

OF THE STARS' ★

some time. All this has brought a new lease upon life to Harold and now it is just like old times. The last film he was in was with Henry Fonda in "Man Who Understood Women." He has also had eight appearances on the popular TV series "The Rifleman." Harold, or Renard if you wish, says "It's nice to be back in action again. I was a good friend to the late Humphrey Bogart, and when he passed away things were a little slow for me in the film making business." The movie, "Where It's At", starring David Janssen, is being filmed almost daily at Caesars Palace.

Harold says: "I owe everything to my good friend Jerry Zarowitz, who brought me to Las Vegas and has made me very happy with my job at the casino. But I'm still interested in doing films and hope I land a few more roles."

All this can happen in the best city of them all—Las Vegas to a man who deserves every break. The best to you Harold.
