

Barney Glazer's 'HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE'

I wanna say something about Bobby Morse and his work in the tv show "That's Life" on ABC, and I wanna say it loud and clear. This Boston kid has endeared himself to me for the rest of my life and if that's life, as he depicts it, I'm all for living it.

I have never seen any other star on the stage, in movies or in television go around as Bobby does making every other member of the cast, including the lowliest extra, think that he and she is the real star. The way Bobby hugs and kisses the other kids seems to indicate that it's a reflection of the way his parents undoubtedly hugged and kissed him. If they spoiled Bobby, let's all spoil our kids the same way.

To Bobby Morse, that's life: showing your love for others, giving the other person the respect coming to him, ducking vanity and pedantry. He didn't only hug and kiss other performers when they started their act but he repeated it when they finished it. And Bobby wasn't acting. It was easy to observe he meant it. He looked into the performers' eyes the way Yolanda used to look into Veloz' eyes, giving the audience the feeling she worshipped him, which was 50% of their act. I don't think that Veloz was getting the affection Yolanda displayed, because she wound up divorcing him and splitting up the famous dance act.

But I don't have any doubts about Bobby Morse. He means it. The naches that he spreads around is as wonderfully sweet as the honey on taiglech and would that other stars, who are carried away by their importance, abandon their vain-glory and make life for supporting cast members as pleasurable as Bobby Morse is doing.

Bobby, listen... listen, you hear!... God Bless. SEPHARDIC Jew Enrico Macias is touring the country in singing concert. The dark, handsome young performer is an Algerian-French emigre who sings mostly in French, a bit in Spanish and some in English and Hebrew.

IRV GOODMAN, the famed Benny Goodman's brother, recorded a zany novelty of Col. Bogey's march but dip the flipside, "Hava Salami" with accompaniment by the Kosher-Nostra Band.

ARTE JOHNSON, that little guy who says, "VERrry IN-teresting!" while peering out from beneath his German helmet on the Laugh-In show, received many complaints when he used the word "klutz." It sounded dirty, said the viewers, and we know they couldn't have been Jewish because the word simply means "oaf."

THIS COLUMN'S belated sympathy goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Goodfriend and family on the passing of Bob's mother, Mollie, 80, who lived a full and beautiful life surrounded by her loving children and grandchildren and great grandchildren. Bob and his wife, Ruth, are this column's most cherished friends. He is the Paramount Studio Publicity Director and I'd love the guy even if he was the studio messenger boy, which he often thinks he is.

JOEY Bishop's entourage for Vietnam included Mel Bishop, who, with Joey and Rummy Bishop, worked vaudeville and nightclubs as The Bishop Brothers. Mel now assists Joey's tv show coordination, while Rummy, still playing nighterries in the east, has never appeared on the Bishop tv show. Mel briefly made a couple of appearances.

ON THE walls of its showroom entrance-corridor, the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel in South Tahoe, Nevada, displays baby pictures of famous stars. Cutest and cuddliest is infant Buddy Hackett, who hasn't changed an iota and you don't see that kind of face on babies anymore.
