's most talented and popular stars -- Audrey Hepburn and Albert Finney -- head the cast of this unusual romantic comedy which was filmed in Panavision and Deluxe Color on location ranging from the French Riviera northward to Paris and beyond.

Frederic Raphael, winner of the Oscar and the British Film Academy Award for his screenplay of "Darling," wrote the screenplay for "Two for the Road." It has been described as a "brilliant script -- an anatomy of modern marriage, covering twelve years in the lives of two characters of unforgettable charm, humor and humanity. Whether on the peaks of passion or in the vales of mutual despair, their relationship is never less than explosive."

Donen served both as producer and as director of the film, making the third time he has worked with Audrey Hepburn. The two previous pictures were "Funny Face" and "Charade." Award-winning composer Henry Mancini wrote the score, which has been recorded by RCA-Victor.
