as quickly as possible. What has happened in one year in these two areas alone is nothing short of a miracle. Discriminatory policies employed by the former occupiers, Jordan and Egypt, have now totally disappeared. In all the conquered areas Israel's policy has been not to interfere with local authority, but to cooperate constructively to help resumption of normal living. Contrary to propaganda reports, Israeli Arabs have not been oppressed, but continue to live as free citizens in a free democratic country.

Whatever problems still exist are instigated and carried on from the outside, from across Israel's borders. The Arab population in Israel has come to realize that the word "Israel" is no longer to be used to exploit hatred, but that it is in reality the name of the country in which they can live in peace and harmony. The terrorists are not local inhabitants. In fact, local population disassociates itself from the intruders. The government of Israel strives to insure normal civilian life, far from the threat of violence and bloodshed. All commercial, agricultural and educational facilities are being developed and expanded on a broader base than ever before.

I honestly believe that the Arab rulers are no longer concerned with the fact that Israel won the war. The "bone in the throat" is the fact that Israel's control has proven beyond a doubt that Israelis and Arabs can live together, work together and even respect each other. Arab authorities in Israel continue to function without interference. Schools and public services are operating normally and under a protective blanket of Israel security.

But, notwithstanding these facts, the Middle East still seems to be on the threshold of yet another war. This is the real tragedy of it all. The Arab nations have pursued their objectives in complete defiance and utter disregard for the United Nations and world opinions. Israel has always been ready to establish a meaningful and lasting peace. It wants only to live at peace with its neighbors. But, Israel is a sovereign state among the nations of the world and will maintain its right to take all necessary measures to defend itself from its enemies and protect its territory and its population.

I hope and pray that the Arab states will finally accept the inevitable and work out a peaceful settlement with Israel, the terms of which will insure the sovereignty and safety of all the nations in the Middle East. Eventually, it must be so. God Willing, it will happen very soon.

destroys any possible illusion about Egyptian moderation." Nasser's policy, Mr. Eban went on, "is to have an new war in the Middle East for the purpose of bringing about Israel's complete liquidation -- he is against peace, against agreement, against negotiation, against the recognition of Israel."

This development, the Foreign Minister added, "strengthens Israel's duty and resolves to maintain the conditions necessary for its security until such time as UAR policy undergoes a complete transformation." Apart from its significance in the Arab-Israel world, Mr. Eban noted, "the speech is notable for its complete subordination to the policies of a foreign great power and for its efforts to stir up new tensions in the relations between the great powers."
