NEW SCIENTIFIC INDUSTRY IN LAS VEGAS

One of Nevada's newest and most important industries in the State of Nevada is General Scientific Laboratories with home offices and laboratory facilities at 3177 South Highland Drive, Las Vegas.

Since its inception, it has been engaged in a number of research and development projects aimed toward introduction of new product lines. All products will utilize the advanced technology of the staff of General Scientific Laboratories in the field of sciences and engineering development. In addition to internal activities in production development and marketing, General Scientific Laboratories, Inc. has acquired the rights and licenses for the manufacturing and marketing of products developed by other companies or individuals. Among the many projects being researched are a portable muscle stimulator, a system for airfield ground traffic control and a new type of tire valve which indicates abnormal air pressure. Research is under-way in the developing of a line of pharmaceuticals which will be ready for manufacturing and marketing to supply houses and retail outlets.

Negotiations are currently under-way with agencies of the Central American Country of El Salvador. For the construction and operation of a pharmaceutical plant. This plant will supply products to countries of the Central America common market and will also be engaged in world export.

Additional areas of negotiations are presently under-way with Training Weapons, Inc. and Celestronics, Inc. of Long Beach, California.
